[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—In a showdown vote that several of their own number characterized as a mistaken piece of strategy, the senate wets went down to defeat today, more than three to one.

It was, perhaps, the nearest to an out and out test of wet and dry strength that has been held in the senate in the twelve years since prohibition became law.

The vote was taken on the resolution introduced by Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], which stated that the senate "would welcome" any action taken by the governors of the several states to initiate state referenda on the repeal or modification of the 18th amendment and Volstead act.

When the roll call was concluded the wets could show only 15 "yea" votes and three senators paired affirmatively. While the opponents of the resolution piled up 55 votes, three senators paired affirmatively, and three additional senators paired and announced that they would have voted "nay."

Calls Resolution "Silly."

The feelings of a good proportion of the wets were summed in the statement of Senator Robert J. Bulkley, wet Democrat of Ohio, who declared:

"The resolution was silly and of no importance. It would have meant nothing if it had been adopted. I sometimes resent things that the newspapers and stage comedians say about the senate. But when I see performances like this—on the part of the wets and drys alike—I feel that senators ought to have some patience with such criticism."

Another wet senator, David I. Walsh [Dem., Mass.], gloomily predicted that the result of the vote would be flaunted all over the country by the drys.

Issue Avoided, Lewis Says.

A third wet senator, J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, spoke his piece during the debate preceding the vote and denounced the resolution as one of those expressions beloved by certain members of congress because they avoided the direct issue of repeal.

"I regret that we are in any era which seems to be marked by a form of cowardice on the part of the public servants," he declared. "All the more I deplore the shifting evasion which invariably occupies the minds and directs the condition on the part of public servants, particularly eminent officials in the congressional halls of my country in order that they may escape responsibility for an opinion of their own, a judgment of their own, or an action of their own. They seek refuge here and there for direction from other people and other persons under which they make shelter for their decision."

The vote of every man, woman, and child in this country ordering him to vote in a designated manner would not influence his action if it violated his constitutional conscience, he added.

Substitute Ruled Out.

Senator Millard Tydings [Dem., Md.] still another wet, attempted to come to the rescue by offering as a substitute for Senator Bingham's resolution one calling for a constitutional amendment returning prohibition control to the states. But his motion was ruled out of order by Vice President Curtis.

CALL 800 UNION CHIEFS TO HEAR RAIL PLEA TODAY

Willard to Ask Pay Cut at Meeting.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

The case of the American railways for a 10 per cent wage cut will be argued this morning by their chief advocate, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, before a general meeting of some 800 representatives of the railroad unions.

Mr. Willard yesterday told a select committee of the union men, including their chief executives, that the railroads are in dire financial straits, that many of them are facing bankruptcy, and he cited statistics on earnings and expenses to support his plea for the employés to accept the cut.

He will retell his story at the general meeting today, and will also outline the railroads' last stand on the unemployment and stabilization problems which have troubled the labor forces, and in which labor asked the railway managements for help.

Unions to Consider Decision.

After Mr. Willard's address the labor forces will break up into meetings of the individual brotherhoods, at which the union men will decide whether they will take the cut voluntarily or will turn it down and take their chances th the legal process of mediation and arbitration prescribed in the federal railway labor act.

David B. Robertson, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association, said last night that he could not tell when the labor forces will have agreed on their decision. It might be tomorrow, he said, but he regarded it as more likely that the end of the negotiations will not be sighted before Sunday or Monday.

Many guesses as to the outcome were being made yesterday. An air of confidence pervaded the Willard camp.

Labor Prepares Reply.

Union leaders said the decision was up to the general chairmen who will listen to Mr. Willard today. Some observers saw in the mere fact that the railroad leader had been asked to talk to the general chairmen an indication that the cut would be accepted.

High union officials said, however, that the matter was undecided, and they went ahead preparing a statement to answer Mr. Willard's sumup of the railroads' financial plight.

The union leaders pointed out from the Willard statement that in 1931 the railroads paid their fixed charges and had $89,000,000 left over. The labor men are expected to include in their answer several other figures which they say favor the railroads, including $125,000,000 additional from increased freight rates, and an estimated borrowing power of $100,000,000 from the new national reconstruction finance corporation.

These three sums total $314,000,000, and the labor leaders pointed out that if a 10 per cent wage cut were granted, resulting in another saving of $215,000,000, the railroads would have $529,000,000 over and above their fixed charges and operating costs. The labor men will ask, so they say, if such a setup makes a wage cut absolutely necessary.

May Take Separate Actions.

In some circles yesterday it was considered possible that some of the brotherhoods would accept the 10 per cent cut, but that there would be general opposition to cutting other branches, particularly those in the lower wage brackets.

As for the union's relief program, Mr. Willard notified the labor committee that his committee would enter into an agreement to carry out, so far as is practicable, a plan to insure steady employment to a fixed number of workers.

Mr. Willard assured the union men that the railroads would act in good faith and that his committee would work out a plan whereby misunderstandings on any individual line could be ironed out to the satisfaction of the workers. It is believed the unions find this plan acceptable.

This issue was the principal plea of the unions, coupled with a request that the roads enter into a joint investigation of the feasibility of the 6 hour day. On the latter point the presidents yesterday gave their final answer that they would not agree.

Statement by Willard.

Mr. Willard's statement to the unions included the following:

"Total railway earnings in 1929 were $6,350,000,000; in 1930, $5,343,000,000; and in 1931, $4,259,000,000—a reduction in 1931 as compared with 1930 of $1,084,000,000, and a reduction in 1931 as compared with 1929 of $2,100,000,000.

Trunk Slayer Rages Against State Alienist

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Winnie Ruth Judd's temper flamed today just as the state of Arizona began the parade of witnesses with which it expects to convict her of the "trunk murders" of her best friends.

As Dr. Joseph Catton, San Francisco state alienist, strolled into the courtroom Mrs. Judd leaped from her place beside defense counsel.

"Get him away from me" she demanded, and whirling again to confront Dr. Catton she accused:

"You said you wouldn't talk about me; you've been telling everything you know in the poolrooms."

He Goes Away.

Dr. Catton smiled, turned on his heel and walked into the corridor.

It was the first time emotion has crossed the self-confessed slayer's face in public.

Jurors stepped back into the courtroom from a brief recess seconds too late to see the incident. As they filed back in the box Mrs. Judd resumed the blank expression with which she has heard witnesses lay the foundation of the state's case.

Two of them, close neighbors to the "murder cottage," testified that at 10:30 o'clock on the night of Oct. 16 they heard three shots nearby. Both said they looked at the home of Hedvig Samuelson and Agnes Anne Le Roi and saw no lights.

Tell of Hearing Shots.

Those shots, heard by Jennie McGrath, aged widow, and Gene S. Cunningham, attorney, killed the two pretty women, the state contends. Mrs. Judd has insisted she killed in self-defense during a quarrel early the next morning.

Evelyn Nace, secretary of the clinic in which Mrs. Judd and Mrs. Le Roi were employed, testified she left the home of the two women at 9:45 p. m. on Oct. 16.

B. W. Juggemeier, operator of a one-man trolley, followed with the assertion that on the same night Mrs. Judd twice was a passenger on his car, leaving it at the street nearest the Le Roi-Samuelson home at 9:55 and taking it again at 11:25 p. m.

The next group of witnesses began the story, chapter by chapter, of the travels of the trunks in which Mrs. Judd shipped the bodies of her friends to Los Angeles as baggage.

Richard Schwartz, expressman, told of taking from the woman's home at Mrs. Judd's direction a trunk too heavy to be checked as baggage. Informing her of this, Schwartz said he was told to take it to Mrs. Judd's "sister's" apartment, which was identified, subsequently, as her own.

H. V. Grimm, owner of the apartment, told of taking Mrs. Judd's two trunks, hat box, suitcase, and bag to the Union station here on Sunday, Oct. 18.

The state contends that between Saturday, when Schwartz transferred the one trunk, and Sunday afternoon Mrs. Judd dismembered Miss Samuelson's body, distributing the parts among the luggage.

Insinuating again the suggestion of an accomplice, Defense Attorney Herman Lewkowitz obtained the admission from Schwartz that he had tried to lift and move the trunk in the murder cottage and found it too heavy to budge.

Baggagemen Beverly Stallings and Avis W. Butchee brought the day to close with their accounts of checking Mrs. Judd's trunks to Los Angeles on her ticket.

O. K. Bill to Help Alien Husbands to Get Into U. S.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Legislation to make it easier for American women to bring their alien husbands into this country was approved today by the house immigration committee. It reported favorably a bill by Chairman Dickstein [Dem., N. Y.] to permit the women to post $1,000 bond as a guarantee that a relative entering the United States would not become a public charge.

Tries Suicide; Gas Explodes; Two Burned

A mother's attempt to commit suicide early this morning resulted in a terrific explosion of gas in a second floor apartment at 937 Oakdale avenue in which the woman and her young daughter were severely burned. The blast routed tenants from 30 other apartments and roused the neighborhood for several blocks around.

The injured woman, Mrs. Matilda Henchert, 36 years old, and Minnie, the daughter, 13 years old, were taken to the Illinois Masonic hospital. Mrs. Henchert suffered serious burns and is in a critical condition. The mother and daughter were carried out by firemen working under Chief Alvin Brandt of the 13th battalion and Capt. Joseph Deichman.

Admits Suicide Attempt.

At the hospital Mrs. Henchert confessed to the police that she had turned on the gas in the kitchen with the intention of ending her life, following a quarrel with a friend. She gave his name as Carl Steinert, 6234 South Winchester avenue. Her husband is in an asylum in Austria. Mrs. Henchert said she sent her daughter to bed, went to the kitchen and opened the gas burners, then lay down on her own bed. In a short time she said she became frightened, hurried back to the kitchen and turned off the gas. Just then the explosion occurred. Minnie told the police that her mother had turned on the gas three different times during the evening and she had turned them off.

Neighbor Warns Occupants.

Meantime, Patrick Newland and his wife, Josephine, had returned to their apartment in the building and had smelled gas. They hurried to more than a dozen apartments, warning their neighbors, and then summoned the fire department. At about that time the building was rocked by the explosion. Lieut. Stephen Barry, who conducted an investigation, was of the opinion that a spark from an electric bell which Newland had rung ignited the gas. The loss was estimated at $2,000.

It was 15.8 births per 1,000 of population, which is 0.5 per 1,000 below the previous lowest figure, recorded in 1929-'30. The death rate was 12.3 per 1,000, which is 0.9 above 1930.

Red Rebellion Flares in Spain; Troops on Way

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Jan. 22 [Friday].—Troops of the Spanish republic pushed up the rich valleys of Catalonia last night to choke off an anarchist-communist revolt that raised red or black flags in more than a half dozen towns.

Infantry, cavalry and artillery, numbering 2,500 men, reached Manresa, an industrial town in the center of the outbreak, last night. They will continue up the valley this morning under orders from Madrid to crush all signs of rebellion at "any cost."

Many Towns Held by Reds

It appeared that not only Manresa, but the towns of Berga, Cardona, Figols, Suria, Salient, and others in a radius of 50 miles were in control of anarchists and communists.

A social revolution was proclaimed in lurid handbills throughout the region yesterday by anarchal-syndicalist elements allied with their enemies, the communists. They called themselves communist libertarians

Twenty-five thousand workmen in coal and potash mines and factories walked out. They took over city halls, hoisting either black or red flags, chased civil guards into their barracks, cut telephone wires, tore up railway tracks, seized a dynamite factory in Salient, derailed a train and called on the rest of Spain to rise.

Nation Aroused Against Move.

The country did rise, but in support of the government. Apprehensions of a nationwide plot aroused the feeling of all classes against the extremists. Enemies forgot their differences in the cortes, authorizing the government to stamp out the rebellion in any way it liked.

Troops were dispatched immediately from Gerona, Barbastro and Lerida and civil guards were sent from Saragossa. None were sent from Barcelona, capital of Catalonia, because a ruse of the rebels to weaken the garrisons there was feared.

The only casualties reported thus far are two civil guards, wounded at Manresa, and two more at Bergua, when some one threw two packages of dynamite into their midst. Two nuns at Suria are reported to have barely escaped the communist libertarian firing squad.

Seize Arms from Police.

During the day rebels seized arms from local police and retired to the mines and factories. At Figols 700 miners are reported to be fortified under red flags. At Berga 400 miners are entrenched.

Syndicalist leaders, meeting at Barcelona last night to consider their attitude toward the movement, were seized by police and will be deported, along with other suspects. Before their arrest the syndicalists called a revolutionary general strike for today.

"These are not strikers. They are rebels. As soon as I heard of it I got the general of the fourth division in Catalonia on the phone. I told him to take the necessary forces and get them under way within an hour. I told him to tell their commander that he has just fifteen minutes after his arrival at Manresa to finish the whole business."

OPERATE OR LET DEFECTIVE DIE? DOCTORS PONDER

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Four physicians were faced today with the problem of deciding whether to attempt a major operation on a 2 year old Brooklyn baby whose head cavity is too small for normal growth of the brain.

Without an operation they said the child probably will die. On the other hand, an operation might save the child only for a "life of misery."

The third chance is that the operation, which entails opening the rear part of the skull, might be successful and restore the child to normalcy.

The physicians who met in consultation were Drs. Oscar Agnew Spier, Felix Hoffman, Lester C. Spier, and Mortimer H. Lewis. The baby's name is revealed only as "Diana."

In Chicago seventeen years ago Dr. Harry J. Haiselden was faced with a similar problem. With the parents' consent he permitted the child to die, saying it was the "most merciful thing to do," and aroused a storm of criticism.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Politics is to be thrust aside in the selection of the three Cook county taxing officials provided for by the Kelly plan. The senate this morning concurred by the unanimous vote of all present—35 to 0—in the amendments added to the reorganization bill by the house, which passed it last night by a vote of 115 to 30. All it requires now for enactment is the signature of Gov. Emmerson, who was one of the sponsors of the plan.

With the certainty of his approval acknowledged, taken for granted unless the unforeseen develops, the next question that arose concerned the personnel to be appointed under the provision of the bill. And on that subject definite information was obtained.

Two Critical Points.

That covered two important points, as follows:

1. Another conference similar to the Stevens hotel conference of Gov. Emmerson, Mayor Cermak, President Whealan of the county board, civic leaders and legislators—in other words, another Kelly conference—will be called to nominate the assessor and the two members of the board of appeals who are to be appointed by Gov. Emmerson and President Whealan.

2. Gov. Emmerson will not sign the Kelly bill until there is an agreement upon appointees which he is satisfied will meet the purpose of the bill—the restoration of public confidence in the taxing machinery. Mayor Cermak is in complete accord with this position.

A third item might be included in this list—the fact that Mayor Cermak said today that he would like to see a man like Edward N. Hurley named as one of the new officials.

Cermak Returns to Chicago.

The Chicago mayor remained here long enough to see final action taken by the senate and then hurried to a train that would take him back to his city hall desk. Before he left, however, he had a brief talk with Gov. Emmerson and made arrangements to meet him in Chicago within the next few days—the date not announced—and again expressed his thanks to the assembly for disregarding political attacks on the Kelly plan bill.

"Chicago has won the first ground in its big fight for financial salvation," he went on, "but complete public confidence, not only locally but throughout the world, can be restored only by the appointment of the right sort of men as our new taxing officials. If that does not follow there is danger that, instead of arousing confidence, the last shred of it might be destroyed.

"Politics should not play any part in this crisis. I am sorry that President Whealan is sick—not only sorry for him as a friend but because we may not be able to take up with him immediately the subject of appointments. But I know him well and know that when he is able to act he will be with us as he has been all through this struggle to get back on our feet.

Want Man Such as Hurley.

"President Whealan is to appoint one member of the board of appeals. Gov. Emmerson is to appoint the other. The governor and President Whealan are to agree on the one assessor to be named. I have no doubt that appointments will be of the kind that will carry out the purpose of this program—the restoration of Chicago's credit so that government may carry out its obligations to the citizens and the citizens fulfill their duty to government, that of paying their taxes.

"If I am consulted in this situation—and, frankly, I hope that I shall be—I should urge the appointment of a man like Edward N. Hurley as one of the new officials.

"I say 'like Hurley' because I feel that he would not accept an appointment. He is doing great work for Chicago in connection with the two national conventions. He is so determined that Chicago do its full duty as host to the two great parties that he will be occupied with it all spring and all summer. That is enough for one man no matter what his caliber.

"But my thought is that the type of men we need now is the Hurley type. He is known throughout the nation. The appointment of men like that as our taxing officials would restore Chicago and Cook county to good standing in a financial way throughout the world."

Gov. Emmerson, who has been under the weather slightly, was not available to interviewers today, but it is known that he favors the plan of having nominations made by another Kelly conference.

This attitude on his part is believed to have spelled an end to pressure upon him to make his appointments on a political basis. There have been rumors that George F. Harding, President W. R. James of the west park board, and Sheldon Clark, a Lincoln park board member, are candidates for his choice as a member of the board of appeals.

On the Democratic side the only report generally circulated has been that Edward J. Hughes, elected only last year as a board of review member and not charged with any of the shortcomings of that body, might be President Whealan's appointee. That has not been completely discounted by reports of the nonpolitical tendencies today. It is believed possible that Hughes might be agreed upon by the new Kelly conference.

Further proof that there was no deal between downstate and Chicago for the passage of the Kelly bill was seen today when Homer J. Tice, sponsor of the income tax bill, was one of the leaders in the movement for a recess until Feb. 2. The backers of the proposed new tax admit privately they haven't the votes to pass their bill now.

DISTRIBUTE PAY EQUALLY TO ALL, MAYOR'S ORDER

All city employés, including the school teachers, should have an equal share in all cash available for pay roll purposes, regardless of whether the cash is in the fund from which they are paid normally, Mayor Cermak said yesterday upon his return from Springfield.

Earlier in the day, by a long distance telephone call, he attempted unsuccessfully to halt payment of $580,000 in salaries for half a month to city employés paid from the vehicle tax and water funds. Ninety per cent of the pay checks had been distributed when Controller Szymczak received the mayor's orders, so he completed the distribution.

The mayor explained that he wanted the pay rolls held up until he had an opportunity to survey the situation as a whole. The checks paid the vehicle and water fund employés up to Dec. 24. Police, firemen and most other employés paid from the corporate fund have been paid to Dec. 15.

"I don't think it fair to pay just those in the water and vehicle tax departments because the money happened to be collected in those funds," Mayor Cermak said. "The money should be distributed equitably. The school teachers shouldn't be left out. I shall endeavor to keep all employés paid up to the same date, using such funds as are available."

HUSBAND MUST MARRY AS WIFE GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Emma Littlejohn, 2455 Wilcox street, won a divorce yesterday before Judge Harry B. Miller in the Superior court, and also won the judge's promise to marry her husband to another woman.

"Your honor," she said, "please don't sign that decree until my husband agrees to marry the other woman and give his name to the two children she has had by him."

Judge Miller agreed. He withheld his signature from the decree until tomorrow noon and ordered that the husband, James Littlejohn, 550 North Cicero avenue, and the other woman be in his chambers at that time. He will marry them as soon as he signs the decree, he said.

Des Plaines City Employes Have First Payless Pay Day

Yesterday, nominally was pay day for municipal employés in Des Plaines. But only those working in the water department were paid. They received their salaries because the water department of the village is self sustaining and does not depend on taxation. Policemen, firemen and other employés were unpaid because there were no funds to pay with. Until now Des Plaines has been able to meet all its pay rolls. Chief of Police Christ Wegner urged all residents to purchase their vehicle licenses for 1932 at once to provide money for salaries.

Bankers Expect Tax Relief Program to Require Months

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The Kelly plan was overwhelmingly adopted by the legislature. Now that has been accomplished the questions which officials and employés of the local governments are asking are these: When will the local governments get out of their financial difficulties? When will regular pay days be resumed for the 47,000 employés of the seven major units? When will supply men, contractors, and other current creditors be paid?

The answers may be found in the opinions of a number of banks and investment houses whose representatives consented to talk freely yesterday without quotation.

No Sudden Resumption.

It will be "a long time," "quite a spell," or "an indefinite period,"—depending upon which banker was phrasing it—before the local governments get on the road to recovery. In their opinion the local governments will be hard pressed for cash for several months, even if the Kelly plan works out as well as its most ardent advocates anticipate.

It seemed to be the general opinion that public officials will consider it advisable to pay employés before other creditors.

There is some hope that fragmentary and irregular pay days—on a limited scale—may be started again soon, but that is still in the stage of hope.

Hope Taxpayers Will Pay Now.

The hope lies in the possibility that property owners will be persuaded to pay taxes. D. F. Kelly, who headed a committee to get large taxpayers to invest in 1930 tax anticipation warrants in order that public employés might be paid, said yesterday that he feels that the property owners will now be willing to help out the governmental agencies. The Schnackenberg bill, which it now seems the legislature will adopt, will prevent loss to a taxpayer who pays too much. This bill provides that if a property owner has paid too much on his 1928 or 1929 taxes, he must be given credit on subsequent taxes for the excess payment.

The taxes for those two years have been declared void and illegal by County Judge Jarecki and Judge Williams has ordered the 1930 taxes reassessed. The state Supreme court will review both decisions.

Must Meet Obligations.

All of the money gathered in probably could not be used for pay rolls. The local governments have $53,308,000 in bonds and interest which are payable this year. To improve their credit, those obligations must be met, if the governments desire to keep off the blacklist of large investors. Those are the conditions which led the bankers to forecast that pay rolls will be fragmentary and irregular for some time, even if the taxpayers voluntarily come to the rescue.

The Kelly plan, which replaces the present elective boards of assessment and review with a single appointive assessor and two appointive reviewers, increases the power of the assessor and decreases the authority of the reviewers. The sponsors of the plan have argued for months that it promises more equitable assessment.

They admit that is only a step in the solution of the financial troubles of the city, county, and other governments. The bankers never promised to loan any money if the plan was passed. All they said was that there is no chance of getting any cash if it was not passed.

$228,000,000 Warrants Outstanding.

The banks have said that they cannot buy any more tax warrants to hold, and they cannot sell more to the public while the people have no confidence in the taxing system. It has been estimated that $228,013,000 of tax warrants are now outstanding.

Whether the Kelly plan creates some public favor depends on who are appointed assessor and reviewers, officials pointed out. Many persons may want to wait and see how the new tax machinery starts on the task of making an equitable assessment. Some may even want to see the result of the assessment.

There were no official opinions yesterday on how long it will take to make an assessment for 1931, which will be for a quadriennial period. Mayor Cermak upon his return from Springfield said that the assessors should quit their work on the 1931 assessment.

Fox to Continue Work.

Charles S. Fox, chief appraiser for the board of assessors, gave out a statement in which he said that the work will be pushed along as long as he is in charge of it. He said that about $3,000,000,000 in stocks of foreign corporations have been placed on the books, principally from information unearthed in the tax hearing before Judge Jarecki. He said that he is working to get the last books to the reviewers by April 4, the deadline under the existing statutes.

It is the mayor's view that all of the 1931 assessment will have to be done over by the new assessor. To get an assessment that will be attack-proof, it is anticipated this will take several months. If the bankers adhere to the attitude they expressed to the school trustees last Monday, that they will not buy tax warrants until there is a valid assessment, then there will not be any bank buying for several months.

Funding Seen Against Credit.

The proposed plan for funding the 1930 taxes, which is before the legislature, was looked upon by the bankers as something which is liable to depress the credit of the local governments further. They believe that the bonds could not be sold for par at 6 per cent, but they said that the bankers will neither do nor say anything to help or hinder the funding plan, because they do not care for more attacks after giving what they believe is sound advice.

ASSEMBLY USES RECESS TO PLAN SALARY SLASHES

Will Return in Week to Work on Program.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Getting down to business on the subject of retrenchment, both houses of the assembly voted to recess for a week today in order that a comprehensive program of salary cuts may be formulated. There will be no legislative sessions next week, but a joint committee will probably meet in Chicago to thresh out the reductions.

H. O. KESSINGER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

To expedite the paper work of the job, the legislative reference bureau is already drafting the text of some fifty or sixty bills which will be introduced by the joint committee week after next, half in each house, in order that there will be no duplication.

Will Scrutinize Public Jobs.

The salaries of elected state officials, most judges, state's attorneys, and office holders in towns operating under the commission form of government will come under the scrutiny of the committee, and it will also make recommendations for the elimination of certain jobs. Gossip today was that inquiry will be made into the value of the position of assistant commerce commissioner, as well as of numerous county offices.

Another senate committee was named to study the mass of funding bills introduced for the relief of various taxing bodies since the first special session convened.

The house was enlivened during its closing minutes this morning by a spirited verbal bout between Arthur Roe [Democrat, Vandalia] and Roland V. Libonati [Republican, Chicago], which for a moment seemed to approach fisticuffs. It came while the members were debating the advisability of recessing for a week. Some said the work should go over next week; others preferred to recess.

Peace in the Balance.

"Let there be peace," intoned Speaker Shanahan, clacking his gavel loudly. The loud language gave away to laughter, but Roe, standing tensely, told the chair:

"I have some rights here. I have been called a 'fake' and I demand that the man who called me that either retract it like a gentleman or say that he meant it."

Roe moved a few steps in Libonati's direction and the house was quiet.

"O, well, if you put it on that basis," said Libonati, smiling, "I'm a gentleman. What do you want me to say?"

"Retract it or say that you meant it," repeated Roe.

"Well, I'll retract it," said Libonati. Both resumed their seats and in a few minutes Libonati crossed t Roe's chair, where the latter sat, still pale and tense. Both shook hands and the incident seemed closed.

New Gas Tax Bill.

Only one important measure was introduced in the house. This, put in by R. G. Soderstrom [Republican, Streator], president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, calls for a straight 5 cents per gallon tax on gasoline and is a duplicate of the bill already introduced in the senate by Richard J. Barr [Republican, Joliet]. The increased tax would be operative for one year and two cents of the five would be returned to the counties to be used for charitable relief, if necessary. It is the particular plan of the Joint Emergency Relief fund of Cook county.

COLLECT TAXES TO SPEED RELIEF, PLEA OF KELLY

Predicts Entirely New Assessing Board.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Chicago's next step in extricating itself from the financial bog and tax muddle will be to organize a drive throughout Cook county to get citizens to pay 1930 taxes promptly when the bills are received. So the situation was outlined last night by D. F. Kelly, president of The Fair and one of the authors of the plan which has just been passed by the legislature for the reorganization of Cook county's taxing machinery. He spoke before the Economic club at the Palmer house on "Leadership in 1932." L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central system, also made an address on the same subject.

Mr. Kelly spoke of the Schnackenberg back tax bill as a needed supplementary measure, urged quick action on the Jarecki decision now before the Supreme court, dealing with the validity of the tax rolls for 1928 and 1929, and asserted that in the selection of the members of the new assessing machinery no politics is to be played.

Expert Entirely, New Board.

"After talking with Mayor Cermak and Gov. Emmerson," he said, "I have every reason to believe that no one connected with the present boards of assessors and of review will be named."

Cheers greeted this and Mr. Kelly added: "I would be against the appointment of any man whom you would not approve."

On personal property taxes, Mr. Kelly said some provision must be made in the immediate future to make possible the scheduling of holdings without the fear of a "confiscatory rate."

"We must realize," he said, "that if this country is to continue as a democracy, men of means must pay their rightful share of our tax burden."

Taxes Must be Paid.

"I have been asked," he said, "to suggest what will be done now that the legislature has passed senate bill 14 [The Kelly plan]. A measure known as the Schnackenberg back tax bill will be enacted to insure credits being given to those who paid their taxes in 1928, 1929 and who pay them for 1930, for such overpayments as may be made under reassessments. Thus every one who pays taxes promptly will be assured of credit on overcharges. Such credits will appear on future tax bills.

"We must organize every available facility—the clubs, parent and teacher associations, the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Illinois Manufacturers' association to appeal to citizens to pay 1930 taxes as soon as bills are received. If this is done, there will be little or no delay in securing sufficient money to pay city employés. Approximately $125,000,000 of tax anticipation warrants of 1928 and 1929 must be redeemed out of the first taxes received before any salary payments may be made. So you can see how important it is that, if possible, 100 per cent of 1930 taxes be collected at the earliest possible moment.

"In the meantime, all the attorneys in the so-called Jarecki case should be urged to complete their briefs and file them with the Supreme court, to enable that court to render a prompt decision."

1932 Is Key Year.

"I am convinced," Mr. Kelly continued, "that 1932 will bring out the best or the worst in all of us. It will establish for all time the depth of our degradation at our own hands or the hallmark of Chicago's desire to reach a paramount position in the world. This can be done only if men who serve disinterestedly are encouraged to do so not for monetary gain, but for honor.

"May I suggest that a means be found in every city to enlist men such as yourselves in public affairs? The Carnegie Foundation or some such organization should be asked to name annually the man or men in each state, appointments to be made by the governor or by popular acclaim, who accomplished the most outstanding civic tasks during this and the years to come, just as are rewarded recipients of the Nobel prize.

"Chicago is to be proud of its mayor," said Mr. Kelly, "and the work he has done." Every one with an ax to grind tried to stop that bill, but, thank God, they did not succeed."

Future of the Railroads.

The future of the railroads and the 1932 leadership, Mr. Downs set forth in his address, will depend upon the business men and shippers "and the attitude they take toward other forms of transportation, air, highway and inland waterway."

Mr. Downs quoted figures indicating that in carrying the air mail the government pays $1 for every 50 cents taken in.

"Is there any reason," he asked, "why those who benefit by use of the air mail should not pay full cost rather than pass the hat among the tax payers?"

He dwelt upon the 27 million motor vehicles and the effect of truck and bus transportation upon the railroads.

"I believe the transportation of freight and passengers by highway," Mr. Downs said, "should be regulated for the same reason and in the same manner as the railroads, not to drive them off, but to foster a transportation system. They should not only pay a tax comparable with other vehicles, but also a share of the cost of the wear and tear of the highways.

"Those who use this service should pay the full value of it. The highways belong to all of us, and commercial carriers have no more right to use it without paying the compensation than a man would have in taking a government building and opening a department store without paying rent. I have no doubt of the future. The public has 25 billion dollars tied up in the railroads, and they will not let them fail. They will be the main reliance for transportation, as they have for a hundred years."

GLENCOE SCHOOLS ARE REOPENED

Miss Ruth Fleming, teacher, resumes her duties after she and children took an enforced vacation because of the lack of cash. Funds to reopen the schools were raised by the sale of tax warrants.

117 CHILDREN IN ONE SCHOOL NEED DAILY FREE LUNCH

From a west side principal comes this word: "Our family of children needing free lunch has grown to an average of 117 daily. I realize how hard it must be to apportion the money and so I have managed to feed my brood every day on our allotment of $14 a week from Hungry School Children's fund, except the milk bill. I have taken care of this, but with the strain of no pay I must soon cease."

Your gift, reader, to the Hungry School Children's fund will help this teacher feed her needy children. After Feb. 4 the fund which now feeds 10,000 school children daily will have been expended.

Gifts that arrived yesterday for the fund follow:

$200—The Milk Drivers' union.

LAKE FOREST'S SCHOOLS RUN ON A CASH BASIS

$160,000 Reserve; Announce $70,000 Job.

While many of the suburban school boards in Cook county lack funds and are resorting to the sale of tax anticipation warrants to keep classes running, Lake Forest has no school bills outstanding, teachers have been paid in cash and the board has a reserve of $160,000 in cash. This was revealed last night with the announcement that within the next month the Lake Forest board will advertise for bids on a $70,000 building program to improve the Gorton school. A new auditorium seating 800 persons and a new gymnasium will be constructed.

"Lake Forest's excellent financial condition is due to three things," said Arthur Dixon, Chicago attorney and president of the Lake Forest school board. "These are rigid economy over a long period of years, good management, and living within the budget. It should be emphasized that despite this fact our schools are second to none in scholastic achievement."

Gain by Lower Costs.

The decision to start a school building program at present was reached because of a desire to improve the employment situation and also because of the lowered cost of building materials, according to John J. Spellman, chairman of the school board's building committee, a member of the board for 28 years.

The last extensive building program in the school system was 17 years ago, Mr. Spellman said. At that time the Halsey school burned and was reconstructed. That building project was also paid for in cash. As soon as the contracts are let the new work will start, school board officials said.

There are 35 teachers in the two Lake Forest schools and 500 pupils. According to Superintendent of Schools John E. Baggett, who has been in charge of the system for 28 years, there has never been a payless pay day. He declared there is no danger of a salary cut or curtailment of educational activity. Plans are being made, he said, for an extension of the domestic science and the manual training departments.

In addition to the school board, members of which are appointed by the mayor, the other municipal activities of the city, including the police department, fire department and library are on a cash basis.

Two Thousand Back

More than 2,000 pupils went back to school in Glencoe yesterday after a forced vacation of two weeks and three days because of lack of school funds. Superintendent of Schools Frederick L. Redefer announced that the attendance was good and that the teachers were resigned to accepting a 10 per cent cut in salaries, which has been made necessary by the shrinkage in funds. Money to reopen the schools was obtained through the sale of 1931 tax anticipation warrants amounting to $138,000. Warrants are still being sold, but the present funds will enable the schools to operate until March 1.

BOMB CAPTIVE'S BAIL REDUCED $19,000; HE'S FREE

Bail for Benjamin Adler, under indictment for a bombing conspiracy, was reduced yesterday from $25,000 to $6,000 by Judge Rudolph Desort in the Criminal court. Adler later furnished the lowered bond and was at liberty last night.

He was represented by Attorney Louis Fisher, a brother of Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher of the Criminal court. The lawyer submitted his plea for a bail decrease to Judge Fisher but the latter assigned the matter to Judge Desort. Assistant State's Attorney C. Wayland Brooks opposed the bail reduction.

Adler is under indictment with Joseph Siegel, Le Roy Rapp, Benjamin Stone and Ben Shank, the latter not apprehended, for the attempted bombing of a bakery at 1502 South St. Louis avenue several months ago. Adler, it is alleged, was the negotiator between Rapp and Siegel, bombers, and Stone, who, it is charged, wanted the bombing done. The trial of the alleged conspirators is scheduled for March 1 before Judge Desort. Stone may testify for the state.

FINANCE GROUP O. K.'S 14 MILLION SCHOOL SAVINGS

19,000 Employes to Lose Month's Salaries.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The finance committee of the school board yesterday recommended a reduction of more than $14,000,000 in the appropriations for 1932. So large a cut was never before considered by a Chicago school board. Substantially this decrease will be approved by the board, it was indicated, and probably that will be done Jan. 27.

While the city council and county board have been talking for seven weeks about a large reduction in expense the school board has stepped out to set the pace.

Employés Lose Month's Pay.

The school cut was largely accomplished by requiring each of the 19,000 employés to lose a month's pay. This involves the closing of the schools for nine days, which will be done at the end of this year or the beginning of the next school year in September.

In addition night schools have been curtailed, vacation schools have been eliminated, repairs have been deferred, the misnamed "bonuses" have been eliminated, and new construction has been retarded.

The cuts in the four distinct funds of the board are indicated in the following table, which shows the original budget, revised budget and savings in the educational, building, playground and free text book funds:

Fund—	Original Budget.	Reduced Budget.	Cut in Expense.
Eductl.	$ 64,635,238	$55,555,183	$ 9,080,055
Bcildg.	33,000,000	29,148,681	3,851,319

Probably the teachers, whose salary schedule is one of the lowest of large American cities, will be trimmed the most of all of the classes of board employés. The sick leave, which it is estimated will save $150,000, was a sick teacher must pay for her substitute in full. Ten holidays, for which the teachers have been paid heretofore, will reduce the teachers' income an estimated $1,800,000 because they will not be paid for these holidays.

The closing of the schools for nine days will take $1,600,000 more from the teachers. Then the teachers who have been given above that of a regular instructor for extra training, such as the teachers of the blind, crippled, and deaf, had their extra compensation taken away from them.

More Lose "Bonuses."

In the first recommendation 1,513 teachers were trimmed by this process for an estimated saving of $277,525. Yesterday $31,380 more of so-called "bonus" money was taken from still other teachers. Several groups protested.

The preliminary to yesterday's action was a meeting of the budget subcommittee composed of Trustees Joseph P. Savage, William McJunkin, and Walter Brandenburg. While they advertised to the public they would have open sessions, the conversation showed that they have been conferring in private. They were set on their recommendations when the session opened and they rushed along like a person hurrying for a train.

They did not have time to give more than a blanket approval of a recommendation of Trustee McJunkin for a bureau of property control, which he said will cost about $20,000 a year.

Wants Control of Supplies.

"We buy about $3,500,000 of supplies a year," said the trustee. "We handle those supplies in an exceedingly careless way—no inventory nor control. We probably have $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 of supplies and equipment in the system. With a proper control we could save $500,000 a year."

The committee decided to add $20,000 for a bureau of control, but did not decide whether the expense is to be paid from the educational, building or textbook fund, or partly from each of them.

When discussion of the budget first started some trustees advocated the closing for one year of the Normal and Crane colleges. Trustee Hemingway, chairman of the finance committee, wanted to know what had become of those ideas.

"We have a waiting list of teachers numbering more than 2,000," he said. eliminated. Under the 1932 budget "Why would it not be advisable to close the Normal college for a year?"

Trustee Savage said that the keeping of the Normal college open would aid in getting teaching positions for Chicago girls and would bar nonresidents.

PLEDGE SUPPORT TO OMER CUSTER AT G. O. P. DINNER

W. R. James, president of the west parks, was host last night at a dinner of Republican ward committeemen to meet Omer Custer, candidate for governor. The dinner was held in the roof bungalow of the Hotel Sherman. Present were 33 ward committeemen and eight proxies.

The speakers were Mr. James, George Harding, Ald. Oscar Nelson, Walter Bacon, Eden Brekke, Edward F. Moore and Barney Cohen. All spoke in favor of Custer and pledged their support. Mr. Harding said: "Custer is one man who can and will win not only the nomination but the election itself."

Ald. Nelson offered a resolution for Mr. James to appoint a committee of the ward committeemen present to work for Custer. Mr. James said he would appoint such a committee today.

Democratic committeemen from the country towns at a meeting yesterday in the Hotel Sherman made up a list of indorsements for consideration of the county committee when it takes up county slate making. Among those on the recommended list are: Ning Eley, Des Plaines, for a judgeship; John F. Delaney, Maywood, for Appellate court clerk; J. J. McKenna, Calumet City, for congressman at large; Homer J. Byrd, Arlington Heights, for secretary of state, and Michael J. Flynn, for some place not designated.

In Aurora, Congressman Frank R. Reid of the 11th district, who some time ago said he was considering running for the Republican nomination for governor, placed in circulation nominating petitions for congress.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO; BLAME FAULTY BRAKES

Police Nab Driver After Inspecting Car.

Edward F. Hoffercamp of 2115 Cuyler avenue, a decorator, whose automobile fatally injured a woman yesterday, was booked last night by Lincoln park police on a charge of driving a car with faulty brakes. He was freed on bond and ordered to attend the inquest this morning.

The woman killed by Hoffercamp's car was Mrs. Mary Fried, 64 years old, of 3530 Sheridan road. She was hit at Sheridan road and Brompton place and taken to the Columbus Memorial hospital, where she died. In compliance with recent police orders the brakes on Hoffercamp's automobile were tested. Police pronounced them defective.

Gangster's Victim Dies.

James Borkovic, 45 years old, of 5506 Justine street, who, with his wife, Julia, was struck on Jan. 14 at 55th street and Ashland avenue by a car driven by Michael (Bubs) Quinlan, gangster, died of his injuries in St. Bernard's hospital last night. Mrs. Borkovic's condition is serious. Quinlan was arrested at the time of the accident on two charges of reckless driving and was released on bond. Police last night ordered that he be arrested again.

These two deaths and five others increased the Cook county motor toll since Jan. 1 to 80. The victims:

Philip Bersiegel, 62 years old, 5248 South Artesian avenue. Died in the German Deaconess hospital. He was injured on Dec. 13 at Western avenue and 54th street by the machine of Paul Bryski, 40, of 3043 West 54th street.

Fred Kohler, 35 years old, 1038 Jackson boulevard. Injured on Jan. 18 by the automobile of Gus Galanopoulos, 18, of 831 South Halsted street, at Morgan and Harrison streets, and died at the county hospital.

Albert Koelikamp, 23 years old, 7258 South Wood street. Fatally injured yesterday when he cranked his truck in gear and the machine crushed him against another truck in the Seneca Petroleum company garage at 3241 Shields avenue.

Edward Cikanek, 38 years old, 2350 South St. Louis avenue, an insurance agent. Died in the county hospital of injuries suffered on Jan. 12 when he was run over by his own car which he cranked while it was in gear.

Harry Hughes, 52 years old, Negro, of 5117 Wabash avenue. Hit by an automobile which did not stop at State and 53d streets on Jan. 12, and died in the county hospital.

Hits Group on Safety Island.

A hit and run motorist drove his car into a group of six men and women waiting for a street car in the safety zone at 16th street and Lawndale avenue last night. Joseph Brown, 39 years old, 716 South Kedzie avenue, and Roy Shockley, 34, of 4912 Race avenue, were injured, the former seriously, and taken to the Frances E. Willard hospital.

Miss Mae Rothman, 18 years old, 4239 Fillmore street, was seriously injured yesterday when she was hit by a stolen sedan at Roosevelt road and Clark street. The driver abandoned the car.

Building and Loan Heads Held Up by Four Bandits

Three officials and four members of the Krakow Building and Loan association were held up late last night by four bandits in the saloon at 2700 South Kildare avenue. The officials were Anton Plotkowski, 3012 South Tripp avenue, the president; Frank J. Dumanowski, the treasurer, and owner of the saloon, and Louis Kaminski, 2703 South Kildare avenue, secretary. All were searched and lost a total of $128. The bandits, one of whom wore colored glasses over regular spectacles, fled when they overheard Mrs. Dumanowski telephoning police.

Charlie's Hot Iron Sends Bandit Away in Haste

Charlie Lee, a Chinese laundryman at 3242 East 90th street, was pressing a shirt in his shop last night when a young man with a revolver entered. "Up with your hands," the gunman commanded. Charlie's hands went up, but with one of them also went a scorching hot iron. The iron left his hand at the same instant, hitting the bandit in the chest. The robber fled howling in pain. Charlie picked up the iron, and resumed his work on the shirt.

Kidnaped, Forced to Open Safe and Robbed of $627

Donald Goldstone of 4130 North Keystone avenue was kidnaped by three bandits late last night near his home and driven to the Neisner Brothers, Inc., store at 3546 Irving Park boulevard, of which he is manager. Inside the store the robbers forced Goldstone to open the safe from which they took $627. They then drove him to Berteau and Keystone avenues, where they released him.

BANK HYSTERIA OVER, BUSINESS HOLIDAY IN URBANA CALLED OFF

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Urbana business institutions, including banks, reopened this morning after being closed for two days when a five day "holiday" proclamation issued early Tuesday morning by Mayor Reginald C. Harmon was rescinded by the city executive late Wednesday afternoon.

The holiday had been declared in order to allow banks to close, to prevent a possible run following the closing of two banks in Champaign Monday morning.

The hysteria which was evident on Monday had entirely disappeared and business was conducted under normal conditions. The First National bank of Urbana, of which Douglas R. Fay is president, and the Busey State bank, Urbana, M. W. Busey, president reported deposits exceeded withdrawals thirty to one.

MOSCOW BEGINS 2 DAY PILGRIMAGE TO LENIN'S TOMB

MOSCOW, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Thousands of peasants and workers marched slowly today past the glass encased catafalque in Red square on which rests the body of Nicolai Lenin.

It was the beginning of a two day observance of the eighth anniversary of Lenin's death and of the "bloody Sunday" of 1905, when the soldiers of the czar shot down a group of workers who went to the palace in St. Petersburg with a petition asking improvement in the labor laws.

All Russia worked today, but tomorrow not a wheel will turn. No formal ceremonies were held at the tomb of Lenin and none will be held tomorrow. Only the slow procession of the proletariat does him honor.

FIND 37 YEAR OLD MESSAGE FROM WRECKED SHIP

Newark, N. J., Jan. 21.—(AP)—A message of shipwreck and possible tragedy 37 years ago was studied by police today.

The message was written on an ancient delivery tag found near the Newark airport yesterday.

"This bottle was thrown from the shipwrecked canal boat William Morris, which foundered May 4, 1895, in a heavy fog," it read, and was signed: "O. Kelly, captain."

The note was addressed "to Newark E. L. P. Co.," which police took to mean the Newark Electric Light and Power company, later taken over by Public Service."

ASHES FROM TWO VOLCANOES FALL ONQUAKE HITCITY

GUATEMALA CITY, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Ten earthquake shocks and more than 50 rumbling tremors aroused fears here of great damage near two volcanoes erupting 50 miles away.

Ashes from the volcanoes of Fuego and Acatenango dropped on Guatemala City tonight, shooting against the wind in fiery streaks.

The quakes were felt most severely at 8 a. m. and 2 p. m., followed, the national seismological observatory reported, by 59 slight, rumbling tremors. It was feared that great damage might have been caused in regions nearer the volcanoes.

ORDERS POUR IN FOR NEW YORK'S 'RESCUE' BONDS

Quick Sale Is Expected of 100 Million Issue.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special]—Quick sale is expected tomorrow of the issue of $100,000,000 New York City 5 per cent special corporate stock notes which will be marketed by a syndicate of nearly fifty banks and banking houses. A deluge of advance orders by telephone and telegraph poured into Wall street today. On the basis of this response from investors the sale is expected to be largely a matter of allotment.

The offering of the bonds, representing the initial step in the new program to lift the city out of its financial difficulties as far as the general public is concerned, will consist of $25,000,000 due Jan. 25, 1935; $25,000,000 due on Jan. 25, 1936, and $50,000,00 due on Jan. 25, 1937.

In a statement issued tonight by J. P. Morgan & Co. in behalf of the banking group, after the contract between the group and the city officials was signed, it was revealed that the revolving credit which the group has undertaken to furnish the city this year as needed will be at the rate of 5¾ per cent. It was also disclosed that the exact amount of the maximum credit to be available will be $151,000,000 instead of $150,000,000, as the bankers had previously estimated.

100 Millions More Available.

In addition to the $100,000,000 New York City securities offered today the bill voted by the legislature Wednesday night provides for a further $100,000,000 short term borrowing by the city. The bankers have not committed themselves to the purchase of this additional amount, which will come up for consideration should the sale of the securities become necessary to meet obligations of the city.

As a revolving fund of $150,000,000 will be set up to raise funds through the sale of city revenue bills throughout the year in anticipation of taxes, financial circles do not consider it likely that all of this money will be required if the policy of retrenchment pledged by the board of estimate is realized.

Philadelphia Evolves Plan.

Philadelphi, Pa., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—A program to balance the budget and meet the long overdue pay rolls of city and county employés was evolved today at a conference between city officials and bankers. The program is understood to contain these features:

Council to appropriate $4,500,000 to pay off the two bank loans due Dec. 31.

The controller to make that appropriation possible without requiring $4,500,000 budget cuts by adding that sum to his estimate of delinquent tax collections.

Repayment of the loans to be made as soon as sufficient cash is available from tax receipts, on or about Feb. 15.

Council to cut $7,100,000 from the budget appropriations to offset the deficit of that amount facing the city because of tax shortages at the end of 1931.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Jan. 21.—A dramatic story of an escape from the French penal colony at Devil's island and a 27 mile struggle to freedom by boat and swimming through a shark-infested sea was related to the British Guiana police today by a man who staggered ashore near New Amsterdam and begged for food and water.

The man said he was one of seven convicts who fled Devil's island in an open boat. They ran into a storm off British Guiana and their boat overturned. Two were drowned. The narrator started to swim ashore and reached safety after many hours.

The police escorted him to the capital, Georgetown, where he was amazed to find three of his "lost" companions had arrived before him. They had stuck to the boat until all hope was abandoned, when a fishing craft rescued them. The seventh member of the party had died of exposure. The British police will allow them to continue their journey.

SEIZE TWO AS BANDITS.

Two Negroes were arrested in Flossmoor yesterday by Policeman Joseph Dinneen when they were found to have about $200 worth of merchandise which the police believe to have been stolen. They are Nick Mason, 46 years old, and William Reed, 19 years old, both of Memphis.

HAITI SEEKS LIGHT ON BANK LOAN; RESENTS TALK ABOUT "LATINS"

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Minister Bellagarde of Haiti today asked the senate finance committee to ascertain the details of a loan by American bankers to his country in 1922.

Bellegarde, in a letter transmitted to the committee through the state department, said testimony in its foreign securities inquiry had damaged the honor of all Latin American governments which had contracted loans in this country.

He referred to the testimony of New York banking representatives that it was customary to give commissions to Latin American government officials in arranging loans.

Bellegarde said his government felt it was imperative to have complete light on the conditions surrounding the $23,660,000 Haitian loan of 1922, the manner of its being contracted, the profits of the National City Company of New York, and the commission paid to the person negotiating the loan.

He also sought causes of the depreciation of Haitian bonds in the United States market, "despite interest and amortization were paid regularly."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21.—The reasons behind last night's cabinet shakeup, in which several ministers "resigned," became known tonight. The story, as told by a high authority, is this:

Luis Montes de Oca, minister of finance, held a reception in his home on Christmas night, to which were invited several cabinet ministers and other prominent people opposed to the government of President Ortiz Rubio. At that reception a party was formed. The intrigues of this party succeeded in working up in congress such strong opposition to the government that President Rubio became worried.

SENTENCE KIDNAPERS OF ALDERMAN.

Carmi, Ill., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Elmer James, Apple James, and Carmel Southard, all charged with abducting and robbing Alfred Bruder, Carmi alderman and contractor, Dec. 28, were sentenced to one year to life.

"I've never seen so alluring a figure"

By Julia Foster ✱

SHE had all the grace in the world! A figure that gave subtle allure to her gown! Then, as she drew nearer, I saw a complexion that erased the whole lovely picture. That happens far too often. And a few words of expert advice could make such a difference!

* * *

You have no right to let your skin—ever—become "tragic". Not when the right care is so easy. That's what specialists have told me—and I'm going to tell you their treatment for keeping skin firm, smooth, youthful.

Apply a luxurious lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water to face and throat. Your hands are best for working this into the pores. Rinse it away with warm water (never use hot); finish with a cold rinse.

That's the basis. Then, your make-up, in the morning. At night, oil or tissue cream, if your skin is dry. More than 20,000 experts consider this the ideal foundation cleansing. You'll find ample reason in the paragraph at right headed: "Beauty In A Test Tube". Read every word of it!

A beauty treatment that relaxes

Palmolive is so inexpensive that this bath treatment I'm going to outline is within every woman's budget. Melt a bar of Palmolive. Pour the soothing liquid into your tub. Step in. Immediately, you relax. Then massage every thirsty pore with the rich lather from another cake of Palmolive. Nerves are forgotten. Weariness a thing of the past. You want to jump into your loveliest frock, go places and do things. As for your skin—it's deliciously smooth and soft, after this olive and palm oil care.

Believe me, nothing—nothing in your facial beauty program is so important as the twice-a-day use of Palmolive Soap. Nothing gives you a more satisfying, refreshing beauty treatment. Try it. Try it for ten days. Then ask yourself whether any beauty treatment has ever given you such a firm, fine youthful skin!

BEAUTY IN A TEST TUBE

But can you get enough olive oil in soap? How much, actually, goes into Palmolive? There is the exact amount—in that test tube at the right. To this generous olive oil content can be directly traced the great benefits of Palmolive Soap to the complexion. Palmolive is the only large-selling soap made of vegetable oils exclusively. The only one using olive oil as a base. Other Palmolive ingredients are simply oils from palm trees necessary to produce a richer, creamier, more workable lather than possible with olive oil alone.

More than 20,000 of the world's leading beauty experts have for years urged women to use Palmolive Soap in preference to all others. Heed their advice!

PALMOLIVE

Keep that Schoolgirl Complexion

Report Six Named in True Bills.

Three blows were received yesterday by the livery car chauffeurs' union in its attempt to compel mourners to ride to funerals in hired automobiles:

1. True bills were reported to have been voted by the grand jury against two union officials and four union chauffeurs on charges of conspiracy to violate a state law because of their action in halting the funeral of Mrs. John Economakos on Monday when policemen drove the hearse and funeral cars to the cemetery after the unionists refused to proceed.

Private Autos Follow Hearse.

2. No union livery cars were hired for the funeral of Miss Shirley Pearlman 17 year old high school girl who was killed in an accident on Tuesday after the automobile in which she was riding to a funeral was forced out of the cortége by union orders. The driver of the hearse that carried Miss Pearlman's body to the cemetery was warned by law enforcing officials to make no hostile or dilatory move and the cortége of private cars followed the hearse in defiance of the union edict.

3. An American Legion firing squad furnished by the John J. McShane post for the funeral of Edward Riley, a crippled war veteran, refused to obey the order of union men to leave the cortége. Policemen averted a mêlée by directing the union men to get back on their cars and drive to Calvary cemetery.

Fewer Union Cars Hired.

At other funerals it was noted that the public reaction to the union edict was rapidly approaching proportions of a lockout. Fewer livery cars were seen in the funerals and undertakers reported the cessation of the belligerent attitude of union drivers that prevailed when the union rule became effective on Jan. 11.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, head of the racket bureau, spent the morning examining witnesses before the grand jury and, after the true bills were reported to have been voted, Mueller and Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office went to the funeral of Miss Pearlman. Commander C. C. Fletcher of the McShane post wanted them to take some action against those responsible for the disturbances occurring in the procession following Riley's body, but owing to their attending the other funeral Mr. Fletcher was asked to wait until today.

True Bills Reported for Six.

It was reported that those named in the true bills are Edward Reilly, president of the Automobile Livery Chauffeurs' union, local 727; William J. Kerrigan, secretary of the union; William Libal, president of the Shenandoah Livery company, who refused to drive the hearse at the funeral of Mrs. Economakos, and Chauffeurs William Foy, Frank Foy, and Arnold Lauschke, all of whom followed the lead of Libal.

Charges against the four drivers are pending in the Municipal court, but these may be dismissed, Mueller said. Attorney Richard I. Gavin, whose law firm obtained an injunction from Judge Robert E. Gentzel restraining the union and its members from interfering with funerals, said the men face a possible contempt citation.

Court to Hear of Tactics.

Gavin's firm represents the Chicago Funeral Directors' association, which has proclaimed its opposition to the union policy, and Gavin said he would report to Judge Gentzel next Monday that the "passive" tactics of the unionists had interfered with several funerals.

The death of Miss Pearlman is to be called to the court's attention, it was announced. Testimony was given at the inquest that she and others were compelled to take their cars out of the cortége following the body of Louis Lakin, an incident that was followed in a few minutes by the fatal accident, when the car in which Miss Pearlman was riding collided with a coal truck. Lakin, a high school youth, was killed by a watchman.

Nearly 1,000 persons attended services for Miss Pearlman in the undertaking rooms of Weinstein Brothers at 3556 Roosevelt road. Rabbi Goldstein of the First Rumanian congregation officiated, but in his talk said nothing of the cause of the death of the girl.

Mrs. Beckie Pearlman, mother of the dead girl, had to be carried away from the coffin. Weeping was heard throughout the services. The family had decided not to employ union cars, but of necessity had to have a hearse which had a union chauffeur.

"Let me alone," was all this driver would say when asked his name and what orders he had from his union officials. Prosecutor Mueller and Investigator Roche told him they would permit no trouble and if he attempted to do anything to block the funeral or embarrass the mourners he would be locked up and a policeman would drive the hearse.

Six girl friends of Miss Pearlman were pallbearers. They were Ruth Sinow, Ethel Menna, Ida Fink, Hilda Gordon, Blanche Bulva, and Harriet Gordon, who is president of the Jovials Social club of which Miss Pearlman was a member. The girls were students at Tuley High school, which Miss Pearlman attended, and of which Lakin had been a student.

Then, with no effort on the part of the driver to comply with the union order, or any interference, the privately owned cars lined up back of the hearse and the procession proceeded to Jewish Waldheim cemetery. Sixty-one private cars were in line, among them being several cars of policemen and representatives of the state's attorney.

The Riley Funeral.

The funeral of Riley was in the morning. The Legionnaires comprising the squad that was assigned to fire a salute over the grave as their comrade was laid to rest called Commander Fletcher on the telephone from Calvary cemetery. Halfway to the cemetery the cortége was halted and they were told to get out from behind the hearse, Fletcher said they notified him.

"They told me they were stopped by a carload of hoodlums also," Fletcher stated. "Very serious trouble was narrowly avoided by the arrival of a squad of police. I don't know why the chauffeurs' union would try to bring added grief at the funeral of Riley, who was a union man. Several members of the firing squad are also union men. They feel that the union is doing something disgraceful and so do I.

"The men told me the police promised to arrest the union drivers after leaving the cemetery. I can't find that they did, however, and I want the state's attorney's office to take the proper action because of this insult to the memory of our dead buddy. I believe the Legion should take cognizance of this happening."

BURNS IN PLANE

CHICAGO MAIL PILOT DIES AS PLANE CRASHES

Ship Drops in De Kalb County Field.

Charles W. Rousch, 33 years old, 6240 South Troy street, a mail pilot for the Northwest Airways, Inc., was killed last evening when his cabin monoplane crashed in a field near Colvin Park, in De Kalb county, while he was flying from Rockford to Chicago. The scene of the accident is almost midway between Sycamore and Rockford.

Several witnesses said that the ship, a Stinson Jr., equipped with a Wright whirlwind motor of 300 horsepower, appeared to be on fire as it shot earthward. Fire did attack the plane, but whether before or after the crash was not determined officially last night. Rousch was only slightly burned. Apparently he tried to jump to safety, for his parachute was found caught on the tail of the plane. His body was half out of the cockpit.

Halts Trip at Rockford.

Rousch left the Chicago airport shortly before noon yesterday, bound on his regular run to Madison, Wis., with a stopover at Rockford. Because of misty weather he did not proceed to Madison and remained at Rockford until 5:30 last evening, when he started out for the home trip to the Chicago airport. He carried only mail, no passengers being allowed because of the weather.

Just before hopping off for Chicago, Rousch remarked to a post office clerk that the weather was bad. "I might not be able to make it," he continued. "Wait for me 15 minutes. If I think I can't make it, I'll fly back by then." Twenty minutes later residents of Colvin Park looked skyward when they heard the irregular throbbing of his ship. They saw a low flying plane. According to W. W. Baxter, a towerman for the Illinois Central railroad, the report of an explosion came from the ship, followed by fire and the crash.

Student Flyer Killed.

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Robert K. Showers, 22, of this city was killed today when the airplane in which he was completing his final flight as a student flyer went into a tail spin and crashed 500 feet near a Champaign airport.

2 Planes 24 Hours Overdue.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Two planes that took off from here yesterday were missing today, and 24 hours overdue at Big Springs, Tex., 350 miles east of El Paso. The missing pilots are Otto P. Graff, New York business man flyer, and Lee N. Brutts, Wichita, Kas. A passenger accompanied Brutts, but his identity was not known by airport officials.

REMOVE KNIFE STUCK IN BRAIN FOR THIRTY YEARS

Blade More than Two Inches Long.

Linus Larson, 10112 Avenue M, the man who carried a knife blade embedded in his brain for 30 years, is in the Illinois Research hospital, recovering from a successful operation for the removal of the two and a half inch piece of steel.

The blade was removed on Tuesday by Dr. Eric Oldberg of the hospital staff. He also removed most of the scar tissue which had formed in the three decades since the knife was driven through Larson's skull, presumably in a saloon fight.

It was the pressure of the scar tissue, physicians said, which probably caused the attacks of epilepsy which led Larson to go to the county hospital last November. The blade was embedded in the left frontal lobe of the brain, in one of the so-called "silent areas."

At the county hospital surgeons decided that because of Larson's age—he is 59—he would be a poor operative risk. They advised him against an operation and he returned to his home. Records at the hospital showed that he had gone there once before, fifteen years ago, but had fled from his bed when shown an X-ray photograph of the blade in his brain.

Recently, however, the attacks of epilepsy became more frequent and severe, and Larson went to the Illinois Research hospital and consented to the operation. It is too early to tell, Dr. Oldberg said last night, whether the operation would relieve Larson of the attacks.

Larson rallied well from the operation, and was able to talk to visitors last night. "I'm glad it's done," he said. "I probably would have died if the blade had been left in my head much longer."

CHICAGO ESCAPES ZERO WEATHER FOR TWO YEARS

Unless it becomes much colder than anticipated today, tomorrow will mark the expiration of two years in Chicago without a temperature as low as zero. The forecast for today indicated cloudy and colder weather. The maximum temperature yesterday was 52 degrees.

C. A. DONNEL. [Paul Stone Raymor Photo.]

The last day, according to official weather bureau records, when zero was reached on the Fahrenheit scale was on Jan. 23, 1930. Never before in its fifty-eight years of existence has the bureau recorded so long a period of zeroless temperatures.

1 Above in November, 1930.

The lowest reading since January, 1930, was taken on Nov. 23, 1930, when the mercury stood at 1 above. The low mark for 1931 was 6 above, in January. Thus far in January, 1932, the mercury has averaged 11 degrees above the normal daily mean.

There were two years before 1931 when Chicago enjoyed nonzero weather, in 1906, when the lowest was 6 above, and 1908, when 8 above was the minimum. In 1907 there was only a single day when the thermometers of the weather bureau recorded zero.

The Weather Man's View.

C. A. Donnel, principal meteorologist of the Chicago station, said that although the tables showed unusual warmth for the last two years, he does not believe this means the area around Lake Michigan is developing into another California or Florida.

"We are just having our usual weather," he said. "I am sure that if we could go back beyond the records we have now we could prove it was ever thus—that they had their mild winters in the olden days, too."

The abnormally high temperatures this winter, Mr. Donnel asserted, could be explained by the absence of high pressure areas from the arctic regions. The last few months have been marked by comparatively warm winds from the south.

72 Yr. Old Man on Hunger Strike for Forty-one Days

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 21.—(AP)—What to do with H. E. Carson, 72, who says he has not eaten for 41 days, was a problem facing Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health officer, today. Carson, who says he was born in St. Joseph, Mo., and that he is "as stubborn as a Missouri mule," was reported to health authorities last night. Carson said he last ate on Dec. 9. Dr. Geiger said he may put the man in a hospital and forcibly feed him.

ASSAILS U. S. FOR ALOOF ATTITUDE TOWARD FRANCE

Deputy Stirs Chamber with His Attack.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—[Friday.]—(AP)—The United States was sharply criticized in the French chamber of deputies late last night for an aloof attitude toward France in international negotiations. The criticism came from Edouard Herriot, leader of the radical Socialists, in debate on a request from Premier Laval for an expression of confidence in his new cabinet.

The chamber adjourned early today until afternoon with the premier apparently confident that he had its support for his foreign policy, although a vote of confidence had not yet been reached. He told interpellators that his task would not be difficult, for the debate thus far had shown that the house was almost unanimous in support of his contention that reparations were sacred and that France must not be expected to pay more than she received.

Deplores Pact's Rejection.

M. Herriot deplored America's rejection of a proposal 12 years ago for a guarantee pact in line with the Versailles treaty.

"The United States, which often gives us advice," he said, "would gain by being closer to us in international negotiations aimed at uniting the whole world to assure peace."

He also criticized the statement of Chancellor Bruening of Germany that Germany could no longer pay reparations and reminded the chamber that recourse could be had to The Hague tribunal under the Young plan by any of its signatories in event one of them failed to pay its intergovernmental debts.

M. Herriot said Chancellor Bruening had plainly stated an intention to pay no more reparations.

"How can the force of arms be replaced," Herriot asked, "unless loyalty to contracts be substituted for it?"

Lowers His Tone.

Lowering his tone, the leader of the strong radical socialist party said there was no denying that Germany was in an unfortunate position, but he protested against what he called "an abominable campaign" tending to show that France, with her reparations, was responsible for Germany's misfortunes.

He read from an experts' report an indication that Germany would be restored to her full powers in a few years.

"France might help Germany if Germany does not put France in a difficult situation," he said.

Calls for Union with U. S.

The chamber met in an atmosphere made tense by Germany's refusal of a simple extension of the Hoover moratorium and complicated by a call for union with the United States in a pact guaranteeing mutual assistance for defense in any case of aggression.

This call was sounded at the afternoon session of the chamber by Pierre Forgeot, former cabinet minister, who suggested that in return for the agreement France might reduce her armaments by about 25 per cent. He recalled that America stepped in during the war and predicted she might do so again.

"In the face of a Germany filled with a desire for revenge," M. Forgeot said, "the best asset France could have would be the defensive aid of the United States."

Declaring America's signature on such a pact would be "an enormous step on the road to peace" M. Forgeot inquired: "Why not ask her to do it?" and the deputies applauded him.

"The United States interrogated us on our intentions," he continued. "Why not ask them on theirs? One clear word would dispel these tragic misunderstandings. It is to be hoped that America understands that something must be done."

Stimson Leaning Toward Budgetary Limit on Arms

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—It was learned today on the eve of the opening of the Geneva disarmament conference that the state department has greatly modified its previous opposition to the pacifist and European sponsored program for limiting armaments through limiting by international treaty the national expenditures of each signatory nation.

Vigorous opposition brought against this program by the navy and war departments thus far has failed to shake Secretary of State Stimson's belief that a form of budgetary limitation of armies and navies can be worked out which the United States can approve. As a result, the tentative instructions forwarded to Hugh Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium and acting chairman of the American delegation pending Mr. Stimson's arrival at Geneva, direct that he retain an open mind on the budgetary proposal and examine closely all suggestions of this nature.

Gibson Long Foe of Plan.

Should the state department head succeed in winning President Hoover to his views, Ambassador Gibson will be placed in the embarrassing position of having to execute a complete about face when the delegates to the Geneva conference take off their coats and get down to the business of reaching a limitation treaty. For five years Ambassador Gibson has fought the budgetary limitation plan as grossly unfair to this country and on four separate occasions he has gone on record at the sessions of the preparatory commission for the league's disarmament conference as stating the United States never could accept the budgetary method.

War and navy department officials and experts have been flatly opposed to the budgetary method of limiting armaments since the preparatory commissions of the league began holding sessions in 1926. During the preparations for the conference this year the experts for the two services concentrated their efforts toward holding the state department in line, despite the efforts of American pacifist organizations and European sponsors of budgetary limitation.

Flirting with Idea.

Indications that their efforts were failing began to develop some weeks ago. It was learned then that the state department was flirting with the idea of adapting the budgetary plan to the American program calling for direct limitation by setting definite limits on the number and tonnages of warships and on the number and tonnage of land weapons and war materials.

When Charles G. Dawes arrived in Washington to take over the chairmanship of the American delegation, war and navy experts urged the delegates to oppose the budgetary plan. Only a few hearing were held, however, the American delegation leaving for Geneva with comparatively little preparation. Then Gen. Dawes dropped out to head the new reconstruction corporation and Secretary Stimson took over the chairmanship.

Departments Opposed.

Now it transpires that the state department believes it will be possible to work out a successful limitation method which will combine the budgetary system with the American system. The war and navy departments remain flatly opposed to application of this system, whereby each branch of national defense would be limited by international treaty in the amount it could expend annually.

It is understood that one compromise plan would provide that United States expenditure for defense, especially the land forces, would not be restricted unless the size of these establishments were raised above their present levels.

The army and navy have opposed the budgetary methods because of the belief it would tend to freeze both establishments at their present levels. Even if this country were permitted to spend only as much in the future as it has during the last few years, it is argued, this program would not permit of any modernization of the army or any real improvement of the navy.

U. S. Opposition Voiced.

Ambassador Gibson at Geneva in 1930 said this country could not adopt the budgetary plan because we felt it was impractical in operation and open to evasion.

Under a strict budgetary plan, the army, navy and air services would be allotted a fixed annual sum by treaty which they could not exceed. The most pressure is being brought at present to have this country adopt the budgetary plan for limiting land warfare material. Because of the different budgeting methods employed by the various governments American officials have always held that it would be impossible to tell exactly what each government was spending on its armaments.

BANKERS REACH AGREEMENT ON GERMAN CREDITS

Payment Expected to Be Extended a Year.

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—(AP)—An agreement of Germany's creditors on more than one billion dollars in short term credits, frozen here, has been reached with their debtors.

Pending final perusal of lawyers representing both sides, who worked all last night, the terms cannot be published. The agreement was drawn in English and translators are putting it into German and French.

An American spokesman denied reports appearing in the German press which purported to reveal the lines of the agreement. Financial circles envisaged an extension of the credits for a year upon payment of 5 to 7 per cent, but the rate of interest chargeable on the balance was a matter of guesswork.

100 U. S. Banks Involved.

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—American banks with foreign connections reported today that they had not received formal word that negotiations over Germany's short term credits had reached a final agreement.

One hundred banks of this country are represented at the Berlin conferences by A. H. Wiggin, chairman of Chase National bank of New York. Their participation in German credits approximates $600,000,000, or half of Germany's total obligations of this kind.

Spokesmen for the American group have indicated that they favor an extension, presumably on a 6 per cent interest basis. A recent extension was granted to German debtors by a London bank on this basis for a full year, it was recently reported in a private cable to a New York representative of a large British bank.

ITALY FIGHTS DELAY

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Jan. 21.—The inability of the European powers to reach an agreement permitting a reparations conference to be held at Lausanne on the scheduled date, Jan. 25, caused dismay in Italy today and gave rise to fears that the tension existing over war debts and reparations will have an unfavorable effect on the outcome of the Geneva disarmament conference, which is scheduled to open Feb. 2.

Diplomatic exchanges are continuing between Rome, London and Paris, and it is understood here that the Italians are urging that the reparations conference be held at the earliest possible date. Italy is opposed to a postponement until after the expiration of the Hoover moratorium, as the French have suggested, and to which suggestion the British apparently are inclining. The Italian viewpoint is that the situation will not be improved by a long postponement.

Ready to Meet Immediately.

It was said tonight that the Italian delegates are ready to go to Lausanne immediately, but are pessimistic about the possibility of opening the meeting on Monday. Foreign Minister Grandi will leave Rome Saturday for Geneva to attend the first meeting on Monday of the league of nations' council. He will stay to attend the disarmament conference.

The rest of the Italian disarmament delegation, consisting of the three ministers of war, navy and aviation, together with about forty experts, will leave on Jan. 30 for Geneva.

On the eve of the Geneva meeting, the Fascist press today reported French activities to convert the protectorate of Tunis into a formidable armed camp. Tunis points directly at Sicily, and the French have a large fortified naval base at Bizerta, Tunis.

Mount Guns on Coast.

According to the Naples paper Il Mattino, ships loaded with war materials and heavy cannon are being unloaded at night and the whole projecting peninsula of Ghamart, in Tunis, is being converted into a fortress of trenches and strategic roads, while batteries are being mounted all along the coast.

At the same time an Italian naval expert, who signed himself "Sirius," writing in the military publication the Armed Forces, warned the Italian public against expecting that any great economic rehabilitation may be gained from reductions in military budgets which might be effected at Geneva.

Negotiations Break Down.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A definite breakdown of Anglo-French efforts to arrive at a common agreement on the reparations question was indicated tonight in an official announcement that Prime Minister MacDonald will not accept an invitation from Premier Laval to go to France to discuss the situation "owing to the approach of the parliamentary session and other preoccupations."

GERMANY BRANDS CHARGE THAT SHE IS ARMING A "LIE"

War Minister Assails French General.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—A protest, couched in strong terms, was issued by Gen. Wilhelm Groener, minister of war and interior, today in reply to French charges that Germany is arming secretly.

"French generals who assert that Germany is arming secretly are lying," he said. "When they speak of an army of attack, they must be thinking of their own forces, because no military man can call the small reichswehr such an army.

"Frenchmen who say that German industries and German workers could suddenly be switched to the manufacture of arms and ammunition and other military equipment deliberately forget that huge French bombing squads could be all over Germany in less time than it would take the workers to readjust themselves to their new work.

Not a Single War Plane.

"Germany has not a single army plane to put beside the thousands of French planes built for military purposes.

"The complaint that children are being taught a thirst for revenge is unjustified, since the German constitution prescribes the teaching of a spirit of international reconciliation. But the treatment accorded Germans by France, treatment of which German children are suffering the same as their parents, is bound to undermine this spirit of reconciliation. As to school books, we should be happy if the French school books were one particle as careful of the truth as the German ones are.

"The German military budget for 1930-'31 was $170,000,000. This last year it was much lower. French expenses for the army were more than $550,000,000 last year and more than $720,000,000 for this year. We shall continue to demand justice on the question of armaments, reparations and safety regardless of French propaganda."

Negotiate Political Truce.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—Negotiations were inaugurated among the various reichstag groups today for the proclamation of a year of political truce to be dedicated to rebuilding the fatherland.

If the negotiations succeed, President von Hindenburg will be confronted with the duty of affixing his signature to an emergency decree suspending all elections due in Germany this year and thereby decreeing the prolongation of his own term.

FINLAND AND RUSSIA SIGN PEACE TREATY TO LAST THREE YEARS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Jan. 21.—A nonaggression treaty, effective for three years and guaranteeing the existing frontiers on the basis of the Dorpat treaty, was signed here today by representatives of Finland and Russia. Each nation agrees to refrain from aggression, and not to assist a third party in the event of aggression against either. The Dorpat treaty was signed at Dorpat, Estonia, on Aug. 14, 1920, and recognizes the independence of Finland from Russia. It also declared an end to hostilities between them and ceded to Finland a block of territory affording her an outlet to the Arctic ocean.

GERMAN JOBLESS SIX MILLION, AN ALL TIME RECORD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—More than 6,000,000 men and women are without jobs in Germany today. Unemployment has reached the highest figure ever recorded. On Jan. 15 the number of unemployed listed by the national agencies totaled 5,966,000. Since then the 6,000,000 mark has been passed.

Since this is almost 10 per cent of the German population, experts reckon that this means—if you include dependents—that at least 20 per cent of Germany's population is living on doles or charity.

doles or charity. Berlin alone has 600,000 unemployed of its population of 4,288,000.

With the increasing unemployment, production has continued to drop. The monthly average value in the past year was $833,000,000, according to the statistics of the National Research institute. Three years ago it was twice that amount.

QUIZ EX-BANK HEAD ON LOAN TO EXAMINER

William O. J. Hattstaedt, president of the Lake View State bank for six months before its close, was a witness at the hearing yesterday in Judge Michael Feinberg's court to discover hidden assets of the bank. Hattstaedt is now under indictment on a charge of making false statements to the state auditor in connection with the condition of his bank.

The judge questioned the ex-bank president about his $149,000 loan to Charles Meyer, former chief examiner for the Chicago Clearing house. Hattstaedt denied the allegation of the judge that the loan was a bribe for Meyer to cover up the true condition of the bank.

Hattstaedt said he did not know that there was a strict rule of the clearing house that no member bank was to make any loans to the chief examiner or his assistants without the written consent of the clearing house heads. He has been a banker for 24 years.

NURSES PREFER THE FINER THINGS IN FURNITURE

County to Probe Spending for Luxuries.

The purchase of twin beds at $200, love seats at $50, needlepoint footstools at $30, and other high priced articles for the Cook County School of Nurses, 509 South Honoré street, aroused the wrath of members of the county board yesterday. A committee of five commissioners was appointed to investigate what Commissioner Charles H. Weber termed "shameful extravagance."

The county turns approximately $100,000 over to the school each month and the school makes its own purchases of supplies. Noticing recently a list of the expenditures authorized by Miss Laura R. Logan, dean of nurses, Commissioner Weber came forward yesterday with a resolution authorizing the investigating committee. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 10 to 1.

Lists School Expenditures.

"Consider the nurses of the Cook county school," said Mr. Weber in introducing his resolution. "Solomon in all his glory—you know the rest. With county employés three months behind in their salaries and other departments striving for the utmost economy, here are some of the purchases made recently by the school."

He then gave a list, including the following expenditures:

Italian lace tablecloth	$ 45
Venetian tablecloth	75
1 couch	279
Needlepoint footstool	30
Chippendale arm chair	112
Mahogany love seat	50
Twin beds	200
1 wing chair	90
1 needlepoint chair	80
1 needlepoint screen	50
1 antique wall leaf table	115
Singing instructions	41
1 dozen napkins	22
20 goblets	36

A number of other items were listed, including finger bowls at $1.70 each, tablecloths at $34 and $20 each, napkins at $3.50 each, sherbet glasses at $1.70 each, plates at $2 each, lamps at $27 each, 24 chairs at $11 each, and goblets at $2 each.

"What are the twin beds for?" inquired Commissioner George A. Miller. There was laughter but no answer.

Amelia Sears Raps Move.

"I think we are doing an incalculable injustice to the nurses by giving this matter publicity before we investigate the facts," protested Commissioner Amelia Sears, one of the three woman commissioners. "This is just a half baked, hysterical attack upon a condition which, of course, is deplorable if true."

"You can call it hysterical if you want to," rejoined Commissioner Weber. "This list is made up from actual bills rendered by stores. If the nurses can eat off $75 tablecloths, I think the county washwomen should have them, too. I'm informed that Miss Logan is having a penthouse apartment built on top of the school building for herself."

"And a $279 couch!" burst out Weber.

Only One Dissenting Vote.

The resolution was adopted with Commissioner Sears casting the only dissenting vote. Commissioner Weber was made chairman of the investigating committee and Commissioners Miller, Walter J. Labuy, Peter M. Kelly, and Mrs. Edward J. Fleming were appointed the other four members.

Frank Shaw, chairman of the board of directors which controls the school, said he was confident that the investigation would show no needless expenditures. Miss Logan, the dean, was reported "not in" at the school. One of her assistants said she was out of the city and another said she was not available.

JAPAN DEMANDS CHINA APOLOGIZE AND PAY DAMAGES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Jan. 22 [Friday].—Kuramatsu Mural, Japanese consul general, and Rear Admiral Koichi Shiosawa, commander of the Japanese Yangtze naval squadron, today delivered an ultimatum to Chinese authorities in Shanghai. They threatened to "take appropriate steps to protect the rights and interests of the Japanese empire," unless conditions of the ultimatum are fulfilled.

The ultimatum demanded dissolution of the Anti-Japanese association, payment of medical expenses for Japanese victims of clashes of the past several days, apology for their injuries and arrest of the guilty persons. To support these demands Japan today dispatched two cruisers, an aircraft carrier and a number of destroyers carrying a large landing party to Shanghai from Kure. These forces are due here Saturday.

Since the Chinese regard the Japanese as the offenders in several of the outbreaks, in which a Chinese policeman and a Japanese were killed, the Chinese are aroused against the demands. Trouble is anticipated, since the Japanese residents of Shanghai have called a huge massmeeting for Saturday to protest the anti-Japanese boycott.

10 CENT STORE BRIDE DESERTED; WINS DIVORCE

The million dollar baby whom William Sandford found in a five and ten cent store was granted a divorce yesterday by Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude. The wife, Mrs. Mildred Sandford, 6319 Ellis avenue, is back at her old job, playing the piano and plugging songs in another nickel and dime establishment, she testified.

She was doing that in January, 1928, when Sandford, who was the manager of the store, became enamored of her crooning of "I Can't Give You Anything but Love, Baby," and married her, she said. But on Feb. 23, last year, she charged, his ardor had cooled, and when he went to Texas to manage a five and ten cent store there he left her behind.

She won a decree by default.

Blond Gungirl Aids in Holdup of Grocery Store

A blond gungirl in a mink coat, assisted by a male accomplice, took $10 yesterday in a holdup of the National Tea store at 6322 West North avenue. The girl was about 18 years old. She and her companion both produced revolvers after strolling into the shop, and the girl pushed Miss Catherine Kopke, a clerk, to one side as she stepped to the cash register and took its contents.

2 GUN CROWLEY DIES IN CHAIR AS POLICE SLAYER

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Francis [Two Gun] Crowley, 20 year old murderer of Patrolman Frederick Hirsch near North Merrick, L. I., on the night of May 5, was put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison shortly after 11 o'clock tonight. He entered the death chamber at 11:02 and was pronounced dead at 11:07. He at no time broke down.

The slayer's last day was spent quietly—much of it visiting with members of his family—and there was none of the sneering braggadocio which he had worn earlier.

Crowley refused to see Helen Walsh, the girl who was with him in the automobile the night he killed Patrolman Hirsch. She had a court order to see Crowley provided Warden Lawes was willing.

Mr. Lawes referred it to Crowley and he angrily refused.

"I hear she's hanging out with a cop," said Crowley, "and she wants to sell the story to a newspaper."

Crowley had built up a reputation as a "bad man," which he tried to live up to when he first arrived in prison, but in recent months his demeanor had changed and he had become friendly with Warden Lawes and his keepers.

Crowley was visited for several hours during the afternoon and evening by his foster mother, Mrs. Annie Crowley, and four foster sisters. The last visit, in which the relatives were separated from the convicted youth by a wire screen, lasted from 5 o'clock until a few minutes after 9 tonight. The women were weeping when they emerged.

Crowley walked into the chamber with Father John P. McCaffery, prison chaplain, and five guards. As the procession approached Crowley was heard to murmur, "I don't mind it." He wore a grin, but his face was pale.

Crowley seated himself in the chair without assistance and in a calm but unnaturally high voice said, "My love to mother and tell Mrs. Lawes I appreciate all she did for me." Then he waved his hand toward one of the guards and asked "How is it, Sarge?"

After the electrode had been attached to the calf of his right leg he complained that it was not tight enough. He made one more request that his love be sent to his mother before the hum of the dynamo signalled the end.

CROWE'S LARGE BANK DEPOSITS SHOWN IN TRIAL

Burning of Canal District Records Shown.

Testimony to the effect that the bank records of Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the sanitary district board, were removed or destroyed and that part of the records of the district during the period were shoved into a furnace occupied the major part of the session in the graft conspiracy trial yesterday in Chief Justice Harry Fisher's Criminal court. Crowe and six of his former associates are on trial.

HIRAM KADISH.

The testimony regarding the destruction or secreting of the Crowe bank records from his own bank, the First National bank of Oak Park, now closed, came out while Hiram Kadish, an auditor, was on the stand giving a summary of the bank deposits of three former sanitary district trustees and a former minor official, showing a total of $1,165,742.43 for a two year period. The total salaries for these four men for the same period was $55,000. Other bank records to come later in the trial will boost the total considerably, according to Prosecutor John E. Northup.

Reconstructs Bank Account.

Kadish said that despite the destruction of the records he was able, through papers left behind, to reconstruct the account of Crowe.

The auditor said he found some deposit slips, which were introduced in evidence, and some teller's "scratcher" sheets which showed that amounts totaling $418,295 were credited to an account in the C ledger division. However, these amounts were not shown to have been posted in the ledger. Several pages from that ledger, he said, appeared to have been cut out when he first examined the books, several years ago. The C ledger shows no account for Crowe, although the deposit slips, interest slips, and the testimony of the cashier of the bank showed that Crowe had an account.

Cashier Tells of Deposits.

William Weatherston, who was the cashier before the bank closed, said that he remembered making out deposit slips for Crowe and that on the occasion the defendant gave him some $10,000 bills to deposit in the bank. The largest deposit was $61,000.

The witness identified several deposit slips showing that T. J. Connolly, the former purchasing agent for the district, who was arrested recently in San Diego, Cal., after a three year search, had made two deposits of about $3,000 to Crowe's account. The summary of the bank deposits introduced yesterday is as follows:

T. J. Crowe	$ 648,040
Marie Crowe [Crowe's wife]	68,750
Frank J. Link	99,100
Lawrence F. King [deceased]	33,586
John T. Miller	313,265
Total	$1,165,742

Link and King, as well as Crowe, were formerly trustees of the district. Miller was superintendent of the permanent plants and structures division.

Attorney Albert Fink for the defense objected to the competency of the bank testimony, but agreed to allow it to go in by stipulation.

Burning of Records Shown.

The disposal of district records was disclosed in the testimony of Frank J. Lynch, 3646 Herndone avenue, a former employé of the Slater Fireproof Storage company. Vouchers showing that this concern collected $155,191 from the district treasury were introduced. Prosecutor Northup singled out two vouchers which showed that the company was paid $60 for the services of five men to burn records on two occasions at the end of 1927.

"Did you get any instructions?" Prosecutor Northup asked Lynch, who was in charge of the crew.

"I was instructed by Hawley and Hinze in the engineering department not to sell the records for old paper or to let the janitor of the building get his hands on them. I was instructed to burn them myself."

The witness said that the papers, which were placed in the Standard Oil Company building furnaces, appeared to him to deal with electrical contracts.

Prosecutor Nothup announced yesterday that because of some technicalities he will be unable to go into the sewage disposal building contracts and the ornamental lighting system on the north shore channel road, where lights were installed at a cost of $1,000 a post, or a total of more than $700,000. He will not be able to show the alleged manipulations of the bank accounts of the U. S. A. Electrical company, of which George Chamberlin, now under indictment on a charge of income tax dodging, was president.

The accounts, as announced months ago, show large withdrawals from Chamberlin's account about the same time that large deposits were made by some of the defendants.

THREE HELD IN KIDNAPING OF DENVER MAN

Denver, Colo., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Police tonight announced they were holding Kenneth Coffman, 28, Denver, for questioning in connection with the kidnaping for ransom of Benjamin P. Bower, bakery manager.

Another man and a woman were detained at police headquarters for a check of their movements in the past 48 hours. Meanwhile, officers sought a motive for the abduction other than ransom. Trouble with former bakery employés was investigated.

Two hundred firemen will make a house to house search of the city tomorrow, officials decided.

The grief stricken wife of the bakery manager, who was kidnaped Tuesday night from his home by two men, has offered to pay "any reasonable sum" for his safe return.

CALL 800 UNION CHIEFS TO HEAR RAIL PLEA TODAY

Willard to Ask Pay Cut at General Meeting.

in the latter part of 1931 and thus far in 1932 have been even larger than those that had previously occurred. Total earnings in November, 1931, the latest month for which statistics are available, were 39 per cent less than in November, 1929. Total loadings of freight cars in 1931 were 29 per cent less than in 1929, while in the first two weeks of 1932 they were 37 per cent less than in the first two weeks of 1929. Passenger earnings in 1931 were 36 per cent less than in 1929, while in October, 1931, the latest month for which these statistics are available, they were 42 per cent less than in October, 1929.

"The managements of the railways, with the full coöperation of the employés, have made large reductions in operating expenses. Total operating expenses in 1929 were $4,561,000,000; in 1930, $3,976,000,000, and in 1931, $3,275,000,000. Operating expenses in 1931 were $1,286,000,000, or 28 per cent less than in 1929.

"According to the statistics of the interstate commerce commission, the average number of railway employés in 1929 was 1,686,769; in 1930 it was 1,510,688, and in 1931 it was about 1,285,000.

"The total compensation paid to employés in 1929 was $2,941,000,000; in 1930 it was $2,590,000,000, while in 1931 it was about $2,150,000,000. The total compensation paid in 1931 was $791,000,000 less than in 1929, a reduction of 27 per cent.

"Attention should be called to the fact that while the total pay roll in 1931 was 27 per cent less than in 1929, the total operating expenses were 28 per cent less. These figures show that the reduction in the pay roll has been relatively almost the same as the reduction in total operating expenses, and that, therefore, all classes of expenses have been reduced in almost equal proportion.

"To make improvements and carry on operations the railways have to make large purchases of equipment, materials and supplies. The best information obtainable indicates that their purchases were reduced from $1,350,500,000 in 1929 to $639,000,000 in 1931, or 53 per cent."

Mr. Willard said the net railway operating income declined from $1,275,000,000 in 1929 to $741,000,000 in 1931, or 58 per cent.

He explained that despite the enormous reduction in operating expenses, many of the carriers are threatened with bankruptcy because of inability to meet fixed charges. He said the total available to meet fixed charges in 1931 was $784,000,000, whereas the interest on the funded debt alone was $495,000,000 and the total amount of fixed charges was $695,000,000, leaving only $89,000,000 total net income.

"An industry that is unable to meet fixed charges with a reasonable margin is virtually without credit, and is, therefore, unable to raise new capital on justifiable terms to meet bond maturities or to make improvements," Mr. Willard continued. "An industry that cannot make improvements cannot employ men in making improvements. Consequently until the credit of the railroad industry, which has been so seriously impaired, is restored, the ability of the railways to give employment will be greatly restricted."

MARRYING NEW YORK CLERK, INDICTED FOR FEES, DEFENDS THEM

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—James J. McCormick, Tammany district leader and deputy city clerk, announced today that he had been indicted by the additional grand jury for accepting gratuities from couples he married in the municipal chapel.

Mr. McCormick said that he would go into court immediately to ask bail. The deputy city clerk said he had no intention of resigning.

"I've not been convicted yet," said Mr. McCormick, who testified before the Hofstadter committee that he made $16,000 a year in gratuities in his position. "This is an indictment which I propose to answer in due time and in an adequate manner."

ROCHE TO START DRIVE ON DYEING RACKETS TODAY

Dr. Squires Reveals Fund Pledged by Cleaners.

Heads of the special staff established by State's Attorney Swanson to investigate racketeering in the cleaning and dyeing industry and track down the slayers of Benjamin Rosenberg, independent cleaner, received their final orders yesterday and will start action today.

The state's attorney summoned to his office his chief investigator, Pat Roche, and Assistant State's Attorney Edwin C. Dufficy, nitherto of the racket bureau, and told them the investigation was to be carried through until the Rosenberg killers were found and the terrorists within the industry were driven from cover.

Roche declined to discuss his plans, except to say that no special investigators will be employed. He said he had sufficient men in his present organization to carry out the assignment Mr. Swanson has given him.

Reveals Fund for Campaign.

The extent of the financial support pledged to the anti-racket campaign by the Cleaners and Dyers institute was disclosed for the first time by Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, dictator of the institute, upon his return from the national convention of the industry at Cleveland.

The institute, said Dr. Squires, promised Mr. Swanson any amount necessary up to $5,000 a month until the campaign was brought to a successful conclusion. The state's attorney confirmed the statement and Roche said he expected to use the contributions to meet expenses.

Irving Abarbanell, non-member of the institute and proprietor of twenty cut rate cleaning establishments in western suburbs, took issue with certain remarks made by Dr. Squires at the Cleveland convention concerning independent cleaners.

Seeking to justify the minimum cleaning price of $1.25 a garment maintained by institute members, Dr. Squires declared the independents were able to show a profit on a lower price only because they paid lower wages and refused to pay the damage claims of customers.

Independent Claims Fair Profit.

"My regular cleaning charge is 79 cents and on certain sale days my shops clean two garments for 50 cents apiece," said Abarbanell. "On those prices I can make a fair profit and I daresay the financial condition of my company is stronger than most of the institute members."

Abarbanell, who has been threatened with death for his cut rate policies, agreed with Dr. Squires that those prices brought him an increased volume, which reduced his overhead.

"But he's wrong when he says the independents pay lower wages and fail to satisfy damage claims," Abarbanell declared. "I pay some of my employés more than the union scale, others less. I have the advantage of the institute members in that I can pay a worker exactly what he is worth."

On Damage Payments.

As for the alleged failure to pay damage claims, Abarbanell, who has suffered more than most cleaners in this respect, said he could produce affidavits from scores of customers showing that the claim on every garment damaged by gangster bombs and acids had been paid in full.

"The public cannot be deceived in this matter," said Abarbanell. "They soon find out whether a cleaner meets his claims. If he does, he will retain the business, and if he doesn't, no institute can retain the business for him."

ABANDON ALKY AT LAKE FOREST AFTER SMASHUP

An automobile loaded with alcohol was abandoned at Waukegan road and Deerpath avenue, Lake Forest, yesterday morning after its driver had been injured in a collision.

The car, bound south, crashed into a towing truck belonging to Laudimar Rause of Lake Forest. The driver, who was cut and bruised, got into a car which was following his and was taken from the scene. Rause said that the man in the second car had taken the license plates from the one involved in the accident.

Plates believed to have been the same were found some distance south of Deerpath avenue. They had been issued to Lawrence Dublinski, 4653 West Madison street. Chief of Police Tiffany obtained warrants charging Dublinski with transporting liquor and with leaving the scene of an accident.

FORMER Y. M. C. A. SECRETARY CAN'T GET BOND; JAILED

Arthur Lachs, 4520 Hazel street, a former Y. M. C. A. secretary, was placed in the county jail yesterday because of his inability to post bond on a writ of ne exeat issued against him at the request of Mrs. Myrtle Lachs, 2306 Kirkland avenue, who is suing him for divorce. She charges that she raided his apartment and found another woman living there as his wife.

Lachs, his wife told Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude, was formerly a secretary at the Irving Park Y. M. C. A. and later took a similar position at Hibbing, Minn. He lost the latter job and brought her back to Chicago to live with her mother, saying that he would provide a home for her as soon as he got work, she declared.

STEAL $349,000 JEWELS, POSING AS BOOTLEGGERS

Hold Up Family of Art Connoisseur.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Three holdup men posing as bootleggers gained entrance to the home of Harry Glemby, wealthy art connoisseur, on East 67th street today, bound Mr. and Mrs. Glemby and their daughter, Olga, and two servants and escaped with cash and jewels estimated to be worth $349,000. They were insured.

It was all over in less than five minutes. Another minute or two and the trio would have been caught at the door, for detectives from the East 67th street station, two blocks away, were warned by telephone and were on their way to the house while the thieves were at work.

Mrs. Glemby was at the telephone, talking to a friend, when the three men burst into the living room with guns drawn. She screamed and dropped the receiver. Her friend heard the scream and, in alarm, called police headquarters, which switched the call to the nearest precinct station.

Robbers Ring Doorbell.

The police got the whole story quickly. About 10:30 o'clock some one rang the bell of the service entrance and the door was automatically opened from the Glemby apartment.

Three men, each one carrying what appeared to be cases of liquor, but which turned out later to be empty bottles, came up the servants' stairs and rang the bell for admittance to the apartment itself.

Fred Hamayer, the butler, opened the door a few inches and asked them what they wanted. One man whispered confidentially that they had some "wet goods" that Mr. Glemby had ordered.

Slug Butler and Enter.

The butler refused to let them in, whereupon the man nearest the door drew a pistol and brought the butt down on the butler's head. He fell senseless and the three thrust his body aside and went in.

At that moment Frieda Miller, the governess, was passing through the halls and she saw the trio with guns in their hands. She screamed, and Mrs. Glemby, at the telephone in the drawing room, caught a glimpse of them and screamed, too.

One of the bandits produced a coil of wire from his pockets and the Glembys and the butler were quickly bound. The thieves worked hurriedly and were soon on their way with their loot.

4 GUNMEN ROB WOMAN IN HOME; GET $4,500 GEMS

Four gunmen invaded the home of Mrs. Helen McNamara at 3016 Grant street, Evanston, and robbed her of $4,500 worth of jewelry yesterday. When she hesitated to obey the bandits' commands one of the men slapped her in the face.

Entrance to the home was gained by one of the gang who appeared at a side door in the uniform of a delivery boy. He admitted his confederates. One bandit guarded Seabron Blackwell, the butler, while the other three, with drawn revolvers, went directly to the boudoir on the second floor. One gunman ripped a sleeve out of Mrs. McNamara's kimono as he pulled two gold bracelets from her arm. After looting the jewel box of brooches, rings, and bracelets, the gang threw Mrs. McNamara and her maid, Mrs. Bertha Schumacker, into separate closets. The closet doors were not locked.

As the bandits descended the stairs, William C. Brandt of Niles Center, a real messenger, knocked at the rear door. He and the butler were forced to lie face downward on the floor. The bandits escaped in a car.

Russia Starts Campaign to Halt Foreign Imports

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Jan. 21.—An energetic campaign against further imports by Russia of foreign machines and materials has begun. The soviet press announces that the communist party has provided large bonuses for workers inventing machinery and materials that can be substituted for imported articles. The supreme council on national economy issued instructions to the soviet industries to report what machines, parts and accessories are now being imported that can be manufactured in Russia.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

BOMBAY POLICE ATTACK MOB OF GANDHI'S REBELS

Twenty Wounded by Lathi Charges.

BY EGBERT SWENSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, Jan. 22 [Friday]. — A great multitude of the followers of Mahatma Gandhi, India's imprisoned Nationalist leader, swarmed on Maiden green here late yesterday afternoon in a demonstration for the mahatma's release despite the official ban on such meeting and determined efforts by several hundred policemen to keep the park clear. Between 15,000 and 50,000 persons milled about the green at various times.

The demonstration was a remarkable example of nonviolence. It was also interesting as showing the cautious method the police use to combat passivity with lathis. It was marred at its conclusion when a gang of hoodlums threw rocks at the police station across the street.

Twenty Hurt in Attack.

The rock throwing signaled a final lathi charge in which the police made their first earnest use of the long stout quarterstaffs. Twenty persons were wounded. Two old men were innocent victims, their faces being badly cut and bruised. Many arrests were made.

The row had its inception in the announcement by Bombay merchants and brokers' associations that a meeting to protest against Gandhi's imprisonment and to further the boycott of British goods would be held at 5 p. m. It was forbidden by the police, but before 5 o'clock the park swarmed with a casually strolling mass, almost every one wearing the white Gandhi cap.

Suddenly at 5 o'clock the Nationalist colors were thrust high and carried by a swarthy 16 year old youth. It was a signal for a rush in the flag's direction. Police, led by their officers, charged. The mass gave way barely and then closed in behind the advancing lathi charge.

Cry Boycott Slogan.

In the meantime there was a continuous din of yells, catcalls, whistling, and booing, constantly cut by staccato cries of "Boycott! Boycott!"

The entire two hour performance was a repetition of this procedure. A flag—the same one—would be hoisted in some distant part of the park. The masses dashed to this new rallying point, resulting in a new lathi charge by the harassed and perspiring police.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

ALLAHABAD, Jan. 21.—In a riot reported from Jagannath Pur today a mob was fired upon by order of the police and one was killed and six injured. Armed with sticks and brickbats, a crowd of several hundred attacked a body of unarmed civil police. The police, however, were accompanied by landholders with guns. After a vain attempt to beat off the attack, the subinspector in charge requested the landholders to fire.

Urges Women to Shed Veils.

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The government called upon Indian women today to come out of their "purdah"—oriental seclusion—to help curb Nationalist agitators.

Deciding that the best way to deal with the women pickets among Mahatma Gandhi's followers was to employ their own kinswomen as "policemen," the authorities inserted an advertisement in the local newspapers offering 20 cents a day, a free uniform and free lodging to women recruits for the police force, "without distinction of cast or creed."

SENATE PUSHES 375 MILLIONS AS JOBLESS RELIEF

Report of Committee Is Favorable.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The legislative program for economic relief made another advance today, while a proposal for 375 millions in relief to unemployed, which lacks administration support, was pushed forward in the senate.

The bill to give the federal land banks 125 million dollars of additional working capital received its final approval at the hands of congress and now needs but the President's signature.

The most important measure in the program—that creating the reconstruction finance corporation—was reported out of the conference committee of the two houses; with the prospects good for its enactment into law by Saturday, or by the first of next week at the latest.

And in a special message President Hoover asked the house of representatives to initiate and speed to passage the 500 million dollar appropriation necessary to finance the corporation in order that the "important operations of the corporation may be commenced at the earliest possible date."

Unemployment Bill Advances.

Thus the administration's program forged ahead. But as it pushed along on a way designed to extend government guaranteed credit on a scale never before contemplated, it jostled elbows with a new bill, approved by the senate committee on manufactures and introduced in the senate today, which embodies the ideas of the senate radicals on what federal relief ought to be.

This new bill would donate to the states, between now and June 30, 1933, 375 million dollars from the federal treasury to be used for relief.

It entered the senate, sponsored by Senators Robert M. La Follette Jr., Radical Republican of Wisconsin, and Edward P. Costigan, Colorado Democrat. It is a combination of earlier bills introduced by the two senators, and is the outgrowth of hearings conducted under Senator La Follette's chairmanship which brought witnesses to the capital from all the country's chief centers of distress.

"In the light of the evidence considered," said the report accompanying the bill, the sum proposed to be appropriated is "conservative." The bill provides that 125 million dollars shall be contributed during the remainder of this fiscal year, and 250 millions during the fiscal year 1933.

Provides for Distribution.

Forty per cent of the total amount appropriated would go to the states according to population, and the remaining 60 per cent would be apportioned, in general, according to need. States are required to raise as large funds as possible locally in order to receive the 40 per cent based on population.

Administration of the fund would be vested in a board composed of two members appointed by the President and the chief of the children's bureau, the director of extension work in the department of agriculture, and the chief of the vocational rehabilitation service, the last three being named because they have had "the greatest amount of experience in administering coöperative arrangements with the states."

Specifying relief through new credit to be extended to banks, railroads and agricultural and other institutions, rather than directly to charitable organizations, the bill creating the Reconstruction Finance corporation emerged from the conference committee in a compromise form that reconciled the divergent features of the measure as passed by the two houses.

Radical Opposition.

When the senate's turn to act arrives, however, the insurgent opposition, which has been led by Senator John J. Blaine of Wisconsin, may again crop up. In that case the concurrence of the senate may be postponed until Saturday or next Monday.

The bill came from conference in a compromise form that reconciled the divergent features of the measure as passed by the two houses.

When the conference version appeared it became known that one of its provisions would upset reports that the President desired to appoint Edward N. Hurley of Chicago and Bernard M. Baruch of New York as two of the corporation's directors.

As the bill now stands it contains a house amendment specifying that not more than one director may be appointed from any one federal reserve district. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago and Eugene Meyer of New York, governor of the federal reserve board, have already been named by President Hoover as the corporation's president and chairman, respectively.

The bill also carries the senate proviso making the nonpartisan rule apply to all seven directors, the secretary of the treasury, governor of the federal reserve board, and farm loan commissioner, who serve ex officio, as well as to the four members appointed from outside the government.

PREVAILING WAGE ORDERED BY HOOVER ON BUILDING DEALS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—President Hoover moved today to keep contractors on government buildings from paying lower wages than other employers in the same community.

By an executive order, it was decreed that stipulations of the Bacon-Davis prevailing wage scale law be written into all public buildings contracts, along with a clause permitting cancellation of contracts if the prevailing wage is not paid.

Existing contracts do not include the cancellation stipulation of the prohibition of rebates as will the new agreements.

Secretary Doak analyzed the new executive order for the house labor committee and argued against new laws, holding the executive order inefficient.

Chairman Connery, however, insisted that the prevailing wage provision should extend to all other forms of government contracts, such as that on river levees and flood control projects.

"I will introduce a separate bill to do that," he said.

WAR SECRETARY IN CITY TO TALK ON CREDIT PLAN

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley arrived in Chicago yesterday, full of praise for President Hoover and optimism over the administration's chances for another term.

The secretary came to Chicago primarily to address the Commercial club on the Reconstruction corporation tonight, but he is en route to his home in Tulsa, Okla., and he expressed the hope that his trip, as well as everything he does until the next election, will have political consequence. The management of President Hoover's campaign in Oklahoma in 1928 was his first political experience.

Secretary Hurley ascribed criticism of the President to his lack of showmanship, and asserted that a Roosevelt with Hoover's capacity for doing would be the idol of the land even in the present economic strife.

Guest of E. N. Hurley.

Last evening the secretary was entertained at a dinner at 3400 Sheridan road in the home of Edward N. Hurley, war time chairman of the United States shipping board and chairman of the committee which obtained both major national political conventions for Chicago in June.

Friends of long standing, the Hurleys are not related. The Chicago manufacturer was prominently mentioned as a prospective director of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, but the selection of Gen. Dawes as president eliminated him, for two directors may not be chosen from the same federal reserve district.

Visits Fort Sheridan Today.

Secretary Hurley will visit Fort Sheriday today and is also scheduled to view the site of the Century of Progress.

Lieut. W. E. Liebel, aid to Brig. Gen. Frank C. Bolles, commandant at Fort Sheridan, said last night that Secretary Hurley would leave Chicago by motor about 10 o'clock in the morning and would arrive at the fort at 11. The program includes a salute, a review of the 2,000 troops, consisting of cavalry, infantry, field artillery, and coast artillery, and a luncheon at the home of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the 6th corps area.

ROOSEVELT MEN LEAN TO RASKOB STATE RUM PLAN

Managers Not Worried by Drys' Warning.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The warning given by the professional drys in their Washington convention that they will not accept any kind of compromise looking to repeal of the eighteenth amendment in the presidential campaign this year is giving the supporters of Gov. Roosevelt little concern.

Although Gov. Roosevelt is credited with sharing the desire of Democratic leaders to avoid a split in the national convention on the prohibition issue, he has given no evidence of yielding to the demands of the ultra-drys.

State Rights Program.

The governor, in his rôle as the leading candidate, and his managers in various parts of the country where he is strongest have not publicly or privately opposed the plan presented by John J. Raskob for lifting the issue out of the campaign by providing for a referendum on the state rights program.

There is evidence, on the contrary, that the Roosevelt managers are about ready to adopt the Raskob plan as their own, convinced that it offers the easy way for getting over the trouble making question. If the dry Roosevelt supporters of the west and south can hold their states in line on that proposition the issue may be regarded as virtually settled in so far as platform making is concerned.

The extreme drys, represented by the Anti-Saloon league and Bishop Cannon, are not likely to cut as much figure in the Democratic convention in June as they did four years ago in Houston, where they forced the dry plank into the platform over the protest of Alfred E. Smith, the party nominee for President.

Smith's Wet Telegram.

After the platform had been adopted Mr. Smith virtually repudiated it in his telegram to the convention, setting forth his own views as being entirely out of sympathy with the declaration therein contained.

Some of the more violent Democratic drys of the south, including Senator Cameron Morrison of North Carolina, said at the recent national committee session in Washington that they must not be held responsible as state party leaders for what happens if the platform contains a wet plank. The belief has prevailed that the southerners would take Roosevelt even on a moderately wet platform as the easy way of getting rid of the religious issue.

One of the big obstacles in Roosevelt's path is holding the dry west and south, from which sections come his main support, in line with the wet eastern states. If he can meet that situation successfully his managers believe nothing can stop him.

JEALOUS SUITOR KILLS GIRL, SELF.

Edgemont, S. D., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Apparently moved by a fit of jealousy, John Vivian, 22, shot and killed Belva Petro, 18 year old high school senior, at her home today and then killed himself.

OPEN FIGHT TO WIN SENATE O.K. OF WILKERSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21. — [Special.]—The fight to win senate confirmation for Federal District Judge James H. Wilkerson's elevation to the Circuit Court of Appeals was begun today before a subcommittee of the senate committee on the judiciary.

Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.] was the first to appear on behalf of the judge who sentenced Al Capone to eleven years in the federal penitentiary. He was there to deny the allegations of labor organizations that Judge Wilkerson is unfit for promotion because of his issuance of labor injunctions, notably in the railway shopmen's strike in 1922.

"The claim has been made," said Senator Glenn, "that Judge Wilkerson has been a friend of the special interests. But on the record of his career I do not believe that intimation is sustained."

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Senator Glenn's Democratic colleague, also appeared, prepared to offer his testimony in Judge Wilkerson's behalf.

Senator Glenn presented a letter written to him by Frank O. Lowden, in which the former Illinois governor declared:

"I think it would be a great misfortune if Judge Wilkerson were not confirmed. He is one of the ablest judges I know of anywhere in the country, is without bias or fear, and would come as near doing exact justice, I think, as any man I know."

No Other Names Presented.

"My endorsement," said Senator Glenn, "came not at Judge Wilkerson's solicitation, but it came supported by people regardless of their station in life, their religion or party affiliation. The Chicago Bar association, representing thousands of leading lawyers, urged his appointment."

"Was any other name presented to the President on this appointment," asked Senator Borah, radical Republican of Idaho and subcommittee chairman.

"I do not believe so," Senator Glenn answered. "It generally was accepted in our state that Wilkerson was the man best fitted for the position."

Senator Glenn read into the record a long list of Judge Wilkerson's achievements, and described him as the father of the Illinois civil service law, and the chairman of the Illinois commerce commission in 1921 "under whose guidance no single decision rendered by the commission was ever reversed by the courts."

As assistant federal prosecutor Judge Wilkerson helped prosecute the $29,000,000 Standard Oil suit, and in this case faced some of the country's foremost lawyers, Senator Glenn recalled.

"Current opinion was that the court was with him," remarked Senator Thomas J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.].

"The courts were usually with him," Senator Glenn shot back.

"But the Standard Oil case resulted in a dud," said Senator John J. Blaine, radical Republican of Wisconsin.

"That was not Wilkerson's fault," said Senator Glenn. "Judge Landis became overenthusiastic."

"I'm not sure whether he did or not," Senator Borah interjected. "Perhaps it was the higher court that was overenthusiastic."

"At any rate," said Senator Glenn, "in that important prosecution, he was not on the side of any special interest, but on the side of the federal government."

Cuban Bill Boosting Taxes on "Necessities" Is Passed

HAVANA, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The senate today approved amendments affixed by the house of representatives to its revenue bill, which taxes many articles of "primary necessity." The measure goes now to the president. It increases taxes on coffee, matches, cigarets, cigaret lighters and gasoline and is expected to produce an additional $500,000 revenue monthly.

HOOVER BACKED FOR 2D TERM BY OHIO G. O. P. BODY

Columbus, O., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Ohio Republican state central committee today indorsed President Hoover for a second term in the White House and gave him what is virtually a free hand in selection of candidates for delegates to the Chicago national convention.

Overwhelming Hoover sentiment among committee members was evidenced by the fact that but two of the 48 votes were cast in opposition to the Hoover proposals, which is construed as insuring the President a solid delegation from Ohio.

Master to Hear Evidence in Gunn-Jones Will Contest

Circuit Judge William V. Brothers yesterday referred to Ald. Jacob M. Arvey, as master in chancery, hearing on the bill for partition by which Maj. George R. Jones seeks to share in the $1,000,000 estate of Mrs. Kittie Gunn-Jones, his wife, who died Sept. 6, 1930, in her home at 4119 Drexel boulevard. A will in which Mrs Gunn-Jones bequeathed the major portion of her property to her husband was admitted to probate, but her relatives, led by two sisters, Mrs. Louie E. Thompson and Mrs. Jessie Koch, are seeking to have the document set aside. They charge undue influence.

COAL BARGAINS

Of course you want the most for your money when you buy coal or coke. But you can't expect to get a bargain in fuel from a sharper or fly-by-nighter no matter what prices he advertises. "They either get their money in advance and disappear, or else deliver poor quality, short weight, and mixed grade," says the Chicago Better Business Bureau, whose office has been flooded by complaints.

Beware of coal bargains! Coal isn't like eggs—you can't count it to find out whether it's all there. You can't smell it or candle it or taste it to make sure it is the quality you ordered.

You can only be sure of getting the coal you want in the quantities you require by buying from a reliable coal merchant who knows his business, buys his own coal, maintains his own yard, and is personally responsible for weighing and delivering the fuel you buy.

There are 240 such reliable coal merchants in the Chicago Coal Merchants Association. Every one of them must deliver an honest dollar's worth of fuel or he could not stay in business.

Every one of them honestly grades the coal he sells you. When you order coal of mixed grades, each kind is weighed separately, its name set down fully and clearly, and opposite the name appears the weight in pounds and not in meaningless proportions.

Finally, clinching your complete satisfaction, the Chicago Coal Merchants Association unconditionally guarantees the full weight and true grade of every ton delivered you by every one of its members.

The next time you order coal make sure that you are getting the most for your money by buying from a member of the Chicago Coal Merchants Association.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

NEW YORK GETS A LOAN.

New York City has been saved from default and bankruptcy through the action of its banks. They have agreed to advance $100,000,000 immediately and another $100,000,000 if it is needed to meet municipal obligations. In return, the mayor and board of estimate have given their solemn pledge to reduce expenditures to the limit.

It amounts to a receivership with the bankers in the position of receivers. The bankers are charging no commission for handling the city's paper, a fact which emphasizes the extraordinary nature of the transaction. Banks are not philanthropic institutions. They must charge commissions in ordinary flotations, and if they have not done so this time it is because they recognize that their new loan is no ordinary advance to a municipality whose credit is unimpaired. This loan is made not so much to find a sound investment for available funds as to prevent the default of New York City's obligations as they fall due and to maintain the essential public services.

The reports of the negotiations leading to the loan leave little doubt that it was regarded by the bankers as the lesser of evils. They did not want to make further advances to the city and did so only when confronted with the alternative of a default which they regarded as far graver in its consequences both to the financial structure of the country and to their own institutions. Fortunately for New York, the resources of its banks are so enormous that the load could be carried. Other communities are not so fortunate in having at hand so large a share of the nation's surplus funds.

That the risk involved in the new credit is not of the best is suggested by the high rate of interest charged—6 per cent. Further evidence is provided by the insistence of the bankers upon a pledge of economy. It remains to be seen, of course, whether the pledge will be carried out. Perhaps the experience of Chicago in this connection is enlightening.

When Mr. Strawn's rescue plan was put into effect and the hat was passed among business men to raise emergency funds assurances were given that, in consideration of the financial relief accorded, the expenditures of government would be reduced. These assurances were on the whole lightly regarded by government officials once they had the money. They did not pare their budgets and no means was found of enforcing their pledge to do so. Expenditures continued at much the old pace with results which scarcely require mention.

That may happen in New York, and it may be expected to happen unless the bankers have some means of bringing pressure to bear. Waste and extravagance are evils in the eyes of taxpayers and bankers, but they are the tools of the politician's trade. The more he spends from the public treasury, the more jobs he has to parcel out to his henchmen and the more contracts he has for political favorites. Conversely, economy is politically costly. It means rebellion in the ranks. As long as political machines are maintained by jobs, the mine run of officeholders will be disposed to resist economy with all their strength.

Presumably the New York bankers are not blind to this political axiom. Presumably they know that New York is going to need more money than the $100,000,000 just granted and are withholding the balance as a lever to force reductions in expenditures. In that sense the city of New York has gone into a receivership. Some such arrangement seems to be the only one calculated to save our municipalities from the ruin into which the wild extravagances of the last dozen years have precipitated almost all of them.

NO CONSTITUTION BY UNEQUAL REPRESENTATION.

There is no exercise of political power so important as the making of a constitution. Statutes come and go. A constitution is or ought to be fundamental and subject only to gradual change, in accordance with important changes of social, economic, and political conditions. Our state constitution has not developed in this manner and the need for its revision is not deniable. But the requisites of wise constitution making do not exist at this time in Illinois. Apart from the demoralization of politics in this state and our preoccupation with the urgent problems of the business depression, which provide a very unsatisfactory foundation for any effort to form a new constitution, there is one basic condition which foredooms that effort to failure. As one of the candidates for the governorship, William H. Malone, points out in an open letter to Gov. Emmerson, no convention based upon the present representation can pretend to represent the people of the state. A reapportionment of state representation is a prerequisite.

A convention would be made up of delegates chosen by senatorial districts. A majority of such a body might represent less than 30 per cent of the people of the state. Over 70 per cent might be an ineffectual minority. Cook county, which has 52 per cent of the population, would have about 37 per cent of the delegates.

It ought to be clear, even to those who hold that this inequality is justifiable, that it is not tolerable to the people thus partially disfranchised. It ought to be clear that in such an important function as constitution making inequality of representation, imposed by political force, vitiates the process and will certainly defeat it.

A constitution cannot be imposed upon the majority of the people of Illinois by a minority. Equal representation can be withheld as it has been for a generation, but a constitution must be adopted by the people voting an equal franchise.

THE BILL FOR BEER.

Thus far Senator Bingham's committee has heard only the advocates of the bill legalizing the manufacture of a four per cent (by volume) beer, and the outcry of the bigots is yet to come, but nevertheless the showing reveals how wide the reaction has been against the unreason and intolerance of federal prohibition. From the universities, the professions and various walks of life has come a distinguished procession of American citizens asking congress to yield the point which will permit the sale of a palatable beer.

Some of the most eminent physicians of the country have advised the committee that the beverage proposed in the bill is not intoxicating and therefore can be permitted under the eighteenth amendment. It is also their medical opinion that the use of the beverage would be wholesome. Students of social conditions give it as their belief that the sale of beer would do a great deal to diminish the trade in contraband liquor by taking the stigma of guilt off a harmless beverage and offering it as a substitute for hard liquor. The American Federation of Labor has argued for this sensible step in the direction of sanity and decency, and Matthew Woll, vice president of the organization, quite properly warned the political clerics that if they continued to carry their opposition into politics labor would meet them there.

Some day unquestionably the prohibition of beer will be regarded as an inexplicable episode in American history. It will be difficult to understand, then, how a government basing itself upon the intelligence, common sense, and good intent attributed to the electorate could have been brought to such a pass that it denied the citizens the exercise of their own free will in the use of such a beverage and by its intolerance and paternalism created a vast criminal class, actually or legalistically criminal, and was unable to provide the cell room for them.

Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey of the Southern division of Iowa asked the members of the Second Iowa judicial district what they proposed to do with the mass of men sent to prison for violation of the Volstead act. He said he had been a prohibitionist, but here was a problem of criminality involving men who were not, otherwise than in their violation of sumptuary law, criminals until the Volstead act so stamped them. Many bootleggers, he said, were coming of a better class of men.

A species of lunacy makes the manufacture of beer a criminal offense. The injustice and stupidity of it have become notorious. Government pays for its intolerance in the disorders it foments in the land and in the loss of revenue it imposes on its treasury.

Who stands in the way of the reasonable modification which can be made even under the eighteenth amendment? The bigots, hypocrites who support them, weaklings terrified by them and certain rascals who profit from conditions as they are now. The decent people of the country are sick of such control of government and of the consequences revealed on every hand.

KING HOOEY.

Huey P. Long, the governor-senator of Louisiana, is apparently returning that state to the old rule of the First Consul before the purchase. He is the idol of the freemen and he is concentrating government in his own person. Presently he will elect himself attorney general and Supreme court and the malcontents will be shipped to Marsh island. When exile has done its work with the opposition it will be but another step to a coronation at Baton Rouge and to Huey I.

As is not infrequent in these dynastic beginnings, Huey is having trouble with his family. His brother wishes to give him a public whaling, but Huey is too busy to take time out for that. That's understandable. He is buzzing around in his various offices. There is no reason to believe that the American states have reached the limits of their possibilities in political action. Oklahoma and Texas were marching troops against each other recently. States have found a way to erect tariffs against one another's goods. Alfalfa Bill Murray wants the privilege of striking coins. Tennessee and Arkansas have adopted state religions. Huey Long is headed for the purple. The emperor is returning to Louisiana.

Editorial of the Day

THE WASHINGTON STAMPS.

[New York Evening Post.]

While some philatelists feel that the issuing of commemorative postage stamps is being overdone—the list during the present administration is a long one—this criticism does not extend to the postoffice department's latest enterprise. The twelve stamps issued to mark the George Washington bicentennial celebration comprise a veritable gallery of portraits of the father of his country, some of them exceedingly rare and most of them unfamiliar to the general public.

The Gilbert Stuart portrait, which was painted in a house overlooking Independence square in Philadelphia and appears on the $1 bill, is retained for the popular two cent denomination. The others include the Peale portrayal of Washington at the age of twenty-five. Other artists represented in this pictorial collection are Jean Houdon and his brother Frenchman, St. Memin, the expert in pastels; John Trumbull, and William J. Williams. The original by Williams hangs in the Masonic lodge hall at Alexandria, Va., and shows Washington in his regalia as grand master.

The more than ordinary interest in this notable issue was manifested by the thousands of purchasers who crowded the Washington postoffice on New Year's day when the stamps were placed on sale. They are now available at postoffices throughout the country. With a business of $100,000 in these stamps on the opening day the postoffice department has produced a new line of "best sellers" which will make a welcome if comparatively small contribution toward reducing its annual deficit and has placed within the reach of all a charming collection of Washington miniatures for the sum of 57 cents.

ENGLAND TO FRANCE: Are you going to pay any more of those silly war debts to the U. S. A.?

FRANCE: Non, non, non, mais non! Are you?

ENGLAND: And you, Germany?

GERMANY: Nein! Nein! Nein!

ENGLAND: Hello, Austria, old thing! Will you pay?

AUSTRIA: Herrouse mit der war debts alretty yet!

ENGLAND: Well, thanks awfully! What a delightful little chat we've had. Pleasant day, isn't it! Good afternoon!

WHAT A RESTLESS, hurrying people we are in this machine age. When Reno reduced the time of residence in order to achieve a divorce to three weeks it was breathlessly acclaimed as a wonderful time saver. But now Chihuahua proclaims a residential requirement for a legal separation of one day—twenty-four hours. Live in Chihuahua (Che-wa-wa, not She-hooah-hooah) just one day and get a divorce. It makes Reno seem as slow as a horse drawn ice wagon compared to a 1932 twenty-four cylinder sedan.

THE FINISHED TASK.

". . . and let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us; and establish Thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish Thou it."

Now to the deep beyond the deep
Float back the visions I have seen;
The clamorous air is grown serene,
And I shall sleep.

Now, for that straining at the bars
Of flesh toward one remoter Light,
There comes the still untroubled night,
The quiet stars;

Now let the falling of a leaf
Be heavier than that slumber's fall
That hides the ended quest, and all
Its glory and its grief;

Joy in the hour of this release
Were too much burden on the heart;
Unclasped, the fetters fall apart
And there is peace.

HAIL, LADIES! Gentlemen, or should we say earthworms, retreat, disappear, wriggle away! "A woman's body," says Justice McCardie of England (and he's a bachelor at that), "does not belong to her husband. It is her own property, not his. She can leave her husband by her own will. She can choose her own occupation, political party, and religion. She can decide whether to bear children. She is a citizen, not a serf. She can choose her own part. She can decide her own future." Yes, your honor, we admit all that. BUT—has she got any right to eat crackers in bed? That great question remains unanswered. Thousands of married men in England and this country await a decision on this question.

It gives us pleasure to advise that we have canceled your reservations for the above date.

A MARTINI COCKTAIL, rules the Supreme court of Turin, Italy, must be made with Martini vermouth as one of its ingredients. Which is very interesting to us over on this side of the Atlantic. We can recall the dear, long forgotten days when Martini cocktails were made here also of Martini vermouth. But now when the smiling hostess as she pours the sparkling liquor from the frost covered shakers says brightly, "This is a Martini cocktail," you know darned well it isn't. It tastes more like bay rum or furniture polish. However, it is considered extremely rude on the Gold Coast, or anywhere else, for that matter, to respond when the hostess says "This is a Martini cocktail" with the words, "Oh, is it?" Oh, very rude, indeed. And not good manners!

A MAN NAMED Alonzo S. Hilton in Minnesota, who filed his name in Ohio and New Hampshire as a candidate for the nomination as President, was brought before the court and declared insane. We can't understand why; it was the Democratic nomination he was after. There have been times when to run for President on the Democratic ticket might have been regarded as evidence of insanity or weakness of intellect, at least, but in this year of grace 1932 Alonzo's action impresses us as entirely rational and showing good sound sense.

WHAT OF WHOOPING COUGH'S FUTURE?

WHOOPING cough appears to be headed for the discard. The Metropolitan Life figures give great promise that it is. If the rate of improvement which prevailed between 1911 and 1931 could continue for another ten years, whooping cough might become nothing but a bitter memory.

In 1930 the whooping cough death rate in children insured by that company was a little more than one-fourth that of 1911, and not much more than one-fifth that of the very bad year, 1918. Any one can see that a continuation of the same rate of decline would cause the line to touch bottom somewhere about 1935.

However, those drops generally flatten out somewhat as the base line is reached and, in addition, the general population has more whooping cough than these figures show. After making proper allowance for everything, we can feel happy over the gain that is being made in the fight on whooping cough. And now, what is doing the work?

For one thing, people are reporting whooping cough better. Time was when whooping children went about unrestrained, infecting other children. There is still much of that, but not so much as there was.

Another cause is the acceptance of the fact that whooping cough is especially dangerous to children under 2 years of age and, regardless of inconvenience, cost, and everything else, babies must be kept away from whoopers.

Another is that whooping cough must not be allowed to develop into pneumonia. The child with the cough appears to be very uncomfortable and even very sick, but he will get well if he can escape pneumonia.

Another is the fact that whooping cough is often guessed at or diagnosed on suspicion and isolation is begun early, before there is any whoop. The suspicion is sometimes wrong, and some injustice is done, but it is so frequently right that the good done far more than overshadows the injustice.

Some good has come from the use of the new bacterial or laboratory test for whooping cough. The physicians who use this test report that they are able to diagnose whooping cough in time to spare the other children, the family, and the school.

PROBABLY DUE TO DIET.

M. B. M. writes:

1. What is the cause of too much acid or too much alkali in the kidney?
2. What excretions are the symptoms?
3. What the cure?

REPLY.

1. The probable cause of too much acid is not drinking enough water and eating too much meat, bread, and cereal. Gout and rheumatism are two other causes. The probable cause of too much alkali is eating too many potatoes and other vegetables and fruit. Taking soda is another cause.
2. Usually there are no symptoms.
3. In most cases hyperacidity can be changed by eating more potatoes and bananas and less meat, eggs, cereal, and bread; too much alkalinity, by eating more meat, eggs, cereal, and bread and less potatoes, vegetables, and fruit.

TRAINING IS NEEDED.

J. B. B. writes: What is the trouble with one when he feels nervous when he is going to make a public talk or lecture? I feel this nervousness every time I am invited out for dinner, and tremble so much that it is very noticeable at the table. I also do this if I am called on to play the piano in public, and usually make an awful mess of the piece. This trouble is not due to any physical defect because I have been examined by our family physician. If the trouble is just nervousness, as he said, it seems there should be something I could take to stop it.

REPLY.

There is nothing you can take for nervousness. Your case calls for training. Nothing else suffices.

You are suffering from fear and anxiety. Your fear of failure makes you tense and overanxious. The symptoms complained of are caused by your emotional state.

Train yourself in courage, relaxation, and tranquillity

OFFENDERS WARNED.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—[Friend of the People.]—Across the alley is an apartment building. We assimilate our own ashes and rubbish, trying to keep the alley clean. Tenants of the apartment building throw their refuse out in the alley, opposite our dwelling, and children come along and scatter it, as does the wind. Am disgusted in sweeping alley, also repairing tires on my car due to broken glass and tin cans? What can be done?

Report is made that, pursuant to action taken by this bureau, refuse complained of was removed on Jan. 5. Owner was also served with notice to provide regulation containers for the accommodation of refuse output. Location will be kept under observation to see that this is done without undue delay.

BONDS IN DEFAULT.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am the holder of a first mortgage gold bond, the building now being in the hands of a receiver. The principal is due in March, 1932. Would appreciate any advice you can give me as to what steps to take to protect my bond. M. S.

The decision on such questions depends upon the value of the pledged assets, the financial responsibility of the maker whose name is signed to the bonds, the reputation of the members of the committee, and the proposal which the committee makes. We are not in a position to investigate the facts for you. If you are skeptical as to the offered plan we would suggest that you join with other bondholders in employing an attorney to investigate the facts and determine on a course of action.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

This nation has had other serious financial depressions, as the following excerpts from The Tribune files reveal. Each of these periods of hard times has been followed by periods of great prosperity.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 1.—The financial condition of the vast interests of the Spragues is the all important topic in business circles here. The notes of A. & W. Sprague went to protest this afternoon. Gen. William Sprague, president of the A. & W. Sprague Manufacturing company, arrived here and aided a committee in evolving a plan to settle the varied interests of the Spragues on terms most advantageous to owners and creditors. Among the Sprague institutions are Perkins Sheet Iron company, the Comstock foundry, the Rhode Island Locomotive works, the Union Street Railroad company, and the Providence Steamship company. Besides these they have large interests in Augusta, Me., and Columbia, S. C.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 6. — Bartley, Johnson & Co., one of the oldest whisky houses in the state, suspended. The cause was the closeness of the money market and recent suspensions of banks with two of which the firm did business.

New York, March 26.—Adverse state legislation, general uncertainty, and business constriction have compelled the important railroads of the eastern part of the United States to adopt a drastic policy of retrenchment. As a consequence, on such great lines as the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the New York, New Haven and Hartford, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Lehigh Valley, and others, thousands of men have been laid off in every department, and more thousands of maintenance men, operating men, and men in all other departments have been put on part time. The Pennsylvania railroad admitted that since the last week of 1913 it has laid off 15,000 of its 140,000 employés and is going further. Forty thousand more, or one-third of the entire force, have been put on part time.

Chicago, March 29.—Nine months of business depression and falling prices were reflected yesterday in the action of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in discontinuing dividends on its common stock.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

CHICAGO.—In the height of the rush hour at State street and Jackson boulevard a robber, aided by a woman, shot the cashier of Thomas Cook & Son's Chicago agency, seized $1,000, killed Bror Johnson, a traffic policeman, and escaped. The robber entered the agency alone. As he did so a woman working with him drove up in a taxicab and stopped. The robber drew two revolvers as he entered the office, and when the cashier, Ernest L. Walsh, made a movement for a revolver he was shot. Running into the cashier's cage, the robber scooped up $1,000 in bills and fled to the street, where he was confronted by Policeman Johnson. He fired two shots point blank at the policeman, who fell dead. He then jumped into the taxicab, but the chauffeur refused to drive and the robber leaped out of the car and escaped in the crowd. The woman a moment later also left the taxicab and wandered away into the crowd.

PETROGRAD.—The war office gave out the following report on operations in the Caucasus: "In the coast region Turks attempted on a wide front to drive back our troops, but we repulsed them with heavy losses. Our pursuing units captured, after a fight, the town of Hassan Kalah and then drove the fleeing Turks as far as the forts of Erzerum, sabering or taking prisoners over 1,500 of them."

NEW YORK.—Much surprise was caused to the friends of Sig. Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph system, and Josephine Bowen Holman by the announcement that their wedding engagement, announced in April, had been terminated. Mrs. Holman made the announcement that her daughter had asked Marconi to release her from the engagement and that he had complied. He refused to give any reasons for the breaking of the betrothal.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Real war no longer exists in the Philippines, according to Gov. William H. Taft of the islands, who arrived here from Manila on the transport Grant. He said the insurrection now is confined to two localities—the province of Batangas and the island of Samar—and believes that even in those places peace is in sight.

CHICAGO.—Prof. Edmund J. James, director of university extension work at the University of Chicago, was elected president of Northwestern university. He will take up his work there on Feb. 1.

CHICAGO.—Stephen A. Douglas, son of Stephen A. Douglas, "the Little Giant," former United States senator from Illinois who died in 1861, was married to Mrs. Agnes MacDowell by the Rev. C. M. Merton at Oak Park. Mr. Douglas is 51 years old and his bride 27. He has been connected with Ald. John J. Coughlin in the banking and mortgage loan business for some time.

UNION MEN AS ENFORCERS.

Cicero, Ill., Jan. 19.—I am not surprised to read in the Voice of the People column a condemnation of a certain union regarding their attitude toward private autos in funeral cortèges. Nor do I blame the authors for their expressions, as they are not acquainted with the facts of the matter.

Too often unions, through their agreements with associated business, agree to do the policing necessary to maintain prices set by that association. It is not the union that sets the minimum charge for an auto to a funeral. It is the Auto Livery association that sets the price, and it is this association that influences such action as would maintain the price and also would keep private autos out of the funeral cortèges, which would necessitate the hiring of a livery association auto.

We don't object to close affiliations of employers and employés, but if the employé, to maintain prices and promote business, must resort to tactics that will evoke the scorn of the public and bear the odium for such activity, we think it high time to avoid such compacts. No man or group of men can successfully pursue a policy that runs counter to public opinion, and public opinion will be opposed to such tactics as smaller business will endeavor to impose on the public.

I do hope that men employed by such associations will consider the public to the extent of placing the odium of unfair practice where that odium belongs. Such associations are responsible for much of the contempt toward unions in the last few years.

No one knows much more about this particular feature than the undersigned, and no one knows how much harm it has done to the legitimate union and its membership who are organized for legitimate purposes. JOHN DONLIN,

THE HONOR OF THE NAVY.

Tinley Park, Ill., Jan. 18.—Upon reading an article published in the Voice of the People on Jan. 16 headed "Conditions in Hawaii" and signed by Rodney T. West, I was filled with amazement at the ignorance displayed by this callow college student, probably still in his teens, who would have the public believe that the men of our navy are an aggregation of morons and degenerates. In his article he says: "The source of all the trouble in Hawaii is the American sailor, and the female population of Honolulu [white, oriental and Hawaiian] are more afraid of the uniform of an American sailor coming down a dark street than it is of a civilian." This contemptible and vile defamation of character of our seamen is a direct insult to every man serving in our naval forces in the far east.

I would advise this half baked schoolboy to cease making his deductions from trashy literature and sensational movies, wherein the American sailor is often pictured as a fast and dissolute person.

FRANK HOAR,

THE EMANCIPATOR.

Chicago, Jan. 19.—Three rousing cheers for England's Judge McCardie. All liberty loving women ought to get up and give this rare gentleman a great big hand. Can it be that here, at last, is a man who realizes that women and men must be on an equal basis to insure happiness, even though the egotism and jealousy of the male sex has kept them from voicing it these many years? Who dares to say that intelligent people can be happy without liberty? Then why expect to enslave a woman under a wedding ring? L. L. D.

A FOOLHARDY DRIVER.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—At 10:45 this morning, Jan. 21, a milk delivery truck of the Austin Dairy company speeded across Washingon boulevard, a street about 4300 West, without stopping at the boulevard, causing great danger to motorists on the boulevard. M. C. C.

REFERRED TO THE PROFESSORS.

Green Bay, Wis., Jan. 19.—The question is now going the rounds as to what is causing abnormal weather throughout various parts of the world. My personal theory is this: A burning glass, if held at the right angle to the sun's rays, as well as the right distance from an object, will cause the object to burn. If either angle or distance is changed the intensity of heat at point of contact is affected.

Science has proved that at increased altitudes temperatures become lower. With this thought in mind, there is a question in my mind as to the sun actually radiating heat. It may be an object of high luminating property, such as radium, and with the assistance of an intermediary will produce what we know as sun's heat.

This intermediary is the basis of my theory. It may be composed of innumerable minute burning glasses lying in close formation enveloping the earth like a blanket. When the arrangement of the burning glasses, I will call them, composing this blanket is changed, either as to angle or distance, varied degrees of heat are produced. E. J. KRAMER.

THE BENJAMIN FRANKLINS.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—I have read in today's TRIBUNE with something akin to contentment James O'Donnell Bennett's review of yesterday's meeting of the Benjamin Franklins.

In a world highly impoverished, and with crime and political pillage rampant in our own country, it is joyful to contemplate a coterie of mere Americans who modestly foregather of a Saturday afternoon to quietly rehearse the virtues of an Old Master of the breed.

An honest man's the noblest work of God."

This altogether important but unheralded event is quite encouraging, and the more so because the names of those active in the ceremonies are easily pronounceable. Surely an admirable group.

Mr. Bennett performed well a task which must have been to him a most delightful one. R. CRAWFORD.

HIS GAS BILL.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—In comparing the present [so-called] reduced cost of gas with a year ago, we find that the December, 1931, bill was over 100 per cent higher than December, 1930, and January, 1932, bill after company's check up on our complaint is still 48 per cent higher than January, 1931.

December, 1930, bill	$2.04
January, 1931, bill	2.76
January, 1932, bill	4.08

Inferior gas at increased cost is not in line with the general decrease in commodity costs, and is certainly not a fulfillment of the promises of lower priced gas. E. KOMINEK.

AT FORT SHERIDAN.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 17.—The roads through Fort Sheridan are a disgrace to the government and the officers in charge. This condition has existed for years. It is strange that the government would permit such laxity.

HOUSING VENTURE FULFILLS VISION OF ROSENWALD

Apartments for Negroes Earn $55,000 in '31.

BY AL CHASE.

The corporation which owns the Michigan Boulevard Garden apartments at 47th street and Michigan avenue, built by the late Julius Rosenwald, earned $3.70 a common share in 1931 after all fixed charges had been paid, according to an announcement made yesterday.

ALFRED K. STERN.

Alfred K. Stern, son-in-law of the late Mr. Rosenwald, was elected president of the corporation at the annual meeting in the First National bank yesterday, succeeding Edward E. Brown, who was made chairman of the board.

If the apartments had been built at prices prevailing in October, 1931, which were lower by about 20 per cent, than prices at the time of the construction in 1929, Mr. Stern said, the earnings per share would have been $5. Despite the success of this venture by Mr. Rosenwald in furnishing colored residents of the south side with good quarters at low rentals, the new president added there was no intention on the part of those administering the philanthropist's estate to undertake any more buildings of the same type.

Points Path for Capital.

"It has been shown, regardless of the depression, competition and vacancies, that such a project can be a success," he declared. "Private capital should go ahead now and develop the idea on a big scale."

The net earnings in 1931 were $55,803, as compared with $59,803 in 1930. And this 1931 total would have been considerably larger but for an unexpected tax boost of $24,000, which has been protested.

Despite these figures the directors yesterday decided to meet the prevailing rental situation by reducing the cost of rentals in the apartments. So, beginning on Feb. 1, the rents on all of the 421 suites, no matter when leases expire, will be substantially reduced.

The average rental per room per month on Dec. 31, 1931, was $16.24, compared with $16.25 at Dec. 31, 1930. Vacancies of apartments for the year amounted to 5 per cent of the rental income of apartments. In 1930 this figure was 2.5 per cent. Bad debts of apartment tenants were 1.5 per cent of the total billed them during the year. The year previous they were 1.2 per cent.

Mortgage Cut to $815,000.

During the year 1931 prepayments of $135,000 were made on the mortgage, which originally was $1,000,000 at 5½ per cent, reducing it to $815,000. There is a surplus of $124,419. No dividends have been paid to date on the capital stock. Excess funds have been used to make serial payments on the mortgage.

The Michigan Boulevard Garden apartment group was a personal venture of Mr. Rosenwald. The Rosenwald Foundation had nothing to do with it. It was built in 1929 and represents an investment of $2,700,000. Mr. Rosenwald's idea was not to establish a charity but to demonstrate that it was good business to furnish families in moderate circumstances with modern living quarters and that such a project would pay a fair return on the investment. This point has been proved, according to Mr. Stern.

Bandits Get 75 Cases of Strawberries as Loot

Seventy-five cases of fresh strawberries composed the loot three robbers were enjoying last night. The berries were in the truck of Gus Battaglia, a driver for the Shafton company, commission merchants at 116 South Water market. The bandits stopped the truck at 13th street and Blue Island avenue, forced Battaglia to drive them to Congress and Rockwell streets, dumped him out and sped away with the strawberries.

Drops Extradition Fight on $152,772 Theft Charge

John Bain, 45 years old, 4423 Sheridan road, yesterday notified Louisville, Ky., authorities that he would no longer fight extradition to that city where he is charged with embezzling $152,772 from the Equitable Life and Casualty Insurance company of which he formerly was president. Notice was sent to Louisville by Bain's attorney, Harold L. Levy, and deputy sheriffs immediately started for Chicago. Bain now is in the county jail unable to furnish $50,000 bond which was set by Municipal Judge James F. Fardy who issued the warrant upon which he was arrested here on Sept. 23. Bain also is fighting his wife's efforts to force him to pay $5,000 back alimony. Bain is not a relative of the John Bain who headed a chain of Chicago banks which closed recently.

GOVERNOR GETS PLAN FOR STATE AIRWAY NETWORK

Aeronautics Board Makes Its First Report.

A tentative plan for a network of state airways covering Illinois, supplementing the federal airways and connecting with established routes from cities in surrounding states, has been submitted to Gov. Emmerson in the first annual report of the state aeronautics commission.

MAJ. REED LANDIS. [National Photo and Adv. Co. Photo.]

The commission, of which Maj. Reed G. Landis is chairman, has been in existence for a year. The report outlines the commission's work of registering airports, airplanes, and pilots within the state, and of enforcing the new state air laws. The development of a system of state airways at this time is largely dependent upon the support of local agencies, it is pointed out.

Plan for State Airways.

"Your commission has undertaken the preparation of a plan of state airways to coördinate with and augment the airways built by the federal government," the report reads. "This is not a new type of undertaking for a state. Pennsylvania, Michigan, and Idaho, at least, have actually built state airways and are engaged in an extension thereof.

"The lack of funds available to this commission does not make possible more than a start on a plan; but this is being carefully done in order that the future growth of airlines and airways, and location and construction of airports, may have as sound a basis as possible. There is attached a map showing a purely tentative outline of a system of state airways, together with their relation to the federal airways and to potential joint airways operating with adjoining states.

"This is submitted merely as an indication of the type of study being given this subject and without any certainty that its present form will be that in which the program is adopted finally. It will be part of the commission's program for 1932 to further the development of this idea."

Urges Communities to Aid.

Much can be done to further the development of state air routes by the various communities that will be served by them, Maj. Landis pointed out. This includes the development of satisfactory all weather airports and the clear marking of all cities, towns and villages so they can be identified easily from the air.

ENDS HIS LIFE WITH GUN.

"MYSTERY MAN" LOSES FIGHT TO STAY OUT OF JAIL

ROME, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Mario Bruneri, "mystery man," who passed for six years as Prof. Giulio Canella, lost his appeal before the Court of Cassation today from a four year prison sentence for theft.

Bruneri lived with Mrs. Canella after he was found wandering in a cemetery at night and Mrs. Canella had identified him as her lost husband, a shell shocked war veteran. Three children were born to them in the meantime. The man had previously lost an appeal to have himself legally declared the missing professor.

Alabama High Court Tells of Threats.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Judge John C. Anderson, chief justice, created a sensation in Alabama Supreme court today when he declared that for 10 days members of the court had been bombarded with letters and telegrams, some threatening in character, which demanded new trials for eight Negroes, sentenced to death in Jackson county for raping two white girls.

"I regret to make this statement, which is unprecedented for this court, but this is an unprecedented case," commented Judge Anderson. "It is evident that the letters and telegrams were intended to intimidate members of this court. They are of such character that those responsible would be punished for contempt if they were in the jurisdiction of this court.

Governor Also Threatened.

"I want to make it known now that these letters and telegrams will have no influence with this court. This court will follow the record and will reverse the lower court if reversible errors are found and will affirm if no reversible errors are found."

Gov. B. M. Miller recently declared that threats of death had been made against him because he declined to consider the cases prior to decisions of the Supreme court.

George W. Chamblee, chief counsel for the Negroes, who was employed by the International Labor Defense, denied that his organization had anything to do with the threats.

Charge Trials Were Unfair.

Attorneys for the Negroes appealed for new trials, contending that constitutional rights of the defendants were ignored, that mob rule prevailed during the trials, that court, juries, and attorneys were terrorized, and that fair and unprejudiced trials could not be obtained in Jackson county.

Notice was served on the Supreme court that the International Defense league, failing to obtain new trials in the Alabama Supreme court, will carry the cases to the United States Supreme court and will insist that the defendants were denied their rights because Negroes were not permitted to serve on the grand jury which returned indictments and the petit juries which sentenced the defendants to death.

Through Grade Separation Urged by Traffic Expert

Dr. Miller McClintock, director of traffic research at Harvard university, in an address yesterday before a luncheon of the Chicago safety council, advised that one way street systems and elevated or depressed boulevards with continuous grade separation are needed to reduce the toll of automobile accidents. He is engaged in a traffic survey of Chicago for the city council.

HURLS SELF BEFORE TRAIN.

SEES REVENGE BY KIDNAP GANG IN BOMBING OF HOME

The revenge of a gang of kidnapers was suggested yesterday by Sheriff Lester Tiffany of Lake county as a motive for the bombing of the $35,000 home in Mundelein of Thomas Williams, a roadhouse owner. Williams, police say, is Leopold Weiss, a brother of Hymie Weiss, who succeeded Dean O'Bannion as leader of the north side gang and who was murdered five years ago by machine gunners in front of Holy Name cathedral.

Williams, or Weiss, was kidnaped several months ago and held for several days, Sheriff Tiffany said. He did not report the affair to the authorities, but the sheriff was told that his wife met the gang's demand for $50,000 ransom with a cash payment of $15,000.

It is possible, the sheriff said, that the kidnapers became disgruntled at not getting more money and bombed Williams' home.

HAVE YOU NEVER EATEN SEAWEED? DON'T BET ON IT

In One Form or Another It Appears on Table.

What salt water bather who has been tangled in seaweed, or motorboat owner whose propeller has been clogged by the marine growth can imagine that Japan harvested 450,000,000 pounds last year; that the United States imports about 5,000 tons annually, and that the United States has a seaweed industry on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts?

"Seaweed has been consumed as food by the Japanese, Chinese and Hawaiians for many centuries, while Irish moss and seaweed products have graced the American table in various forms since colonial days when it was imported from England," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

First Used as Fertilizer.

"An early use of the weed was as fertilizer by farmers near the sea. Today, besides serving as fertilizer and food, it is an ingredient of fine paper, knife handles and oriental curios. Kamchatka natives use its hollow stems as coils for distilleries, while Australians have discovered a species from which cloth, rope, twine, and mats can be made.

"Upwards of a billion pounds of seaweed are harvested annually, with nearly every country bordering the sea contributing its quota. Some British, Dutch and French manufacturers use seaweed for upholstery and mattress stuffing. Holland produces a sufficient quantity to support home industries and export two to three thousand tons annually.

"Demand for Japanese seaweed is so great that the natives cultivate seaweed plantations. In Tokio bay alone more than 3,000 people are employed on seaweed plantations. More than twenty-five species of seaweed are eaten in Japan. Seventy varieties are consumed in Hawaii, where fish and seaweed are the principal foods of the poorer natives during certain seasons.

Americans Eat It, Too.

"In one form or another seaweed or its derivatives have appeared on nearly every American dining table. Agar-agar, a dried, partially bleached gelatinous extract of certain species of seaweeds, is eaten in American ice creams, jellies, candies, pastries, cereal foods, and many desserts and salad dressings. Cosmetics may contain agar-agar, and at the drug store one may buy it in adhesive tape and soap, and mixed with medicines. Isinglass and fly paper often contain agar-agar. Fish canners use it to pack soft fish which are likely to be shattered to pieces in transportation. It has eight times the strength of ordinary gelatin and is not as readily affected by climatic changes.

"Two dollar a pound Irish moss from England lost its market in 1835 when the mayor of Boston announced that the Massachusetts coast had an ample supply. Further investigation showed that the moss covered rocks abounded from North Carolina to Maine. The mayor's announcement led to the Irish moss industry at Scituate, Mass., which still exists. The moss is used in making blancmange and many other puddings and in remedies for coughs. It also is an ingredient of some calcimines, shoe stains, shaving soaps, and dyes for calico printing.

Used to Make Soup.

"Seaweed [dulse] was chewed in Scotland and Ireland before tobacco took its place. New Scotch and Irish cooks use it to thicken and give a red color to soup. Boiled laver in England, also known as sloke in Ireland and slack in Scotland, is a palatable cooked seaweed.

"Japanese seaweed 'plantations' produce from $150 to $300 worth of seaweed per acre. Kombu and amanori are two of the chief seaweed products which have figured largely in the development of the Japanese seaweed industry. In Osaka there are 45 kombu factories. Shredded kombu is cooked with meat and soups and served with vegetables. Powdered kombu is an ingredient of sauces and soups and rice dishes, while kombu leaves make a popular Japanese tea.

"Amanori is baked, compressed seaweed. Sushi, a popular Japanese sandwich, consists of a slab of amanori on which is placed boiled rice and strips of meat. Then the sushi is rolled like a jelly roll and cut into transverse slices.

"Seaweed also is the source of many acids, one of which is used in the manufacture of buttons, combs, and insulating material. Other acids are used to dissolve shellac and to produce brown dyes.

Became Important in War.

"America's interest in its own seaweed resources dates back to pre-Columbian times when Indians used it as fish bait and for basket weaving. In 1902 a scientist discovered that seaweed on the Pacific coast contained potash, an important fertilizing element. But he could interest no one in his discovery for a decade.

"As in the case of many other raw products, a world war was necessary to make its importance known. German potash supplies were cut off. The farms 'cried' for potash, so the government set out to find a source. A company manufacturing explosives also needed a substance from seaweed as an ingredient for its products, so it built a $2,000,000 plant in California. Groups of men first attacked the vast seaweed 'plantations' with sickles, but it was not long before steam and gasoline propelled scows equipped with mechanical harvesting machinery dotted the Pacific seaweed fields. A dozen or more plants were established. When the armistice was signed the companies disbanded almost as quickly as they were established. Today one remains. The others succumbed to cheaper German potash or imported seaweed products."

Necessity Is Found Mother of Many Food Inventions

BY EDWARD F. YOUNGER.

Several years ago, more than 300 years at a rough guess, some philosopher burst forth with the axiom, "Necessity is the mother of invention." It may have been Richard Franck, who flourished in 1658. Wycherly employed the phrase in "The Twin Rivals" in 1672, doubtless borrowing it from Franck, who may have borrowed it from some predecessor. Succeeding generations have found the statement as true as when it first was coined.

What provoked the utterance is not clear, nor is that point of any particular interest. It might have been the transformation of animal skins into covering for humans, some important discovery in methods of travel, or the philosopher may have been discussing food values and means of providing food.

Necessity Mothers Foods.

Necessity certainly has been the mother and grandmother and great-grandmother of invention or discovery of foods and methods of preparing them. Out of the stern necessity of obtaining sustenance from portions of meat considered unfit for human consumption and of vegetables rated as rank poison, have come some of the choicest dishes of the present.

Passing briefly over the dire necessity that induced a man to eat the first raw oyster, gourmets owe that unsung hero a monument for discovering the many uses for the succulent bivalve.

Likewise the country owes a vigorous salvo of cheers to the southern mammies, who, through necessity, have evolved many of the most palatable foods. Scraps of meat considered unfit for houn' dogs and assuredly unfit for white persons, were tossed to the Negroes.

Here Are the Results.

Pig's feet and pork shanks, liver, hearts, oxtails and other discards were given to the Negroes and through some mysterious alchemy the mammies evolved from these scraps what are considered dainties nowadays. Head cheese, souse, pig's-foot jelly, calves' brains and scrambled eggs, oxtail soup, sausage skins, pickled tongue and other varieties, now standard, owe their origin to the necessity Negro cooks experienced in utilizing these scraps.

In earlier days planters pressed the lard from animal fat and threw away the residue. The Negro cooks discovered that these "cracklins" gave a fine zest to corn bread. Now this system is widely employed in both corn and white bread. No self-respecting white would think of eating "chitlins," but the Negroes find them palatable.

Turtle Eggs Go on the Menu.

Somewhere down along the Spanish Main, Negroes or starving Spaniards took a chance with turtle eggs. Turtle meat had been appreciated for many years, but the eggs afforded a problem. The whites of these eggs would not coagulate. Salt water, sweet water and various greases and also sherry wine were tried in vain and then came the discovery that turtle eggs, scrambled in butter, met all requirements.

Within the memory of many readers, tomatoes were deemed rank poison, classed with the deadly nightshade berries. Gardeners grew them for ornamental purposes exclusively. Every cabin that boasted a window had a row of pretty tomatoes ranged on the top sill. They shared decorative honors with whatnots, stereopticon views, pictures fabricated from gayly colored beans and corn, knitted wristlets, and the invariable "God Bless Our Home" done in vari-colored worsted yarns.

Along Comes Necessity.

Then necessity, or it may have been a daring experiment, caused some one to eat a raw tomato. At that time tomatoes were chiefly seeds and watery pulp. Today, developed into solid, firm substance, consider what a tremendous part they play in our food supply!

Few people of this day ever heard of sheep-sorrel pie, but the Negroes have evolved from this tartly sour, tiny plant, a delicious pastry. Sheep-sorrel closely resembles, in form and appearance, wild white clover. It is as nippy as a lemon and about a peck of the leaves and stems, gathered from an area several yards square, will make the filling for one generous pie.

Only recently has okra been considered suitable for food, yet the southern mammies discovered long ago that okra, while it may be a snooty relative of milkweed, was not poisonous; that it could be utilized in soups and other forms of food. Likewise it was learned that the despised burdock, by proper training, could rise above its slovenly family traits and emerge as pieplant, highly respected and desirable.

Other Toothsome Discoveries.

Just how long ago cooks discovered that pumpkins and squash were not exclusively provender for cattle is debatable, but whether or not the use of pumpkins for pie-filler was a case of necessity, the framer of the first pumpkin pie is entitled to a rising vote of thanks.

It must have been the southern darkies who brought into existence the sweet potato pie and the 'lasses pie, that rich concoction whose next of kin in the north is the caramel pie.

Collards, once rated as pestiferous weeds, now rank with turnip and mustard tops and spinach as appetizing greens. The Negroes brought collards out of obscurity into their respectable standing.

It was the southern mammies, at a loss to provide candy for the "chilluns," who mixed pecan nuts with cane sugar and butter and created the toothsome pralines, now an important article of commerce. Not so long ago sour milk found a welcome only in the pig trough. Today it is the chief constituent, along with raw vegetables, of "farmers' chop suey," a standard summer food.

Out of sheer necessity, the poor people of various countries and notably the southern Negro, have evolved, from waste material, many standard articles of food and delicious pastries.

Entertaining, with the Lenten season approaching, is bound to be done on a much simpler scale. The depression is also a factor in the trend of entertaining.

But, after all, the best hospitality is not judged by the contents or dimensions of the purse.

Don't stop entertaining. It's good for one's state of mind. Choose a simple menu, if any, but be sure to serve it as attractively as you can. The evening will be just as much a success if only root beer and cookies are served at the card table.

JUDGE QUALITY OF ONIONS OFTEN BY THEIR COLOR

Housewives in buying onions have indicated a preference for those that are dark yellowish to brown and are reluctant to take the greenish yellow kinds. The poorly colored onions have thin scales which are shed when the onions are topped, graded, and sacked, he explains. The thicker skinned onions withstand handling better than the thin skinned sorts, and in addition have the color which buyers prefer.

Several growers have had success from using copper sulphate, applied to the land before the crop is planted. The quantity needed varies with the different muck soils. Experiments are to be conducted in 1932 to obtain a basis for general recommendations as to the quantities growers should apply.

Rabbit on Foot Unpopular, But Frying Changes That

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

Verily, B'rer Rabbit is standing, or, more exactly, hopping proof that the meek shall inherit the earth.

There are those, however, who, branding the little fellow of the monstrous ears as a son of perdition, will swear, judicially or otherwise, that his mild, unassuming manner is a mask behind which he hides a fiendish guile, a diabolic shrewdness. And all because, not lacking in foresight, his pioneer forefathers in this country and elsewhere knew a good thing when they saw it. Realizing that their only strength lay in numbers, they, with the glory of the race at heart, begat bunnies, who begat bunnies, who begat more bunnies.

Bring Own Lettuce.

We have it on the authority of a reliable statistician that should their progeny forgather for their fifth wedding anniversary, Grandma and Grandpa Rabbit's clan would number some twenty million. Doubtless the family's home economics expert would suggest that the celebration take the form of a box supper social, advising each member to bring his own lettuce leaf.

It was by its socialistic disregard for personal property rights that the rabbit family incurred the wrath of men. The farmer who awoke one bright morning to find his cabbage patch badly nibbled went out gunnin'. Others set traps and employed poison. Governments have offered bounties for rabbit ears and hundreds of thousands of dollars for an acceptable method of extermination.

In Australia alone more than thirty millions have been expended on rabbit fences—fences that if stretched out in a line would encircle the earth at the equator. But in many sections the story has changed since the rabbit's commercial possibilities were discovered.

Rabbit Meat Popular.

While the war still is on in agricultural districts, in recent years a mammoth fur and meat industry has risen and flourishes. Dyed skins that once masqueraded on the market under assumed names are now a staple product. Almost two hundred million pelts are purchased each season by furriers in the United States. While Chicago never has worked up a great enthusiasm for rabbit dishes, other cities have displayed an enormous appetite for rabbit meat. Los Angeles, for example, consumes more than a million dollars' worth annually.

As a food—well, do you like spring chicken, tender, golden, crisply fried? Then just try a piece of fried rabbit! The thing to remember in preparing it is that rabbit meat must be thoroughly cooked.

Fat Should Be Hot.

Wipe the rabbit with a damp cloth. Cut it into the right sized pieces for serving and dip into a batter made from one well beaten egg, half a cup milk, a quarter of a teaspoon of salt and a half cup of flour, stirred until smooth. Each piece of rabbit should be thoroughly coated before it is placed in hot fat in an iron skillet.

The fat should be hot enough to set the batter quickly. When the batter is browned, the heat should be reduced and the meat cooked for half an hour, until tender. To make gravy, use a tablespoon and a half of flour and a cup of milk to two tablespoons of the fat in which the rabbit was cooked. Add salt and some finely chopped parsley.

Here is an excellent suggestion for a rabbit dish offered by a well known rabbit breeder:

Wash a medium sized rabbit and cut into pieces. Dredge with four tablespoons of flour, two teaspoons of salt and one-eighth of a teaspon of pepper. Brown in four tablespoons of bacon or other fat. Remove meat to stew pan and cover with boiling water, add one medium-sized onion cut in small pieces and two bay leaves. Cook slowly until nearly tender.

To the fat that was used to brown the rabbit add two tablespoons of flour, mix thoroughly and add one cup of vinegar. Pour this sauce over the meat and simmer until it is very tender. Serve with dumplings. With fresh or canned string beans and a dessert of baked apples you will have a delicious meal.

How to Make Hasen Pfeffer.

And this is the way to make Hasen Pfeffer: Wash the rabbit, wipe with a damp cloth and disjoint it. Place the meat in a deep dish or a small crock and cover with a liquid made up of equal parts of vinegar and water. Add a medium sized onion and two lemons, sliced, and salt, pepper, cloves and bay leaves.

When the rabbit has soaked for two days in this mixture, remove the meat from the liquid and brown the pieces thoroughly in butter, turning the pieces frequently. Add the sauce in which the rabbit was pickled gradually. Simmer for about half an hour, until tender. Before serving, stir one cup of thick sour cream into the sauce.

WITHOUT THE PIG WHAT GOOD FOOD WE WOULD MISS!

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

This little pig went to market and this little pig stayed at home. Remember the old nursery rhyme? Well, that, my readers, is the abbreviated story of pork, without which, as the old English manual reads, "there would have been no bacon and without any bacon, no accomplished cookery." What a lot of good food we would have missed these last ten or eleven centuries.

If the story of Ivanhoe still lingers in your memory, it is needless to recall Scott's explanation that "swine" became "pork" only when carried into the castle to feed the nobles. Truly enough, that statement is not fiction, for even after the Norman conquest, raw foods in England retained their Saxon names. Only when cooked and borne to the feast on great silver platters was a "sow" dignified with the Norman name "pork."

Half of Meat Eaten Is Pork.

For hundreds of years we have eaten the meat and we continue to eat it. The fact that science and low price make pork particularly "good news" today justify the figures which reveal that it represents 50 per cent of the total meat consumption in the United States.

It is science that has dispelled the old bugaboo that pork is indigestible. A group of laboratory scientists, explains Miss Inez Willson of the national livestock and meat board, has carried on experiments with various kinds and cuts of meat to determine the comparative ease and completeness of digestion. These tests have shown that beef and lamb digest in a little less time than pork and that pork takes the same amount of time as chicken and not quite as much as turkey.

"There was not an appreciable difference, however, in the times required by any of the cuts," Miss Willson said. "The reason that meat generally takes longer to digest than some other foods is because of the fat it contains. Pork has more fat than beef or lamb, a fact that accounts for the slight difference in the time for digestion.

Meat Necessary in Diet.

"This is the reason meat is said to 'stick to the ribs.' We don't put butter on bread or cream on cereal solely for the sake of flavor but also because instinct or experience has taught that the feeling of satisfaction lingers longer than it would if the quickly digested cereal foods were eaten without a food rich in fat."

Right now, when a diminished food budget requires thoughtful planning to include those articles of diet which will "stick to the ribs," dietitians look upon the use of meat as a wise precaution.

According to Miss Willson, a minimum of five pounds of protein foods, including meats, should be included each week in the family diet. This just meets body needs and she points out that "there is no margin of safety." Seven pounds of such foods as meat, eggs, and cheese are considered a safer allowance for a family of five each week.

"Some fresh meat should be included in the diet, even though it is necessary to cut down on the actual quantity of food to do so," Miss Willson continued.

Quality vs. Quantity.

"This bears out the fact that quality of diet is more important than quantity. Meat is needed for its pellagra-preventive vitamin and its palatability as well as for its excellent protein.

"Perhaps palatability of meals is never more important than when the variety of foods is limited by the budget. For this reason serving meat at least once a day will make it much easier for the housewife to have appetizing meals. The flavor of meat extended to vegetables in stews and soups makes these blander foods more acceptable. Besides, meat furnishes high quality protein which is not found in peas and beans, even though these vegetables are frequently called 'poor man's meat'."

Pork is one of the biggest meat bargains today. Lamb is a close second and certain cuts of beef represent very economical buys. With pork there are no cuts, fresh or cured, that are not cheaper than even the most optimistic shopper would have believed possible two or three years ago. A loin roast may be obtained for less now than spareribs or shoulder cuts a year back.

Pork is particularly well adapted to cold weather use, since its flavor blends so well with our winter fruits and vegetables. Roast pork and apple sauce, pork chops and fried apples, pork tenderloin and baked apples and pork with prunes or apricots are a few of the ways in which fruit and pork may be combined. Among the best known vegetables to serve with pork are greens, sauerkraut, cabbage, turnips, sweet potatoes, beans, and squash.

Pay Attention, Profs! Here's Lesson in Meats

PROFESSORS GO TO SCHOOL; STUDY NEW MEAT CUTS

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Professors of ten midwest colleges are attending school this week in Chicago's stock yards to learn modern meat cutting as devised by experts of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, which is sponsoring the course.

One of the chief purposes of the beef, pork and lamb demonstrations which the professors are watching is to indicate how many of the less demanded cuts can be made just as attractive and fully as palatable as the so-called choice cuts. Among the carvings of Max O. Cullen, demonstrator, are such things as mock duck, made from lamb cuts, and mock fillet made from a flank steak rolled around a strip of back fat an inch thick and then sliced in about two inch portions.

Big and little saws, knives of various lengths and quantities of clean twine and white pine cover portions of the tables on which the lamb, the beef and the pork carcasses are being carved by the demonstrator and then by the students themselves. The work is being done in one of the buildings of the International Live Stock exposition in the stock yards.

States represented are Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Iowa, Ohio, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, and Louisiana. Several of the professors have become well known in their state for demonstrations on one or more types of meat cutting.

In demonstration work to which audiences in various states are invited, the purposes are to increase the knowledge of meat merchants in supplying customers' wants and to educate the public on the variety of cuts and the variety of ways in which meats can be prepared.

One of the most common complaints from the public, the professors explained, is that shoppers say they cannot buy the types of cut and quantity of meat which they would like to prepare. Steaks too thick or steaks too thin are often purchased because the shopper either is dealing with an uneducated meat worker or does not ask correctly for what is wanted, according to the market experts.

Food Talk.

Rumor has it that we have neglected one of the best members of the vegetable family, namely, the sweet potato. To make amends for any such slight to a truly adaptable and interesting vegetable, we want to suggest several ways of preparing it.

Marshmallows added to sweet potatoes prove a delicious combination for those who like both. Take six medium-sized sweet potatoes, one-third of a cup of cream, two tablespoons of butter, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, one-third cup of brown sugar, and fifteen marshmallows. Wash the potatoes thoroughly, and boil in salted water until soft. Peel them while hot, and put them through a ricer. Add to them the butter, sugar, salt, and cream, and whip them until light with a fork. Put them in a buttered dish, which is surrounded with water, in a moderate oven [350 degrees Fahrenheit] and bake for about twenty minutes. Remove from the oven, cover with the marshmallows, and return to the oven to brown. Serve immediately.

But perhaps you are one who doesn't like her sweet potatoes quite so sweet. If that's the case, take six potatoes and bake them until soft. Then remove them from the oven, cut the halves lengthwise, and scoop out the inside. Mash the pulp and add to it two tablespoons of butter and only enough cream to moisten. Whip with a fork to make them light. Season with salt and pepper before refilling the shells. Pack the potatoes lightly in the shells and return to a hot oven for five minutes. Serve immediately.

A Swiss chef bakes his sweet potatoes, but instead of cutting them lengthwise, he slices off their tops to take out the pulp. After which he mashes the pulp and adds to it finely chopped pineapple. Then he refills the shell cups with fluffy potato and garnishes the tops with alternate slices of banana and marshmallow. They are browned for about four or five minutes in a hot oven just before serving.

Boiled sweet potatoes, mashed and beaten to a fluff, may be flavored with beaten egg, cocoanut, and marshmallows. The mixture is permitted to cool before being shaped into dainty potato balls. Cereal mixtures, such as flakes and nutty mixtures, can be used for a coating. Roll the balls in the cereal, then in diluted egg, and again in the cereal. Fry in deep hot fat [about 375 to 380 degrees Fahrenheit] until nicely browned. Drain on unglazed paper and serve.

Our "sweet potato conscience" rests. If you wish other recipes for different ways of preparing them, we shall be glad to send them to you.

TRAVELING MAN ENDORSES ALL-BRAN

Says It Brought Relief From Constipation

"I want to take this unsolicited means to tell you what ALL-BRAN has done for me.

"I am on the road all the time, and this has a tendency to constipate me, or any one who travels all the time. I used to suffer a great deal from constipation, until some one told me about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Since I have been eating this cereal, I have been cured of constipation. I heartily endorse it to any one suffering as I did."—Mr. B. F. Pollard, Marion, N. C.

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in the diet: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN provides both. At the same time, it supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Being a natural corrective ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming.

How much better than risking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation—serious cases, with every meal. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FRANK J. LOESCH REPORT ASSAILS SEVERAL JUDGES

Heads Crime Commission for Fifth Time.

Severe criticism of a number of judges was contained in the annual message of President Frank J. Loesch of the Chicago Crime commission, delivered at the commission's meeting yesterday. No names were given. One Municipal judge has acquired the nickname of "Cash Register," according to Mr. Loesch, who commented:

"To what depths must a judge have sunk to earn such a sobriquet?"

He referred to the "abysmal ignorance" of another judge, and the "mountebank performance" of a third. Lawyers seeking the release of prisoners from penal institutions have a "favorite" judge and one occupant of the bench has the nickname of "Probation," according to Mr. Loesch, who said that still another judge makes it a point to advise defendants that if they plead guilty he will be lenient with them.

Elected for Fifth Term.

Mr. Loesch, who will be 80 years old in April, was reëlected for his fifth term as president of the commission. Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, was elected treasurer.

Mr. Loesch's four years as head of the commission brought the praise of Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, its operating director, who listed the accomplishments of the commission. Col. Chamberlin also praised Police Commissioner Allman, who he said is rehabilitating the police department and "has the confidence of his men, is experienced, able, and honest."

The Loesch message contained the following reference to State's Attorney Swanson:

"Without meaning to be over critical, I feel compelled to say that the state's attorney has not shown that vigor and effectiveness in the prosecution of criminals which was expected of him when he was so triumphantly elected by popular acclaim nearly four years ago."

Fighting Crime for Years.

It was four years ago that Attorney Loesch became a special prosecutor in vote fraud and election violence cases and afterwards he served for a short time as first assistant state's attorney. Later he was a member of the Wickersham commission and he explained that during the last four years he has learned much of the workings of law enforcement which he said he felt must be discussed in the interest of public welfare.

Mr. Loesch's statement began by saying that a mandate of the constitution of Illinois compels judges of the Circuit and Superior courts in Cook county to sit alternately in the Criminal court, and that many judges do not obey this mandate.

"If the judges themselves refuse to comply with their sworn duty and a plain command of the constitution because the duty it commands is a disagreeable one," he commented, "the laymen may well be excused from questioning why he should be expected to obey the constitution or laws where it is troublesome, inconvenient, or disagreeable for him to do so.

Ignorant Judges on Bench.

"The manifest result of so many of the judges refusing to do their sworn duty is to open places in the Criminal court to some inexperienced, timid, ignorant, subservient, or mountebank judges whose presence on the bench would not be tolerated for a day if the public were not made helpless by the bi-partisan deals between party politicians in putting up for their selfish ends only one set of judicial candidates and thereby depriving the voters of a choice."

Mr. Loesch then cited some records of court cases. He gave the conversation in which, he said, a judge "ignorantly" thought he could issue a writ of error. On "mountebank performances," he reported a colloquy involving three colored men on trial for robbery. In it the judge and prosecutor joked about one of the defendants claiming to be a spiritualist and the judge then found them not guilty.

On the general subject of law enforcement, Mr. Loesch mentioned that during 1931 there were 45 gangsters murdered in Cook county, which is 17 less than the number slain in 1930 and 26 less than in 1928.

232 Gang Murders Unsolved.

"So far as I can recall, out of the 232 gang murders committed in the last four years in this county," he remarked, "not a single murderer was brought to trial and all of those 232 murders passed into history as unsolved crimes. This is a frightful condition of lawlessness under which we are suffering and of the helplessness of the public in meting out justice to the gangsters.

"Many times in the last four years I have publicly stated that we could not silently sit by and see those gang murders go on without the immunity accorded to the murderers spreading the mania to murder people who are not gangsters. We are now reaping a part of the harvest of allowing the gang murderers to escape."

TOWN TOPICS STOCK SALE TO NEW YORKERS STOPPED BY COURT

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The charred remains of the 500 data cards used by salesmen of the magazine Town Topics in their attempts to sell the publication's nondividend paying stock to persons of social and financial prominence rest in a wire wastebasket in the basement of the state office building tonight.

They were properly interred by Assistant Attorney General Paul J. McCauley and officials of the attorney general's office with mock solemnity today.

Paired and announcing they were against the resolution—Republican: Thomas of Idaho. Democrats: Bankhead, Logan.

It was a distinct tactical victory for the drys and in particular for Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, and Senator George W. Norris, Republican insurgent of Nebraska.

Introduced yesterday and automatically coming before the senate today, the Bingham resolution would in the normal course have been referred to the judiciary committee had the senator from Connecticut not wished to debate it and so brought the whole controversy out on the floor.

Force Hand of Wets.

Sensing the drys' opportunity to bring about a vote on a prohibition issue on which the wets themselves were lukewarm, not to say hostile, Senator Robinson withdrew the motion he had first made to send the resolution to committee, and with Senator Norris' help precipitated the ballot.

Senator Bingham defended his move, saying that every one knew that congress would not vote to submit a repeal of modification amendment to the people or state conventions. Such a method as his, he declared, was the only method by which a popular expression could be elicited.

He had been actuated, Senator Bingham declared, by the recent statement of Bishop Richardson, newly elected head of the Anti-Saloon league, who was reported as having said he would be willing that a referendum should be taken by states.

Bingham Gives Reason.

"The reason for offering the resolution was that apparently the head of the great dry organization was convinced that it was time to let the people have some voice in the matter," Senator Bingham said. "But apparently he is mistaken. I understand that a movement is on foot to excommunicate the good bishop, probably to remove him from the presidency of the Anti-Saloon league, because, forsooth, he has gone contrary to their wishes, and he has suggested something that has met with the approval of my good friend, Mr. Harry Curran, president of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment."

SAYS U. S. LINERS RUN BARS BEYOND 12 MILE DEADLINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special]—Ships of American lines operate bars for the sale of liquor once they have passed the twelve mile limit, Chairman T. V. O'Connor of the United States shipping board admitted before the house merchant marine committee today, during hearings in connection with the committee's investigation into the sale of the United States lines.

T. V. O'CONNOR.

"Isn't it true that all American steamship lines except the Dollar services, run bars once the ships are outside the limit?" Representative Frederick R. Leihlbach [Rep., N. J.], asked, "and isn't it a fact that it is foolish to keep it a secret—that the lines are thereby losing trade?"

"I believe that is so," Chairman O'Connor replied. "I have heard men say 'I am going on a foreign ship, where I can buy liquor.'"

Give $8,000 Liquor Away.

According to Mr. O'Connor's testimony the prohibition law cost the shipping board $8,000 in liquor supplies in the 1929 sale of the United States lines to the Paul W. Chapman company.

The shipping board head was questioned regarding a charge made by Controller General J. R. McCarl that the board gave a million dollars worth of supplies to the Chapman company without charge in the transfer of the lines.

Mr. O'Connor was firm in his denial of McCarl's statement, but when asked if the stores transferred with the ship included liquor said that they did include about $8,000 worth of liquor considered as medical supplies.

Asked if the board had given the Chapman company that liquor, Mr. O'Connor said:

"Well, we considered a long time. The government could not sell them the liquor or it would be put in the position of a bootlegger. We just figured we'd have to turn it over as hospital supplies without cost."

Stands By "Medical Supplies."

Mr. O'Connor refused to admit that the liquor could be called anything but medical supplies, declaring that "eight thousand dollars worth of liquor is not much for medical supplies."

Bandit Suspect Is Held; Pal Sought in Killing

Carl Greb, 22 years old, 4756 South Ada street, who was arrested after an alleged attempt to rob a couple, was being held at the detective bureau last night. He was seized late Wednesday night by Policeman William Kinsella as he was following Dr. Noel G. Shaw, 1000 Grove street, Evanston, and Mrs. Edward Allen, near the Allen home at 73 East Elm street. A man with Greb, who fled, was said by him to be Walter Buchert, wanted by the police for questioning in connection with the murder of Michael Geary, 6601 South Lincoln street.

TELLS HOOVER '2 YEAR TRUCE' IN TRUST LAWS WOULD AID BUSINESS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—A "two year truce" in the anti-trust laws was suggested to President Hoover as a means of business stabilization today by Charles F. Abbott of New York, director of the American Institute of Steel Construction.

Mr. Abbott, who is starting on a trip of inspection around the country, called at the White House this morning and conferred with the President concerning economic conditions. Following the conference he stated that "wartime measures of relief should be extended in the form of a two year truce in the antiquated anti-trust laws with all their uncertainties."

"There is no desire to establish price agreements or any understandings that will prove to be against public interest," he said. "But there are other steps that could be taken to meet the abnormal conditions that have been in evidence during the last two years. The trade associations should be permitted to take necessary steps to perfect a stabilization of conditions and without the fear of legal prosecution that now prevents such action."

13 MORE PLEAD GUILTY AS U. S. CLOSES RUM CASE

The government's burden in the prosecution of alleged members of the $2,000,000 midwest booze ring was eased somewhat yesterday when thirteen principal defendants stepped up before Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley and pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law. Only twenty-one defendants remain on trial out of more than fifty originally placed on trial.

Shortly before noon Assistant United States Attorney Daniel Anderson announced that the government's case was closed. Then followed the pleas of guilty in rapid succession. Robert W. Besse, former state's attorney of Whiteside county, is the only important defendant left, according to Anderson. The government charges that a still was seized on Besse's farm near Fulton.

The first to plead guilty yesterday were Paul and Anthony Cinquinna, leaders of the Chicago branch of the booze ring, said to be allied with the Capone organization.

Glendora, Miss., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Fair skies and a marked drop in sections of the Mississippi delta's 200 mile wide flood today gave a brighter outlook in the long crises of bursting levees.

Recessions in the water were noted in Panola, Quitman and Talahatchie counties, but the immense sea slowly moving overland threatened further trouble in Humphreys, Yazoo and neighboring counties before it will eventually find its way back into river channels.

At Belzoni, Humphrey county seat with a population of 7,500, levee workers were concentrated to protect the town from a major inundation, but expressed confidence that the dikes would hold.

Japanese Woman Tells Story of Attack.

HONOLULU, Jan. 21.—Honolulu today began a grim hunt for a desperate convict identified from a photograph by Mrs. Toka Okazaki, 29, a Japanese, as the man who had attacked and raped her on the outskirts of the city last night. Medical reports varying as to the accuracy of the woman's story varied, but authorities finally announced that the evidence showed she had been raped.

Mrs. Okasaki, whose husband is an invalid, identified a photograph of Daniel Lyman, escaped murder convict, as the assailant. Police have been ordered to shoot him if necessary. He escaped from Oahu prison Dec. 31. Rewards for his capture alive total $1,100.

Tells Story of Attack.

The woman told police that Takeo Horimoto, an acquaintance, had taken her for an auto ride and had parked his car near the John Rodgers airport, six miles from Honolulu.

"A bandit appeared and beat my escort over the head with a pistol," she said. "He bound Horimoto to a tree and then chased me. He attacked me and then robbed me of $1.25. He took our car and drove me home. As I got out of the automobile he sped on shouting, 'I am sorry I had to hit you.'"

After hearing 15 of 32 witnesses, the grand jury, which began its investigation today of the murder case against Mrs. Granville Fortescue, her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, and two naval enlisted men, adjourned until tomorrow morning.

Physician First Witness.

Dr. Robert Faus, city and county physician, was the first witness. He was called to describe the condition of the body of Joseph Kahahawai, suspecting of raping Mrs. Massie, at the time of the autopsy.

Among witnesses summoned were six members of the police department and three members of the naval shore patrol. One of these is Delbert E. Gilkie, who had been arrested as the man who rented the car in which Kahahawai's body was found in the possession of Mrs. Fortescue, Lieut. Massie and Seaman E. J. Lord. Police escorted Edward Ulil, Kahahawai's cousin, who first reported the abduction to the police, into the grand jury room.

While the grand jury was at work, the territorial senate confirmed Gov. Lawrence M. Judd's appointment of Maj. Gordon C. Ross, National Guard officer, as high sheriff and warden of Oahu prison.

U. S. Official Here on Way to Hawaii Inquiry

Seth W. Richardson, assistant attorney general, accompanied by his wife and their daughter, Martha, 9 years old, arrived in Chicago yesterday en route to San Francisco, where they will join a group of department of justice agents to sail on Jan. 29 for Honolulu. Mr. Richardson will have charge of an investigation in the islands for his department which was requested by congress.

HELD AFTER AUTO THEFT.

Leo Vaneps, 20 years old, 1015 Monroe street, a garage employé, was held by the police last night on a charge of stealing an automobile and driving it to Paw Paw, Mich., for a visit with his sweetheart. The car was taken from the Monroe garage at 1028 Monroe street.

DAUGHTER FIGHTS $1,250,000 WILL OF LOUIS BRINK

Accuses Three Sons of Produce Dealer.

A sister was ranged against her three brothers yesterday in a bill filed in the Circuit court to set aside the will of their father, Louis H. Brink, a founder of the Chicago Poultry board and a charter member of the old Butter and Egg exchange. The will disposes of an $1,250,000 estate.

The plaintiff is Mrs. Jessie Brink Long of 529 North Grove avenue, Oak Park. The brothers are John L. Brink of 7925 Washington boulevard, River Forest; Ernest C. Brink of 533 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, and Lawrence H. Brink, of 529 North Grove avenue, Oak Park.

Sons Named Trustees.

The suit, which was drawn by Attorney Holland F. FlaHavhan, recites that the father died on last April 18. His will, dated Jan. 20, 1930, was admitted to probate on April 25. The sons were named trustees and executors.

Under the terms of the will, the bill asserts, the estate is to be held in trust until the death of the widow, Mrs. Ida Brink, who resides with Mrs. Long. The trustees are directed to provide Mrs. Brink with funds from profits to "enable her to live in comfort and happiness." All other profits are to be divided, at the discretion of the trustees, among the four children.

Control Daughter's Share, Claim.

At Mrs. Brink's death, the bill alleges, the estate will be divided equally, each son receiving one-quarter. Mrs. Long's share, the bill charged, will be held in trust under the administration of her brothers, and only the profits conveyed to her. The trust will be terminated by her death and the property is to be divided among her children.

The bill charges that the will was not the expression of the father's wishes. The action charged that Brink was under the influence of liquor when he signed the will and did not know to what he had added his signature. All three sons poisoned their father's mind against his wife and daughter, the bill charged.

AUTHOR AL SMITH PAID 90 CENTS A WORD FOR ARTICLES

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Ninety cents a word for several thousand words of a series of magazine articles was recently paid to former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, raising him into that company of writers who are better paid for a paragraph than Shakespeare was for some of his plays.

In his office in the Empire State building, between directors' meetings, Author Smith was interviewed on his methods of writing. It was learned that the only actual writing he does consists of brief jottings on the backs of envelopes. For his articles and books he does not write—he makes speeches.

"I must be a little warm on a subject to do anything worth printing," he said. "So I can't get much done during the day. There are always callers, appointments, telephones. I do most of my work in the evenings and on Saturday afternoons."

James Hanley New Author of Sea Stories

Pirandello and Coppard Also Issue Yarns.

THESE three books of short stories illustrate the extreme differences to be found in subject matter, method, intention and final result in the art of short story writing.

A. E. COPPARD.

"Men in Darkness" contains five stories, each centering on a man or a group of men oppressed and crushed by circumstance. The first and best, called simply Narrative," is a terrifying account of a torpedo-wrecked ship. The sweep and power of the narrative, and the stern, bleak writing that ably reflects the desolation of the scene and the unflinching penetration into characters, brutalized by suffering and poverty, make the reader realize the presence of new talent in sea literature.

"Feud" is another example of this new author's familiarity with the sea, though, specifically, it is a study of man's conflict with man, the sea serving as a background.

"Greaser Anderson" is the least successful story in the volume, but it deals movingly with a former seaman out of a job, who is nearly crazed with the need of money to help his defective grandson. The other two stories, "John Muck" and "Rubbish," gives ruthless pictures of human misery.

The fearlessness and unself-consciousness of James Hanley's realism result in a realism that is not merely stark, but is also of an essential beauty, of a power that goes beyond pettiness and sordidness. Hanley is an artist consumed with pity and understanding of man, with a genius for the interpretation and translation of human oppression.

The stories in "Horse in the Moon," selected from thirteen volumes of Pirandello's stories that are scarcely known in America and England, illustrate naturally various stages in the author's artistic and philosophic development. Most of them antedate that popular playwright of "Six Characters in Search of an Author." The titular story represents a later Pirandello. It is a macabre study, fantastically and symbolically handled in the striking effects of light and shade, in the use of color and pattern to symbolize emotions that are only partially suggested, this story has something of the emotive value of a canvas of El Greco and is the most memorable in the volume.

It is hard to believe that "The Schoolmistress' Romance" is by the same author. Written obviously much earlier in his life, it is a quiet, quaint, almost curtsying story of an unhappy love affair. It has sweetness and thoughtful calm, but neither power nor originality.

"Adriana Takes a Trip" and "The Light Across the Way" [the personal choice of the author] have in common an emerging philosophy of life, a mastery of technique that effects the intended monotone of sadness that is both lyrical and despairing. "Miss Holloway's Goat," "A Dinner Guest" and to some extent "Sicilian Limes" are written in a mood of prodigious vitality and broad, splashy humor. They would make excellent light one-act plays.

"Goy," "A Wee Sma' Drop" and "The Imbecile," sardonic in tone, are a bit heavily handled.

Of a very different genre is the work of A. E. Coppard. His most successful tales are those written in affected fantasy and extravagance. In most cases he avoids the obviously serious and it becomes evident in "Dark Knowledge" and "My Hundredth Tale" that he cannot carry off the thoughtful type of story with his present technique. The reader will find himself while reading "Dark Knowledge" much more deeply interested in the incidental motive of the child, who is a fascinating minx, than in the main serious theme. "My Hundredth Tale" after the first few pages grows increasingly uninteresting. On the other hand "The Limping Lady" and "Count Stephen" are wonderfully drawn caricatures and irresistible. When all else is forgotten in this book the marvelously insane Count Stephen will remain to chase away the deepest and most incurable gloom.

"Wilt Thou Leave Me Thus" is a conventional and rather sentimental rehashing of a very old theme. Many of these stories are charming and have the touch of a sensitive mind and a remarkable technical appreciation of imaginative phantasy. There is a great deal under the polished surface and the reader would find it enriching to discover the source of Coppard's elusive genius.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The home office today refused permission to Susan Glaspell, American author and playwright to appear in one of her own plays, "Trifles," at the London Westend theater. Miss Glaspell won a Pulitzer prize for her play, "Alison's House."

This is part of a campaign now going on to exclude all foreign artists from the English stage, and which has reached such a point that even the leading British artists are protesting.

The attitude of the home office is that it is simply retaliating for the action of the United States and other countries in excluding British artists.

Hails Chicago for Its Relief Work Thus Far

Social Agencies' Session Cites Former Crises.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

HUNDREDS of social service and public relief workers took two hours' furlough from their battle against "depression poverty" yesterday. Around the breakfast board of the Chicago Council of Social agencies' annual meeting, they declared their determination to bring further relief to the victims of economic unrest.

The social workers filled the gold room of the Congress hotel even to the balconies.

Edward L. Ryerson Jr., president of the council and head of the Joint Emergency Relief fund, read his annual message. He opened that reading with an editorial which dealt with the problems accompanying depression. When he had finished it, he added:

"The editorial I have just read you appeared in Harper's Weekly in 1857. You see we have had depressions before. But the present emergency we are meeting in a much better manner than the other ones were met.

"If this was not the case the outlook would be hopeless. I hate to think what might have happened if we had not had welfare organizations to tackle the problem. I do not believe there is any city in this country where there is the excellent degree of cooperation between private and public agencies as in Chicago. Without the council the Joint Emergency fund would never have come into being."

Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of the council, as did Mr. Ryerson, pointed out the need for legislative help in providing relief.

"In an emergency that affects so many people as does this one, and when voluntary contributions have been as liberal as they have, and in view of the magnitude of the relief funds required, taxation for relief purposes becomes essential," Mr. Reynolds declared. He added: "The amount available for relief in Chicago and Cook county for the annual period beginning Oct. 1, 1931, is $12,040,000, of which 87 per cent are private funds and 13 per cent is tax funds.

"Obviously, then, the funds beyond those now available, necessary to provide relief for 1932, must come through a method that will spread the source widely and equitably as the tax method does."

The statistical bureau of the council, Mr. Reynolds said, revealed that in January, 1931, there were 47,147 families receiving help from the five major private family relief agencies in Chicago and the Cook County Bureau of Public Welfare. During the subsequent eleven months the number steadily increased to 96,553 in last November, or 105 per cent increase.

"Social work must concern itself first with the mounting curve of relief and hope for its recession," Mr. Reynolds continued. "It can do nothing about industrial revival. Social work is now largely engaged at the foot of the precipice operating fleets of ambulances. There is danger that the guard rails at the precipice's brink will weaken and disappear.

"During the month of December the expenditures for family relief by the private relief agencies alone were approximately $2,500,000."

Elizabeth Hughes, head of the Social Service exchange, a department of the council, said that the exchange had indexed 1,250,000 cards bearing the names of needy families since 1910.

Mr. Ryerson was elected president, Mrs. Theodore Robinson and Ernest S. Ballard, vice presidents; Mary E. Murphy, secretary, and H. O. Edmonds, treasurer. All were reëlected with the exception of Mr. Ballard who will replace George B. Foster. Clifford W. Barnes presided.

Stock's Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, a great cellist, appeared as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra last night almost exactly a year from his original assignment. Considering that he was ill enough to be obliged to cancel all engagements for the rest of the season, the delay was excusable, the more so as last night he appeared to be in the best of physical and interpretative condition.

He played twice on the program, as he will again this afternoon. The first was the Boccherini Concerto in B flat, one of the few that have come down out of the 400-odd that Boccherini wrote. The second was Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo."

As far as one auditor is concerned, Mr. Piatigorsky is the best cellist before the public today. He has, as we say, everything, plus a jubilant strength of tone that most of the cellists do not acquire. His technic is developed to a point that would make further improvement out of the question; he is a musician of high understanding, and consequently an interpreter of high degree.

"Schelomo" has not been frequently played hereabouts. Cellists in general have not taken to it. Were it not for a performance such as Mr. Piatigorsky gives it, the chances are that the public would not take to it either. It has a marvelous poetic and connotative program, including what the program notes call its "slivery" clangors and frenzies of exultation, but its musical content is hardly up to its prose. In fact, it is perhaps unfortunate that the program should quote "and all is vanity and vexation of spirit."

The modern répertoire in cello music is not extensive, but those who have been going to the symphony concerts will remember that not so long ago Mr. Stock wrote a highly distinguished concerto for the instrument. It is hereby recommended to Mr. Piatigorsky, who is a player entirely worthy of it.

Mr. Stock presented a new work, Edward Burlingame Hill's First Symphony, which has both skillful construction and the inward force which means good music. Mr. Hill, who appeared on the stage after the performance, would seem to have given heed to the dictum once pronounced by John Philip Sousa that the only change in the symphony orchestra since the time of Haydn has been the addition of wind instruments. Mr. Hill uses his wind instruments freely, also well. He devises good melody and it in a most attractive fashion.

The rest of the program consisted of two movements from Handel's Second Concerto for string orchestra in the Sigismund Bachrich version, and Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slave."

Because of the continuing illness of René Maison, Paolo Marion went into the name part of Wagner's "Lohengrin" at the Civic Opera house last night. The others in the cast were Lotte Lehmann, Maria Olszewska, Hans Hermann Nissen, Eduard Habich, and Chase Baromeo.

Good morning!

SCENE: A union depot.

CHARACTERS: A young hobo, his pal, a chorus girl, a counterfeiter, an inebriated traveler, a madman, a detective and his partner, and the milling hundreds whose paths cross in any union depot in any large city.

This is one fine little melodrama! It's exciting. It's believable. It abounds in good acting and has been directed with a sure and sympathetic touch.

Young Mr. Fairbanks appears as a gay hobo—Chic—accompanied by a pal who is much older and even more happy-go-lucky than himself. Chic comes into possession of luggage not his own—he having none—and treats himself to a shave and some clothes. Fate slings a violin, full of counterfeit money at him, and causes him to aid a chorus girl, down on her luck, low in spirits and pursued by an unsavory person with a crick in his brain.

Come the police . . . !

Mr. Fairbanks gives a smooth and engaging performance. The rôle was made for him. Joan Blondell, sophisticated, but far from being hard boiled, is appealing as the chorine. Guy Kibbee is awfully funny as "Scrap Iron," the raggedy pal, and David Landau, who did such marvelous work as Maurrant in "Street Scene," portrays a plain clothes man who acts like a human being. Frank McHugh is comical as the dickens in his one scene at the picture's start where he depicts a tight traveling man with a patriotic complex.

Don't let anybody sic' you away from "Union Depot." It's worth both your time and your money.

SENORA DE LA BOROBOLLA.

OAXACA CITY, Mexico., Jan. 21.—Among those who are studying the jewels, golden masks, and colored pottery taken from the tombs at Monte Alban, are F. OLD WAR TUNNELS LINKING LOST CITIES, PROFESSOR ASSERTS

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Declaration that ancient tunnels undermine much of the western half of the state of Oaxaca, where last week a large cache of treasure was found in an ancient tomb, was made here today by Prof. Ramon C. Robles, a Mixteca Indian, who is federal inspector of schools for the state of Oaxaca.

The professor declared that old Mixtecan heiroglyphics tell of tunnels connecting all the principal Mixteca cities and fortresses with the capital and royal city of Tilantongo. He said the longest of these tunnels was more than thirty miles.

They were built, he said, for protection and quick communication by warriors between the principal cities, and one or two of them have been partially explored. The others have caved in during various earthquakes, or their entrances have been hidden by the action of nature or the elements.

The professor also declared that the ancient Mixtecans, who were the finest goldsmiths ever known to western civilization, had an art of mixing metals with juices of herbs, which rendered these metals so pliable they could be molded like clay. This, he says, is the way the present treasures found at Monte Alban were fashioned, as he declares these golden bracelets, earrings, and necklaces bear no evidence of having been beaten into shape.

The secret has been zealously guarded, he said, in the hills of Oaxaca and still is practiced, but it never has been revealed, because some Mixtecans never have acknowledged the dominance of the white man.

World Fair of 1933 Assured, Its Chief Says

Rufus C. Dawes Talks at Hamilton Club.

DIRECTORS of the Century of Progress exposition will not consider under any circumstances the postponement of the 1933 fair, President Rufus C. Dawes declared yesterday at a luncheon of the Hamilton club. He attacked a whispering campaign which he said had been carried on in the last few months, to the effect that the fair will have to be postponed a year or two. He termed such rumors "the voice of defeatists."

RUFUS. C. DAWES.

No possible advantage could be gained by postponing the fair, Mr. Dawes said. He added that the directors have sufficient financial resources to carry out the project on time, and that delay would not only offer no advantage, but would increase the financial burden of the exposition enormously. He explained the present financial situation of the fair in detail.

"One important item," he said, "is that we have already made contracts with important corporations for the erection of buildings or the purchase of space in the aggregate sum of about $3,000,000. These contracts are binding upon the corporations and in most cases the consideration has actually been paid in advance, and they are equally binding upon us. These contracts call for the opening of the fair on June 1, 1933.

"The interest upon our bonds is now more than $300,000 a year. By 1933 it will probably be $600,000 a year. The expenses of maintaining the organization we have gathered together are about $60,000 a year. The cost of postponing the fair one year would be not less than $1,200,000. I would not dare to estimate what the cost might be in the destruction of morale and the impairment of prestige. Upon the other hand, I do not know of any advantage to be gained by a postponement. It sounds like the voice of defeatism.

"We have issued $5,600,000 worth of bonds. We have $4,400,000 worth of bonds as yet unissued, of which $1,600,000 have been subscribed for. We have $250,000 deposited with our bonds to indemnify the south park commission. We have $628,000 in the proceeds of the $5 legion memberships untouched. We have more than a million dollars in hand to meet contracts for buildings and other expenses."

Ten additional buildings for the fair have been planned, to be devoted to particular industries and interests, Mr. Dawes said. All of these buildings will depend upon the response of those industries and interests to pleas for their participation, which has been good to date, he said.

"In no case," he concluded, "do we risk our solvency to achieve mere magnitude."

Stylish Teeth Part of Work for Newer Science of Dentistry

Various modern methods of dentistry, including the hand painting of teeth to match the originals, ways of invoking painlessness and the prevention of tooth decay in children, were observed by thousands of dentists in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel yesterday. It was the closing session of the four day annual convention of the Chicago Dental society, attended by between 7,000 and 8,000 dentists, and was devoted to more than 200 clinics held by visitors.

Prevention of tooth decay now begins with the child before birth with the proper diet of the mother, it was suggested. When the child is 3 years old his teeth and jaws should be X-rayed and according to the density of the new teeth then in formation in the jaw the dentist should coöperate with the family physician in advising diet for the child, it was pointed out.

"The successful dentist of the future will carry a large percentage of those who are brought to him as young children through to middle life and beyond with a full complement of teeth," said Dr. Arthur D. Black, dean of Northwestern University Dental school, speaking in the morning.

Speaking on "Local Anesthesia," Dr. W. B. Amy of Toronto, Canada, said the term "painless dentistry" no longer is associated with the quack, but is a fact.

CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT, 73 YEARS OLD, QUITS AS PEACE CHAIRMAN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Carrie Chapman Catt, feeling that "one can't go on forever," stepped from the driver's seat today in the national organization she formed to further one of two causes with which her name is linked around the world.

"I want to give up general responsibility for everything that comes up," she said. But she will continue speaking occasionally.

At the insistance of the 73 year old woman's suffrage and world peace leader, the nominating committee of the national conference on the cause and cure of war returned a slate leaving off the "chairman," a title which has stood for seven years before the name of Mrs. Catt.

Mentally vigorous, but leaning on a polished cane, Mrs. Catt said:

"Like every reformer—I was born a reformer—I know my cause will win. Final peace may come rather quickly, or it may come slowly.

STRACHEY, NOTED FOR HIS BRITISH BIOGRAPHIES, DIES

The author of "Queen Victoria" and "Elizabeth and Essex" had been ill with paratyphoid fever for many weeks and had been confined to his home at Marlborough.

Mr. Strachey, with his tall, angular frame and his striking red beard, was a familiar figure in London's social and literary circles. He often said he buried himself in the country when he wanted to work, "not so much because of the London noises but because of the constant social demands on one's time."

Made Queen "Human."

Early in his career the biographer wrote for English reviews and he struck the popular fancy first in 1921 when he published "Queen Victoria." The book was regarded as a monumental presentation of the entire Victorian epoch. He was credited with making Queen Victoria a living person and England knows more about that famous ruler because of him.

He did it again in 1928 with his "Elizabeth and Essex," and his fame as an artist who could make history live was complete. "Eminent Victorians" preceded these works, and "Portraits in Miniature" followed them—both being widely circulated.

Had Conflict with Dean Inge.

His writings once led him into a literary debate with "Gloomy Dean" Inge of St. Paul's cathedral over the legitimacy of Queen Elizabeth's parentage. The dean said, "I don't believe she had a drop of Tudor blood in her veins," and Strachey retorted, mind on the budgetary proposal and a question of facial resemblance."

The author was born of Gen. Sir Richard Strachey, an Indian administrator, and Lady Jane Strachey, still regarded as a brilliant woman. He was educated at Trinity college, Cambridge.

SOCIETY NEWS AND FASHIONS OF THE DAY

Junior League of Evanston Feeds Children

Runs School Luncheons; Other Activities.

THE Evanston Junior league is as busy as ever these days, even though the attractive tearoom, the Maisonette, it ran in Evanston for some time, is closed. In addition to the regular activities which have been a part of the work for years, there are three new and interesting fields into which the league has ventured.

The first of these is a six weeks' course in Braille which is given under the supervision of Mrs. Bridges at Red Cross headquarters to prepare the girls for the translation of books into Braille for the benefit of the blind. Mrs. Francis Huffman is at the head of this group.

The second is the formation of four groups of eight girls each to roll bandages for the benefit of the Red Cross and the Evanston Community hospital. The league clubrooms in the Georgian hotel are being used for this work. Mrs. Wesley Webb, Mrs. Gordon Pirie, Mrs. Thomas Chase, and Mrs. Alfred Taylor are in charge of these groups.

The third new activity is the entire furnishing of school lunches for undernourished children from the Washington school. These children go to the Boltwood fieldhouse near the school every day. There five leaguers prepare the lunch, serve it, and entertain the children until time for their return to school. To date about forty-five children are being fed each day. Mrs. John W. Denison supervises the menus and is general chairman, while Mrs. Newton Wagner secures the girls for each day's work.

For a number of years the league has been active in infant welfare work, the out-patient department of the Evanston hospital, and the production of puppet shows. Last September it opened its own dental clinic at 1805 Dempster street, which is entirely supported and managed by the league. Mrs. John J. Louis, Mrs. Horatio Rogers, Miss Lenore Rogers, and Mrs. Stanley Pierce represented the Evanston league at the conference in St. Louis this week.

Contemporary Music Group Plans Sunday Recital.

The Chicago chapter of the International Society for Contemporary Music is having one of its delightful affairs Sunday evening at the Cliff Dwellers, to which the members of that club have been invited. A buffet supper will be served at 7:30 o'clock and at 9 a program will be given by the Hart House String quartet of Toronto, and Rudolph Reuter. One of the numbers on the program will be a composition by the chairman of the Chicago chapter, Dr. Wesley La Violette. Frederick Stock is music chairman, and the directors are Mrs. Thomas H. Fisher [Ruth Page], Mrs. Thatcher Hoyt [Phyllis Fergus], Mrs. Cara Verson, Mrs. Avern Scolnik [Amy Neill], Rudolph Ganz, Frank Waller, conductor of the Milwaukee Symphony orchestra; Eric De Lamarter, and Edward Collins. Most of the directors are having parties for the affair on Sunday, Mr. Waller bringing down some friends from Milwaukee, and Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt entertaining for the Robert L. Zabriskies of Aurora, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Augustus West of 232 East Walton place are giving a tea Sunday from 5 to 7 o'clock for Mrs. West's sister and her new husband, Mr. and Mrs. Macauley Carter, who are just back from a honeymoon spent at Lucerne-in-Quebec, and are at home at 210 East Pearson street.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Parker Johnston of Highland Park are greatly thrilled over the news they had the other day from the American Red Cross office stating that a certificate of award had been forwarded to the president of Wellesley college to be presented to their daughter, Ruth Adams, in recognition of her bravery in saving a man from drowning last summer at Lily lake.

Miss Johnston is a sophomore at Wellesley and has not made her debut yet, although her mother says she cannot imagine how her daughter can be more "out" than she is now during her vacations from college. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston are planning to entertain in some way, probably with a dinner party, for his parents, Mr. and and Mrs. Robert Stewart Johnston of 5011 Dorchester avenue, on Feb. 16, when the senior Johnstons will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnston are old south siders, and so were Mrs. Samuel Johnston's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. John D. Adams, Mr. Adams having been born in Chicago and a descendant of John Quincy Adams.

Miss Anne Winslow, who came to Chicago with her father, Dr. C. E. A. Winslow of Yale, for the Frontier Nursing Service meeting on Wednesday at Mrs. Charles Dempster's residence, will depart for the east tomorrow in order to attend a meeting of the service committee on Monday at Miss Anne Morgan's house on Sutton place in New York. Miss Winslow is executive secretary of the New York branch.

Branches in the 12 cities where the service has organized help are all getting to work in earnest now to sell tickets for the West Indian cruise on the Britannic which the service members are sponsoring. The steamer sails on Feb. 27 from New York and returns on March 13, and if the women succeed in selling reservations for the total capacity of 600 passengers the service will be richer by $50,000.

There are all sorts of special features to induce vacationers to take this cruise, including a grand naval ball and reception to be given by Gen. Preston Brown, naval commandant at Colon, in the Panama Canal Zone, and a similar affair to be held in Port-au-Prince, in Haiti, at which Col. and Mrs. Horton will be hosts. Gen. Brown and Col. Horton are relatives of Mrs. Mary Breckenridge, who heads the nursing service and who is now in a Kentucky hospital awaiting the mending of a broken vertebra, the result of a fall from her horse when she was riding over the hills on a mission of mercy. She is to be fitted into a brace and will be able to go on the cruise, it is hoped, if she continues to improve satisfactorily.

Painting on Magazine on Day She Married.

It was an interesting coincidence that the Literary Digest bearing a painting of Mrs. Agnes Potter Van Ryn's for a frontispiece should come out the day she became Mrs. Selden Gale Lowrie, wasn't it? Mrs. Van Ryn has been expecting to see her painting, "Meditation," a portrait of a young woman with an open book on her lap, reproduced by the Literary Digest, for some months, for she was interviewed by that magazine's reporter in New York that long ago, but since it had not been published thus far, she thought perhaps it never would be, so imagine her surprise to receive the magazine the very day she was married.

The marriage took place last night at 8:30 o'clock at the Thorndyke Hilton Memorial chapel of the University of Chicago, with the Rev. Dr. Edward Scribner Ames officiating. Only the relatives and a few close friends were present at the ceremony and the supper which followed at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Frank R. Lillie of 5801 Kenwood avenue. Mark Louis Potter gave his sister in marriage and there were no attendants. The bride is a well known painter and the groom is professor of political science at the University of Cincinnati. Mr. and Mrs. Lowrie will be at home after March 1 at 535 Terrace avenue, Clifton, Cincinnati.

WELFARE AND FASHIONS

Smart daytime attire for women and men is illustrated in this picture taken at a meeting of the Infant Welfare society at the Chicago Woman's club Wednesday morning. Mrs. McNally, the mother of one of this year's debutantes, Miss Eleanor McNally, resides in Evanston and is active in infant welfare work there. In this picture she is wearing a dark green cloth gown with a felt hat of the same shade of green, ornamented with a green feather. Mrs. McIlvaine, who resides in Lake Forest, is wearing a black and red cloth dress, a lovely soft black caracul coat, and a black felt hat with a white band. Like many smart women, Mrs. McIlvaine prefers to have a separate scarf to wear with her fur coat instead of a big collar on the coat, and her sable scarf is hanging on her arm in the picture.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould arrived from Newport and has taken an apartment at the St. Regis for the late winter and spring.

Mrs. Howard Linn Plans for Weeks in Virginia.

Mrs. Howard Linn, one of society's most indefatigable hostesses, is going to New York next Tuesday for a brief stay after which she will go to Middleburg in Virginia for three or four weeks.

The Silas H. Strawns are expected to return from a month's stay in Washington, D. C., a week from today.

Mrs. John Liddell arrived in Chicago yesterday and will be at the Riverside residence of her sister, Mrs. George M. Silverthorne, for a long visit with with her numerous kin in the western suburb. Mrs. Liddell has been traveling in Europe for the last year or so, but her house in Shanghai, China, will be reopened for her return there this spring. She will sail from Vancouver in March.

Mrs. Joseph B. Long will depart on Feb. 3 or 4 for her annual winter stay at Palm Beach. She is to motor south from Washington with Ilse Andrews of New York. Instead of leasing a house this year Mrs. Long has taken an apartment at the Everglades club.

Hoovers Greet 30 Senators at State Function

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Ninety-six senators were bidden to the White House reception in their honor this evening. About 30 of them came to the party, and of that number, all the Democrats I could count were eight, as follows:

MRS. HERBERT HOOVER.

Josiah W. Bailey, the North Carolina ex-Baptist preacher whose wife had never been in the White House before and was eager to look around at things.

The senators, of course, came in the front door; all the other guests came in the east entrance and waited behind the ropes until the Hoovers, followed by the cabinet, had marched down the big staircase and into the blue room to greet the guests of honor.

George H. Moses of New Hampshire, the temporary president pro tem of the senate, led the group. Immediately in back of him came a Democrat, Senator Walsh. Then came Indiana's Senator Watson with his shock of hair standing high. Then Connecticut's Senator Bingham. He's been a professor in three different universities and he speaks seven different languages. But his colleagues greated him in this unacademic way—"How's beer?" He's introduced a bill to legalize the return of beer.

Senator Capper of Kansas was there and Senator Glenn of Illinois. Senator Lewis of Illinois was absent; so was Bob LaFollette of Wisconsin, Hiram Johnson of California, Borah of Idaho.

Senator Austin, the new man from Vermont, seemed to be having a fine time. Senator Barbour, the millionaire from New Jersey, was accompanied by his wife and her gown was so Parisian that she was more gazed upon even than her husband, who is six feet three and used to be a first rate boxer.

What did the ladies wear? Well, Mrs. Hoover had on something they call ice-blue satin, and Mrs. Stimson had a brand new pink brocaded gown. The other cabinet wives disappointed the stylists in the crowd.

"Humph," remarked a woman next to me, "they're wearing the very same dresses they wore to the last reception."

Hoosier Salon Opens at Marshall Field's Galleries Tomorrow

The eighth annual Hoosier salon, at which works of artists, now from all parts of the country but who came from Indiana, will be exhibited, is to be opened tomorrow morning at the Marshall Field & Co. galleries. The exhibits will remain for two weeks.

A total of $3,500 will be given in prizes this year, these prizes having been subscribed by former residents of Indiana living in and near Chicago and by the schools and colleges of Indiana.

Among the artists who will be represented are Wayman Adams and Howard Leigh of New York, Edgar Forkner of Seattle.

EVENING WRAP DISCARDS FUR

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The fur bearing opera cloak is as traditional as the tragic end to grand opera, and it is almost as sad unless the fur used be something in the luxury class like sable, ermine, and such exclusive pelts.

Parisiennes having too much good sense to put money on their backs when it is needed in the exchequer have for this reason created a new vogue that breaks the fur-laden-cloak tradition. This style is that of the furless opera cloak which is quite as glamorous as anything in priceless fur.

Trailing, or almost trailing, coats of gleaming velvet in jewel tones are the wraps of the winter season in Paris, and many of the most fashionable have no fur trimming—not an inch of it. One of these is shown in our sketch, and I leave it to you to say if this garment is not a glorious wrap. Yes'm, I think so, too.

It is designed by the Parisian genius of evening wraps, Augustabernard, and is made of emerald green pile velvet. The bodice part of this cloak has a quaint and picturesque glamour. The front is shirred and in one piece with the dolman sleeves, which begin from super-exaggerated dropped shoulder seams, while the back is fitted in to a beautiful curve and ends in a rounded seam at the hipline. A draped shawl collar of velvet is as flattering as the most priceless rug.

The skirt of this wrap is straight in front and has a wrap around closing. It extends to the insteps. The back is laid in unpressed knife plaits, as the sketch shows, and trails a few inches on the floor. Nothing smarter or more gorgeous can be found for evening wear on formal occasions.

Home Talent Draws Crowd to Club Recital

THE WOMAN'S ATHLETIC club management, accustomed as it is to handling large crowds at its popular Thursday morning programs, was almost overwhelmed by the attendance yesterday at the "home talent" program given by a trio members, Marie Morrisey Keith, Harriet Lowden Madlener, and Elsie Dixon Faithorn.

MRS. STANLEY ZARING.

Shortly before the program began at 11 o'clock every seat in the ballroom proper and in the balcony had been taken. After that the maids were kept busy finding places for the late comers in the lounge adjoining the ballroom, and even efficient Vera, the attendant who keeps tab on the members as they come in and checks them off on the membership list, gave up trying to remember who was in and who was out.

The program was long and so pleasant that even the guests who had to stand during most of it applauded heartily for numerous encores. Mrs. Keith, who gave three groups of songs, wore a pink and green brocaded gown and a snug brown turban. Mrs. Madlener, who played the piano with that fine technique for which she is noted, was simply attired in a black velvet dress with elbow length sleeves and no trimming save a narrow sash of coral metal cloth. Mrs. Dixon, whose contribution was reading from modern American poets, wore a brown crêpe frock with full sleeves bordered in orange.

In the audience, which numbered close to 500, we noticed Mrs. T. Philip Swift, Mrs. Stanley Zaring, Mrs. James A. Cathcart, Mrs. W. Irving Osborne Jr., Mrs. Henry Bartholomay, Mrs. Orville Thompson, Mrs. Tracy W. Buckingham, Mrs. Walter H. Eckert, Mrs. Edwin P. Dewes, Mrs. Luther S. Hammond, Mrs. William P. Henneberry, Mrs. Oliver M. Knode, Mrs. Mark W. Cresap, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, who lunched later with her daughter, Mrs. Madelner; Mrs. Bertrand Walker, Mrs. Milton M. Morse, Mrs. F. Edson White, Mrs. Mark W. Trude, Mrs. William G. Hibbard, Miss Henrietta Countiss, Mrs. James C. Hutchins Jr., Mrs. Richard S. Folsom, Mrs. Merrill Colt, Mrs. John W. Valentine, and Mrs. Frederic W. Upham.

Spring Skirts to Be Shorter, Word in Paris

Hip Length Jackets; Blouses Are Popular.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Shorter skirts for spring street wear were featured by a prominent Parisian suit and coat designer today in the opening showings of his 1932 spring styles.

Suit skirts were one, or two inches shorter than last year and were straight, their only fullness being one left side pleat at the knee line.

Hip length, pinch back jackets were a rule. They were decidedly pinched at the waist by complicated tucks and seamings. Sleeves were straight, and the broad shoulder line was slightly exaggerated.

Tailleur farics were universally hard surfaced, such as twills and tweeds, in black, white and brick, blue and white, or biege and brown combinations.

Coats with fitted waistlines were less exaggerated than the suits. They varied from tailored models with notched lapel collars to dress designs with moderately large fur collars. Many featured broad revere collars edged with fur. Beige wool trimmed with brown astrakan, grass green trimmed with black astrakan, and bright blue trimmed with mink were outstanding. Coat fabrics were soft wools.

DRAMA LEAGUE HEARS ENGLISH NOVELIST ON WRITING FOR STAGE

Members of the Drama league and their guests had an interesting meeting yesterday afternoon in the ballroom of the Drake when Sylvia Thompson, English novelist, spoke on "Contemporary English Drama." Mrs. Thompson was introduced by Mrs. Clarence Hough, acting president during the illness of Mrs. Marvin Miner Jr. Mrs. Thompson has large dark eyes and a lovely English complexion. She spoke of the plays that have been produced in London recently—many of them have been seen in New York and Chicago also—and of the two places where Londoners have the opportunity to see Shakespearean plays produced, at Stratford-on-Avon and at a theater in the slums. That place, she said, always is crowded, unlike most other theaters. After the lecture tea was served.

Today the Chicago branch of the League of American Pen Women will give a luncheon for Mrs. Thompson at the Stevens hotel at 1 o'clock.

By ALICE M. WILLIAMSON

SYNOPSIS.

Lorne Carlton and Dick Farrow, popular moving picture stars of Hollywood, sail for Europe on a delayed honeymoon, after a year's happy marriage. Lorne is sad about leaving, as she has an undefinable presentiment of trouble, but Dick is anxious for the adventure. Dick's parents are famous on the stage. Lorne, who fought her way through poverty to the heights, feels that she is not approved by the elder Farrows. Dolores, duchess of Crowninshield, a friend of Dick's parents, has invited the young people to be her guests in London. She is divorced from the duke, but is one of England's most important hostesses. From the first moment of their meeting Dick is a willing captive of the beautiful and charming duchess. Before the visit is ended Lorne realizes that she has lost her husband. She returns home alone, Dick deciding to give up his movie career and remain in London. Back in Hollywood, Lorne obtains a Mexican divorce from Dick, and shortly after Dick and Dolores are married. Two years after their separation Dick's name is almost forgotten by the movie fans, while Lorne has made several successful pictures. Then Dick returns to Hollywood, with his duchess and calls on Lorne, begging forgiveness.

TRIUMPH AT LAST.

"Why, I was afraid that Dolores' coming might have something to do with you. I wouldn't risk her trying to get at you and—and saying God knows what."

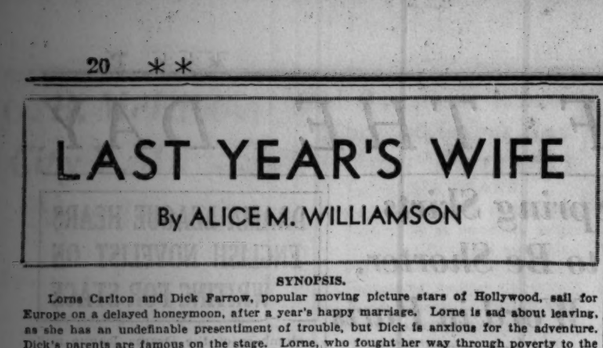
"Really, Dick, I can't see what the duchess of Crowninshield could say to me," Lorne drawled, creditably, "that you need mind her saying, or that I could possibly mind hearing, in these days when our past together is so long ago. Still—here you are, so you can explain!"

"Here I am," he repeated, "looking at you, Lorne, and this room. I—I might never have been away; I've thought of you so constantly. You've haunted me so, sleeping and waking. Your eyes! I've been to see every picture you've made. And I've read things about you in the picture magazines and so on. They still call you 'Burning Beauty,' my name for you. But I didn't know—I didn't know till today that you'd stayed on in this house. I imagined you would have sold the place and everything in it, and bought some other place as unlike it and as far away as possible."

"No," said Lorne, quietly. "I realized that, after the wonderful Queen Anne's square house, this must have seemed like 'thirty cents' to you, but I loved it all dearly; I felt at home here. I still do."

"Thirty cents!" Dick groaned. "Are you quoting me? Was I ever fool enough to say a thing like that?"

"I seem to remember that you did use those very words once," Lorne told him.



"You are the one woman of my life."

"Well, instead of looking like thirty cents to me now," said Dick, "this house looks like a bit of heaven. And you look like an angel in it."

Lorne laughed. "We used to call each other 'angel,'" she remembered. "But after all the gorgeous places you've been to in different countries, this is quite a child's paradise."

"I've been in hell," Dick exploded. At last that something within him which had threatened to burst had burst.

Lorne's frivolous air fell from her like a dropped garment. Her kind soul could not be denied.

"I'm sorry. So sorry!" she said.

"Thank you, Lorne," Dick choked. "If you weren't an angel you'd be glad. Damned glad."

"O, no!" she breathed. But in her heart she was glad.

Dick was not grateful. "O," he went on, "if you'd ever loved me with a big, wild love, you would be glad. You'd be ready to yell with joy, in revenge. I deserve that!"

"O, well," said Lorne, "if we all got what we deserved! I loved you, Dickie, my boy, with the biggest, wildest love there is. But you didn't want any kind of love from me after you saw the duchess. I bored you. My God, Dick, that hurt! I'd never bored any one before. I had to do something about it. The only thing I could do was to turn my love off at the main, you know, the way one does when a water pipe bursts and begins to flood a house."

"I see!" said Dick. "You did that. You turned off your love! I see . . ."

"No, you don't see," Lorne contradicted him. "Nobody could see, or ever has seen. We'll let that drop. But about this hell of yours. Do you want to tell me anything? Not that it's good taste in me to listen. Still, if it would help at all!"

"Good taste be damned, and double damned!" Dick barked. "Everything be damned except you. Everything is damned when one's in hell. Did you ever hear of Ixion?"

"No," said Lorne, "but I'll look it up.

"Don't trouble," said Dick. "Ixion was bound to a wheel which turned and turned through eternity. That was his hell. Mine hasn't been unlike it."

"To me," said Lorne, "the duchess of Crowninshield seems as little like a wheel as anything could. She has such a lovely figure. But, of course, I never knew her well."

"I was quite a trophy for her," Dick said, dropping the Ixion simile. "She has dragged me around from pillar to post, showing me off. Or that's what she did while I was a novelty to her, and people said: 'O, Dick Farrow, the movie star!' But my novel never succeeded really, and my fans forgot me soon, as you prophesied they would. Then I spent most of my money, too, and became merely the duchess' little husband, to her friends; and to her—to her—nothing, unless a sort of legitimate gigolo, chauffeur, parcel carrier, courier, etc. A poor, idle wretch!"

"O, you must surely exaggerate!" Lorne reproached him. "But even imagining part of this, I can realize how you've suffered, adoring her as you do."

"I don't," said Dick. "I never did adore her. I know that now, and I knew it long ago, but I realized the truth about myself too late. I was infatuated, nothing else but. O, Lorne, why didn't you hold me? Why did you throw me to her? I should have got over it soon and we would have been happy again. It was you I adored. You are the one woman of my life."

"Well, really!" Lorne gasped. "This is gratitude. The duchess of Crowninshield was the moon. You cried for it. I got out from under and let you have it. You would have hated me, Dick, if I'd tried to hold you. Do your father and mother know all this?"

"No, they don't," he replied, sullenly. "We didn't see them. We just passed through New York, and the parents were trying out a new play in Washington. Dolores was in a mad hurry to get here."

"But," Lorne argued, "I can't see how I enter into her scheme of things at all. Probably I don't. She may," Lorne continued, thoughtfully [wildly happy now that Dick wasn't after all "flaunting" his duchess in Hollywood] "have taken a fancy to see the studios. Or can it be she would like to have a go at the screen? She's far prettier than any of us, and has a better voice. May it not be that, and nothing whatever to do with me? I mean her desire to come here?"

"Honestly, I don't know—I don't understand her," confessed Dick. "All I know is that one day when it had been settled for us to go to the Lido, tickets bought and everything, Dolores said the Lido would bore her stiff. She wanted to see California, which she'd given a miss when she honeymooned in America years ago with the duke; and she wanted to see it at once. She had to see it. We rowed; rowed even worse than usual, which is saying a lot. I told her that I refused to go to California. She said: 'Good! I'm glad you refuse!' with a wicked light in her eyes. I wonder why I ever thought they were beautiful! So I guessed she meant to do something special in California which she didn't want me to see—or know about. That could mean nothing but you, Lorne—some deviltry of hers; so I changed my mind and came. Dolores and I have hardly spoken to each other between London and Los Angeles. She hates me, Lorne."

Lorne thought hard for a moment. She sat still, looking lithe but feeling rigid, so strong was the temptation to fling herself into Dick's arms. She felt the electric thrill of his yearning for her. She, who had been so hopeless an hour ago, singing sad songs, was happier than she had ever been in her life. This was triumph—at last.

"Well," she said, "you're on the spot and able to know what takes place when it does take place; so please don't prevent the duchess from coming to see me if that's what she wants to do. I can't believe it is, but . . ."

Dick's eyes strove to read hers, once so clear to him.

"You've got some definite plan about Dolores, Lorne!" he said.

"Hardly a plan," she hedged. "It might be wasted. Just a thought has come into my head, but I can take care of myself with the duchess, never fear. But tell me this, quickly; you're quite sure that you're tired of being the duchess of Crowninshield's husband, and if you and she have one big unforgivable quarrel you won't regret her and want her back again?"

"Would a man who could remember an incarnation as an ape want his tail back again?" asked Dick, bitterly.

"That's all I need to know," said Lorne. "Now let the duchess come! And I'begin to feel, as you do, that she will come—soon. What if it should be today? What if she should appear while we're together in this room?"

"I wish she would, if she comes at all! Nothing could be better."

"I don't agree with you. I couldn't deal with the duchess and her husband both at the same time. Dick, I've been glad, truly and really glad, to see you, but now—I'd be glad to have you go."

Swiss Climbs to Movie Job in Hollywood

He's Imported Along with Alpine Film.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 21.—Luis Trenker, former Tyrolean Alpine guide, today took his first look around Hollywood preliminary to his scheduled appearance for the Universal Film company in an American film modeled on the Swiss mountain drama, "White Hell of Pitz Palu."

The Universal studio bought from Trenker's German backers the negative of a foreign mountain drama, described as something like "White Hell," and Trenker will leap from synthetic crag to crag on Hollywood location sites, as the studio makes American scenes to match the negative which has been imported.

Trenker became a European film star after an unusual start. He had been employed to double and do small parts in a Swiss mountain drama for a European male star. The star in the picture rebelled at some of the altitudinous scenes which he thought hazardous, and finally all the star's part in the film was thrown out and Trenker substituted in the star's footage. All Trenker's pictures have made money abroad.

When Claudette Colbert called up her actor husband, Norman Foster, here by long distance from New York and told him she was lonesome, Norman forgot he was scheduled to start in Universal's "Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood" early next week and hopped an air liner for New York. The studio never knew of his departure until he was gone, but is holding his place open, meanwhile sending urgent messages to New York for Claudette and Norman to say their sweet nothings in a hurry and let Norman come back to work.

Columbia University Plans 25 Million Tech School

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Columbia university today announced plans for a new engineering center to cost $25,000,000. The project contemplates an expansion of the engineering school on a scale similar to that of the school of medicine at the medical center.

Faculty and alumni committees are considering ways and means of developing the project, Dean Joseph W. Barker said.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

You simply cannot get away with anything any more. Some time last December I made the remark that most players would be far better off if they never bid grand slams at all. Immediately H. W. Caldwell of Chicago sent me a letter containing two grand slam hands, both of which he himself had bid and played and both of which should unquestionably have been bid for the big slam. Of course you know what my out is—these are the exceptions that prove the real rule.

NORTH (Dealer)
♠—A,K,Q,9,5,3

WEST	EAST
♠—J,6,4	♠—8,7
♥—10,3	♥—8,4,2
♦—10,7,5,2	♦—Q,J,9,8,6,3

SOUTH
♣—A,K,J,6,3

North dealt and bid two spades—the game invitational opening. East passed. South took out with three hearts. West passed and North called three spades. While North had adequate support for South's hearts he also had very long and very strong spades and wished to show them. East passed and now South bid four clubs. West again passed, and this time despairing of his spades, North showed support for South's hearts with a bid of four. East passed. South bid six hearts. West passed. North bid seven hearts and all passed.

The bidding, of course, speaks for itself. On the last round North knows that South must have had the six tops in both hearts and clubs in order to bid both suits. With the long spades in the North hand, with strong tops, South should be provided with plenty of discards. In addition North has the only other suit that has not been mentioned—the diamond suit—stopped with the A.

West opened the ♦ 2, North played the 4, East the J, and South the K. South then led out the ♥ K-J and followed with the ♥ 5, which dummy overtook with the Q. Dummy now led the ♦ A, the ♠ A, and the ♣ K, on which South discarded the ♣ 3 and the ♠ 10-2. To the eighth trick dummy led the ♠ Q, on which South discarded the ♣ 6. All the spades are now good, and in addition two trumps are left in the South hand. Therefore the declarer claimed the remaining tricks, and the claim was, of course, allowed.

The second of Mr. Caldwell's hands is given below as today's play-a-problem. That should be a very broad hint. How would you bid it?

PLAY-A-PROBLEM: SOLITAIRE OR PARTNERS

Play this hand tonight at your bridge game. Keep a record of the bid and play in the spaces provided. Numbers in the bidding squares are for successive rounds. Check your results with tomorrow's answer.

To play "Solitaire": Record the bids you think each hand would make in the bidding squares. After the final declaration has been made start the play, leading from the hand at declarer's left. As you play each card cross it off of the diagram and record it in the proper square, as S. 3, H. K, etc. In the last column indicate the hand which won the round and lead from that hand on the next round.

Tyro Automobile Driver Learns Two Important Lessons

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"From this day on I am going to be a much more patient and understanding mother," said a young parent to me the other day.

"Reforming?" I asked.

"Yes," she answered. "When Bess can't steer the food into her mouth, or the milk pours out of Bob's mouth because he steps on the gas too suddenly, or Bill doesn't let up on the clutch slowly and lams his bike into the fence, I'm going to be much more understanding."

"So!" I said. "I do believe you are learning to drive a car."

"Learning to drive a car and learning a lot of other things," she replied.

"For instance?" I hopefully suggested.

"Well, that when you know how to do a thing well, you don't remember how hard it is for the learner."

"You don't mean to insinuate that your husband was impatient," I said, for he is notoriously so.

"No, I was thinking of my own sins that time," she smiled. "I get so terribly impatient with the children when they can't do things, or when they are clumsy or inept. But I'm a reformed woman from now on. I've been trying to coördinate the clutch and the gears and the gas and the wheel, and keeping my eye on traffic. It's all so simple—when you know how.

"So I can feel for my poor babies now when they are learning to feed themselves or dress themselves or do cut-outs or use the scissors. Things that seem so simple to us that we can hardly realize the muscular control and coördination that they represent are as bad to them as learning to drive a car.

"This driving is an eye opener for me. From now on I am a reformed woman—understanding, patient, quiet, calm, and possessed of all the virtues a parent should have. . . . Well, maybe not quite all. But at least I may manage, when the children are particularly trying, to use the 'choke' on myself when I start with too rich a mixture of words and feelings."

G. B. McKibbin City Y.M.C.A.'s New President

Income $4,221,949; Drop of $766,000.

George B. McKibbin, member of the law firm of Essington & McKibbin, yesterday afternoon was elected president of the Young Men's Christian association of Chicago at its seventy-fourth annual meeting. Mr. McKibbin succeeds William Francis, who resigned after holding the office for seven years.

The report of W. J. Parker, general secretary, showed that the number of paid members on Dec. 31, last, was 27,107, a decline of 11 per cent from the previous year. Men who have previously been members, but who now are unable to pay their dues because of unemployment, are allowed to continue to use their privileges, the report stated.

The total income of all departments of the association last year was $4,221,949, a drop of $767,000 from the income in 1930 and of $1,376,000 from the income in 1929, Mr. Parker reported. Reduction of expenses did not keep step with reduction of income. Therefore, an operating deficit of $99,982 has acrued, compared with a deficit of $29,095 for the previous year.

Five bequests were received during the year, including $20,000 from Frank K. Hoover, for the Hyde Park department; $1,000 from Mrs. Mary E. Wolfe for the west side department; $30,000 through Miss Jessie Templeton from the residuary estate of Thomas Templeton, who previously left the association $50,000; $2,000 from John N. Dole for the west side department, and $500 from Mrs. Emily Starkey, widow of Dr. Horace M. Starkey, former recording secretary of the board of managers.

Girl Resents It When Fiance Admires Any Pretty Passerby

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Perhaps the insecurity of the marriage state as it is broadcast today in easy divorce tidings has something to do with it. Anyway, I am finding that a surprising number of women resent deeply husband or sweetheart looking upon another female face or form with admiration. I don't mean cases where another woman actually looms in the lives of the two involved. It's the man's taste for beauty [in some other woman] that is resented.

I wonder if behind this the prompt and early pairing off of young couples has not something to do with it, imparting as it does to the girl that regrettable ownership phase of young couple relationship. The girl, later the woman, gets to thinking the man's eyes, too, belong to her. They can wander only at her dictation.

Anyway, it is a ridiculous piece of ownership, or jealousy, and does not meet the sympathy of this adviser.

"Mildred's" is the latest contribution. She is going to marry her wayward eyed Bill soon. "What bothers me," she confides, "is the fact that a pretty face and a good figure never escape him. And he talks about it to me, never thinking of my feelings. He retorts that he can't go along blindfolded.

"Should I give him some of his own medicine? Not let a good looking man escape without comment? His actions make me feel he is not satisfied with me," etc., etc.

That statement of yours, "Mildred," about it making you feel that "Bill" is dissatisfied with you is the keynote to your trouble. Jealous people are all like that. They are unsure of themselves and they take it out on some one else. It's an admission of defeat, really. You are stirred by some one whose appearance you envy. That's the way the analysts would dope it out. Thinking that over seriously is really the best medicine we can offer, at the moment. That, and looking with Bill and admiring with him the face and form of the passing beauty.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Sidelight on Character.

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl said she loves me, but doesn't want to be kissed. Does she care? LONELY."

Perhaps she cares so much that she doesn't want to appear common in your eyes.

Explanation Might Help.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend and I quarreled because I walked with one of his boy friends. Should I try to fix things up? MARILYN."

Tell him you were thoughtless and that you're sorry.

He's Not Interested.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 and love a boy of 17. He never answers my letters. MARY."

Immaculate Personal Hygiene Is Essential to Feminine Charm

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The girl signs herself "One of Those Girls Who Is Not Asked Out a Second Time." So you know what her ailment is. But why should any girl have to affix that signature to a letter, these days, with all the aids known to avoid the fault that disbars her from pleasant company?

Water is about the cheapest thing we have! Soap reasonable, and the market rife with excellent deodorants, astringent lotions, and powders to neutralize offensive scents.

It must be admitted, though, that in some cases soap and water and astringents, deodorants, and powders are of little avail until something else has been tended. There are conditions peculiar to the nervous system that provoke and exaggerate unpleasant body odors. In such a case only a medical adviser can give intelligent direction.

A cause that needs only layman intelligence to correct is that of faulty elimination. And I was told not long ago by a medical man that to a very great extent the sale of these deodorants and astringents above referred to depends for its great bulk on the great American evil, constipation.

People are prone to put their entire remedying hope into local correctives and pay little heed to the internal cause, which just keeps on manufacturing more and more discomfort. So when we talk of cleanliness as the corrective it must be interpreted as inside and outside cleanliness, not either one or the other.

Salt water baths are highly recommended for the unstable nerved who suffer the affliction. Just rub common salt or sea salt on the wet body after the shower, or add salt to the tub of water.

One point you want to register about local correctives is not to be tempted to overdo with astringent applications. I have just heard of a queer bit of trouble resulting from two a day applications of an astringent which a girl's skin could not stand up under. Follow the directions on the product carefully.

Also don't forget that diets can regulate internal conditions. This is an improvement commonly reported after a sane and healthy reduction.

Mother Needs Clothing.

"My husband has not worked for nine months and it is just about two months since I came home from the hospital with my baby. Instead of things getting better for us they have gone from bad to worse. I am hoping you can get me some clothing for it is so cold and I have nothing to wear. I need a coat and dresses, size 16 or 18, and a pair of shoes, size 6½.

"Mrs. K. Z."

She'll want to spend a lot of time out of doors with the new baby if its to be a healthy, growing child, but she'll not be able to do it unless she's properly clothed. Can you donate anything in the way of warm garments for Mrs. K. Z.?

Offer of Men's Clothing.

"I have a full dress suit and an afternoon frock coat and trousers, size 40, stout, which I should like to give to some clergyman, lecturer, or other person who could use them. G. D."

Here's a generous offer which should attract those of you who have need of such costumes and no means to secure them. Write me, if 40 is your size; please do not telephone.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Opposition to the Byrns-Williamson bills proposing consolidation of the war and navy departments into a single department of national defense developed today as the house expenditures committee opened hearings on the measures.

The most severe denouncement of the proposal to merge the army, navy, and air forces into one unit was brought to the attention of the committee in letters from Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley and Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams. Both cabinet officers, who are expected to appear in person before the committee later, asserted the consolidation would be harmful to national defense, inefficient, and wasteful.

Byrns and Schafer Clash.

During the morning's hearing Chairman Joseph W. Byrns [Dem., Tenn.] of the house appropriations committee clashed repeatedly with Representative John C. Schafer [Dem., Wis.], the latter injecting the prohibition issue into the discussion.

On one occasion Byrns roused Schafer's ire with caustic denouncement of the navy department for failing to order an aircraft carrier in the Caribbean to aid the search for an opium smuggling vessel last fall.

"Then you contend that the army and navy should perform police duties," said Representative Schafer. "If you are consistent, then as chairman of the appropriations committee you will propose consolidation of the army, navy, prohibition and narcotics enforcement."

Denounces "Jealousies."

Representative Byrns took up the whole morning pleading for the consolidation program, which has the support of Speaker John Garner [Dem., Tex.] and other Democratic leaders. Mr. Byrns ridiculed the jealousies which now cause discord between the army and navy, said that millions could be saved by merging the national defense purchasing units and eliminating duplication of effort.

Secretary Adams lashed the Byrns-Williamson bills in his communication to the committee. He denied that merging the two services would reduce the total administrative organization, eliminate any stations or establishments, or promote savings. As a matter of actual fact, he said, the effect of the bill would add to bureaucracy in Washington by adding to the personnel needed to operate the national defense establishment.

VINSON BILL QUIZ ENDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The house naval committee completed hearings on warship authorization today and may vote on the Vinson 616 million dollar bill Monday. The committee will probably recommend the measure favorably.

Late today Chairman Carl Vinson [Dem., Ga.] was awaiting word whether President Hoover considered the bill in conflict with his financial program. If the White House is willing to accept a one, two, or three year building program, it is possible the committee will modify the original Vinson proposal, which provides a ten year construction program.

Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.] will fight to force adoption by the committee of a bill calling for just one year of the Vinson program. There seems little likelihood the President will approve any extensive program.

At the hearing today Rear Admiral Frank B. Upham, chief of navigation, warned that if the navy is permitted to continue to deteriorate the time will come when the fleet will be unable to prevent an invasion that might "destroy our national life." He said a fleet not equipped and ready for battle when an emergency develops "is of relative little value."

In 1914, he reminded, "the combined fleets of Great Britain and Germany were so strong in comparison with ours that they could readily have defeated our navy on the sea or blockaded it in port." "Our policy," he continued, "is to maintain a fleet ready for action and a small army to be built rapidly in event of an emergency."

DR. W. A. EVANS SEES ILLINOIS COWS SOON FREE OF TUBERCULOSIS

Vandalia, Ill., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The prospect of tuberculosis free dairy herds in Illinois by July 1, 1933, was described to the 58th annual state dairymen's convention here last night by Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Since 1918, he said, 9,000,000 cows have been tested by the state at a cost of $9,000,000. Eighty-four counties have been accredited as having tuberculin free dairy herds.

Dr. Evans described the growth of the movement for pure milk in Chicago. A quarter of a century ago one newspaper in Chicago carried 33,500 words in news stories and 2,500 words of editorial matter, in condemnation of milk and milk products, during a scarlet fever epidemic.

In the last 16 years, he said, not one case of contagious disease caused by impure milk, has been reported.

The milk industry, he said, has held up better economically than any other farm product.

MACDONALD, SICK OF QUARRELS, TO SHAKE UP CABINET

Several Face Ouster in Tariff Row.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 21.—"The prime minister is sick to death of the team he has to drive and there will be a reconstruction of the government before the new parliament is many weeks old. There will not be a general election. He will just change gears quietly."

This pronouncement was made today by one of the best informed of foreign observers on British politics. It agrees with other information received by this correspondent.

The ministry of all talents and all parties organized by Prime Minister MacDonald after the recent general election is not working well because the members cannot agree on anything.

Disagree on Tariff.

At present the chief point of disagreement is the tariff question. MacDonald finds himself torn between two factions, one demanding the highest possible protective tariff and the other loyal to the old doctrine of free trade.

Between them nothing has been done. The cabinet is holding daily meetings trying to reach an agreement, but so far has failed. It is believed that soon after parliament meets on Feb. 2 MacDonald will be forced to reconstruct his cabinet into one which can agree. The men slated to go are Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, secretary for colonies and high protectionist, and Sir Donald Maclean, minister of education; Sir Herbert Samuel, home secretary, and Viscount Snowden, lord privy seal, free traders. The leaders of the new cabinet will be MacDonald, J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions; Sir John Simon, foreign secretary; Walter Runciman, board of trade president, and Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council.

Group Is Conservative.

The latter group is agreed on the necessity of moderate scientific protection of British industries, but is equally opposed to prohibitive tariffs or the opening of the British market to unrestricted foreign competition.

If this plan is carried out MacDonald will find himself at the head of a moderate party commanding an adequate majority in parliament and opposed by groups of Socialists, Liberal free traders, and Conservative high protectionists, who have nothing in common except a hatred of the government.

Dry Agents Arrest Five in Raid on Capone Brewery

Five men seized early yesterday by prohibition agents in a raid on a large Capone brewery at 2024 South State street were held in bonds of $5,000 each by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker pending a hearing on Jan. 28 on charges of violation of the prohibition law. The men are Tony Marino, James Zanders, Robert Russell, John Johnson and Joseph Bue. Eliot Ness, assistant chief of the special prohibition agents, led the raid. A quantity of beer and equipment valued at $75,000 were confiscated.

SHAKEUP OF HIGH IMMIGRATION OFFICERS BEGINS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Shirley D. Smith, director of immigration in the Chicago district, has been transferred to Salt Lake City, it was learned today, in one of a number of changes affecting high officers of the immigration bureau recently ordered by Secretary of Labor William N. Doak.

While the complete list of transfers was not made available, it was said at the department that the reorganization was being undertaken in an effort to tighten up the immigration service's border patrols.

Secretary Doak described the changes as being "routine" for the most part, but the importance of the positions involved have created a belief that the transfers are a result of recent disclosures of extensive alien smuggling operations in this country.

Mr. Smith is to be succeeded at Chicago by C. E. Palmer, director of immigration at Spokane, Wash. Mr. Palmer, it was said at the department, will have jurisdiction over a large section of the Canadian border.

WOMAN HELD AS SLAYER.

Miss Mabel Walker, 35 years old, colored, 3306 Indiana avenue, was ordered held to the grand jury on a charge of murder by a coroner's jury yesterday in connection with the death of Willis Booker, 42, whom she shot during a quarrel.

WIDOW FOUND DEAD IN HOME; FALL BLAMED

Suspicions of neighbors sent Lieut. Harry Wilson and a squad of Oak Park police to the house at 1164 South Scoville avenue, Oak Park, late yesterday. After breaking a window and entering the basement, they found the body of Mrs. Louise Sophie Stone, 60 years old, a widow, at the bottom of the stairway.

She had been dead a week. Apparently she had fallen down the stairs. Lieut. Wilson said that all windows and doors in the place were locked, precluding the possibility that some one had killed her. A murderer could not have locked the places from the inside on escaping, he said.

Mrs. Stone moved into the house Dec. 20 after purchasing it for $4,000. According to Mrs. Charlotte Rackow, 1101 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, agent for the T. A. Holm Real Estate company, 906 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, Mrs. Stone paid cash for the property. The money was in bills of the old size. Police are searching for relatives of the woman, and meantime guarding the house against possible theft.

FLIERS BEAT SHAMROCKS, 4-2; TWO FIST FIGHTS

CHARM OPENS AT 1-2, PAYS 9-1 AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, La., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—One of the biggest betting coups in the history of racing, far exceeding that recently engineered by Baron Long at Agua Caliente, was put over in the first race at Jefferson Park this afternoon when Charm, a 1-2 favorite, stepped down in front of his field and rewarded his backers with $19.60 in the $2 mutuels.

Charm is raced in the name of C. S. Stubbs, who also trains the horses. Racing patrons here recall the instance a few years back when Ralph Capone, brother of Al Capone, and his associates put over a similar coup on Charm when the latter won a race at the Fair Grounds and paid off at almost 60 to 1.

Report Capone Owner.

At that time Charm was registered from the Arsonia stable, owned by Capone and trained by Stubbs, who now is the reported owner and trainer, although race men say Charm is owned by Capone and that today's coup was engineered from Chicago.

Bookmakers in New Orleans and throughout the country are reputed to have lost thousands of dollars through one of the biggest build-ups ever known to the American turf. The "builders," who have been in operation at Jefferson Park since the opening of the meeting, won thousands on the race.

Charm was listed at 1 to 2 at the opening of the betting, and remained at that figure until the horses had reached the post, at which time the gamblers went into action. At the barrier the price on the approximate odds board showed Charm a 4 to 5 chance, and as the field was sent on its way the price was boosted to 7 to 2.

The crowd howled when $19.60 was posted as the payoff on a $2 mutuel ticket. Jockey J. Neel rode the winner. One big New Orleans bookmaker refused to pay off except at 4 to 5.

In building the price on Charm from 1 to 2 to almost 9 to 1, the gamblers wagered approximately $10,000 on other horses in the mutuels at the last possible moment.

CHICAGO BOOKS LOSE

A survey among Chicago bookmakers last night revealed that local commissioners also suffered as the result of the betting coup engineered yesterday at Jefferson Park on the horse Charm, which opened at 1 to 2, and left the barrier at odds of 7 to 2, only to pay almost 9 to 1 in the mutuels. It was reported that approximately $2,500 was wagered with Chicago bookmakers on the horse, and while most of them were reluctant to pay off at track odds, it is understood that the full amount will be returned to bettors, as in the recent case of Linden Tree at the Agua Caliente track.

The final odds on Charm, as flashed to Chicago books, were 7 to 2. Several of them, however, refused to pay more than 3 to 1.

How They Build Up.

The process of building up the odds on a short priced horse was revealed in the Linden Tree case, engineered by Baron Long, one of the owners of the Agua Caliente track. Linden Tree was at less than even money, but Long padded the mutuels by betting $3,500 on other horses in the race at the last minute, thus raising the price on Linden Tree to almost 10 to 1, and at the same time making it impossible for bookmakers who had accepted bets on Linden Tree to wire "come back money" to their own commissioners at the track.

The same method was followed at New Orleans yesterday, gamblers betting almost $10,000 in the mutuels on Charm's rivals in the race, and so raising the price on the ultimate winner.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

JOE CITIZEN AGAIN.

DEAR WAKE: I was somewhat surprised, although gratified, by the responses from Wake readers to my previous letter about the fatheads at Washington and Springfield who are sitting up nights thinking of ways to impose new taxes without reducing governmental expenses.

Evidently we Wakers are thinking fellows, which I always have maintained about sports followers. Let followers of sport run this country and there would be more cents and less nonsense. Anyway, others are coming to our views and, even among politicians, there is plenty talk of economy. But, Harve, it's talk. When these bohunks actually reduce their own salaries and perquisites instead of merely introducing bills to do so, our Legion of Vote Against Every Office Holder will give them consideration.

Look at that agricultural bill. There were a few reductions in appropriations for investigating insects which never existed seriously anyway, but increased costs for administration of the bureaus. Jimminy crickets, boll weevil, and all the other pests! If the appropriation had been for exterminating the insects in political life we might have some hope.

Nevertheless, I think we're getting somewhere and we Wakers enlisted are going to stand together. Incidentally, tell your boss those editorials of his are wows! You'll hear more from me as events develop since you have shown willingness to publish my "squawks," as you term them.

Joe Citizen.

Joe Citizen's Legion.

HTW: Many thanks for publishing Joe Citizen's letter. Please sign me as a charter member of the Vote Against Every Office Holder club for 1932. Hook L. Sinker.

HTW: I am heartily in accord with Joe Citizen's views. Enroll me. Don't sign my name as I, too, have some —— in the cellar, not the Mabel variety sponsored by government loans (our money), but stuff any prohib snooper would be glad to seize for his own use. G. S.

Wake: Joe Citizen comes near to saying it all. The slogan in Illinois rural sections is "Vote 'em out," especially if they're dry. There may be nothing wrong, but we'll try to save the few remaining homes and farms from being sold for taxes, which seems inevitable under present conditions. No Name Please.

Sir: I, Joe Citizen II., agree with Joe Citizen I. and wish it were possible for every American voter to read his article. It undoubtedly would start a universal movement against these taxations that pop up over night, political graft, and high government cost.

Joe Citizen perhaps views conditions in Illinois principally. I wish he could be in Indiana. Every time certain parties in Indianapolis want a new car or yacht or a trip of "investigation" at public expense, along comes some new fangled tax.

Then that personal property tax they're trying to foist on you. We have it. It has NOT reduced realty taxes. You may have your furniture, washer, sweeper, or whatnot paid for years ago, but you still pay taxes on them in addition to the real estate tax. The politicians are just kidding you suckers. There is no personal tax exemption here. Vote 'em all out unless they reform. Joe Citizen II.

Dear Harve: Just count 18 victories each from the good right arms of Root, Bush, Grimes, Smith, and Malone. That makes 90, and with the five the Cubs already have because they won't have to oppose Burleigh Grimes makes 95. Then I will stake that 95 as a starter against the bids of the St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants, or what have you. Jack G.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Young Jake Schaefer, for many years the balk-line king of the world, discovered last night that a trip to the world's three-cushion billiard championship leads over a long, rough road.

Young Jake, despite his wizardry and the magic touch of leather cue tip against ivory, was beaten by Len Kenney of Chicago, one of the extreme outsiders in the title play, 50 to 34, in 43 innings.

The downfall of the mighty Schaefer in this new game over which he aspires to rule and become sort of a czar at billiards, was no accident. Kenney beat him at every turn, showed him tricks at the angle game that bewildered him, and gradually pulled out into a lead that all but humiliated the king of the balk-lines.

Four Tie for Lead.

When Kenney clicked off the billiard in the 43d inning that sent Schaefer spinning into defeat, four players were left deadlocked for the lead. Each is undefeated and each has two triumphs to his credit. The leaders are Art Thurnblad and Augie Kleckhefer of Chicago, Johnny Layton of Sedalia, Mo.; and Otto Reiselt, the temperamental old mathematician of Philadelphia. Frank Scoville of Buffalo, Allen Hall of Chicago, and Schaefer, each beaten once, are within striking distance of the leaders.

Schaefer was in front only a few times in his battle with Kenney. He commanded the situation, 9 to 7, in the 10th inning, and in the first half of the eleventh increased his advantage, 11 to 8. But Kenney came right back in his half for three points. The scoreboard showed 11 everywhere. Each player had 11 points and it was the 11th inning.

Then Kenney Starts Shooting.

Kenney took a 14 to 11 lead in the 12th inning and then Schaefer tied the score at 14 all in the 16th. The turning point came in the 25th inning. When Kenney started shooting he held a lead of 26 to 22. He scored nine points in the next four innings while Schaefer failed to count. It gave Kenney a margin of 35 to 22. Schaefer made his final challenge in

Bill Cissell Joins Ranks of Contented Sox

The flock of contented White Sox athletes was enlarged yesterday by the enrollment of Chalmer Bill Cissell, who a few years ago cost the late Charles A. Comiskey a total of $75,000 in cash, not to mention a few ball players.

Receipt of Cissell's contract, properly autographed, was announced by Vice President Harry Grabiner. The document came from Texas where the sprightly shortstop and second baseman has been "ranching" with Pat Caraway, the Sox southpaw.

Cissell was the sixth performer to express accord with President Lou Comiskey's contract figures. He was preceeded into the fold by Thomas, Lyons, Blue, Tate, and Jones.

Billy Evans, the general manager of the Cleveland Indians who was here to look after the club's Toledo farms interest during the American association schedule meeting on Wednesday, was still about town yesterday. The delay in his departure was accepted as an indication that he might have in mind the trading of Eddie Morgan, first baseman and outfielder, to the Sox for a pitcher. No definite information was revealed, but it is known that the Sox officials are open to proposals whereby they could acquire a hitter, and might not object to giving Thomas or Hadley in return.

Ft. Wayne Pro Five Defeats Bruins, 19-17

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Fort Wayne's professional basketball quintet whipped the Chicago Bruins, 19 to 17, last night at the Fronton to win the season series, two games to one. The Hoosiers lost on the same court three weeks ago, but previously had won at Fort Wayne.

What had been a whirlwind offensive contest in the first half last night developed into a defensive battle in the second period with Fort Wayne winning principally by its ability to keep possession of the ball.

Saunders Leads Attack.

Rus Saunders led the Hoosiers with four goals from the field, equally divided between the periods. Red Barak was Chicago's best point getter, with three goals, two of them tap-ins on follow shots.

Scoring action was crowded in the first twenty minutes. Chicago, after a slow start, led, 14 to 13, at the intermission. The Bruins were behind, 6 to 0, when the Hoosiers' first three shots by Shimek, Husta, and Saunders sailed through the hoop. The Bruins then pulled up to trail, 9 to 5, and Barak led the offense which raced to the front, 13 to 9. Chadwick and Saunders completed Fort Wayne's scoring for the half, while Miller added a point for the Bruins on Chadwick's foul.

Resuming play the Hoosiers led, 17 to 15, after ten minutes, only to have Miller tie the count on a short throw. Both teams played cautiously, with Saunders scoring from the corner with less than five minutes of the game remaining.

Fort Wayne Stalls.

Fort Wayne then chose to stall. No attempts were made to score and in the five minutes the Bruins had only four opportunities. All were from far out and the best of the chances, Charlie Murphy's, dropped off the edge of the goal.

The Cuyler-Lake View quintet won its fiftieth consecutive game in the preliminary last night when it defeated the Edgewater Presbyterians, 41 to 27. Bruins' lineup:

HAWKS DEFEAT AMERICANS, 1-0; COUTURE SCORES

Chicagoans' Golf Shots Thwart New York.

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Chicago Blackhawks presented a defense that was a trifle better than that of the New York Americans tonight and triumphed, 1 to 0, in a rough but generally dull National league hockey game.

The Americans forced the play throughout and made almost twice as many shots as the Hawks, but the Chicago defenders gave them very few openings. Chuck Gardiner, Hawk goalie, made 29 stops to 16 for Roy Worters. Few of Worters' saves were hard ones.

Hawks' Score Unique.

The only goal of the game came halfway through the second period on an odd play. Vic Ripley seemingly earned the counter, but the puck, after hitting a goal post, rolled out of the net and Lola Couture slapped it back in.

There was plenty of rough work in the play but little else to make it interesting. A total of 14 penalties were called, nine of them on the Hawks.

Bert McInenly, America's scoring star, was kept out because of an attack of tonsilitis and Jack Keating was called in from the New Haven, an American farm, to take his place.

Action began with a defensive scrap in which Convey got the only good shot. He stick-handled through the Hawks' defense and lifted a short one to Gardiner's chest. A tripping penalty to Abel gave the Americans an advantage but Chicago's golf shots turned back the four man attack.

Play Is Dull.

Lowrey got through New York's defense and passed to Thompson, but Worters easily stopped the quick shot. Lamb missed a pass out with a good opening on the return. It was a dull period.

After several minutes of fairly open play in the second period, the defenses tightened up again.

There was burst of speed as the American's third line came on, but the youngsters could not get through and a return dash by Ripley ended in a Chicago score. Vic hit the goal post with his shot as Worters missed it, but the puck bounced out in front of the net. Couture swung in from the left and batted it into the open goal.

Shea Missed One.

Shea narrowly missed another goal a moment later. He passed to Couture, and Worters made a great stop. In the scramble, the puck came back to Shea and he missed fire by a fraction of an inch.

New York got off to a quick start in the third period when Himes and McVeigh clicked on a neat pass, but McVeigh's shot was wide. On the next raid Graham was banished for charging McVeigh, but Chicago's desperate defense held with the aid of some brilliant work by Gardiner. There was a lot of rough playing in the next few minutes and the American attack lapsed badly.

The Hawks had to slam the puck down the rink about every third play in the closing minutes.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Balmy weather apparently makes for balmy hockey. The game at the Chicago Stadium last night in which the St. Louis Fliers whipped the Shamrocks, 4 to 2, was perhaps the balmiest hockey contest ever played in any clime.

There was a fist fight between Babe Dye, manager of the Shamrocks, and Dick Carroll, manager of the Fliers.

There was a fist fight between Tip O'Neill and Billy Hill, which was quelled by a police lieutenant and four brave policemen who, despite flat feet, barged fearlessly out on the ice and "done their duty as they seen it."

Two of the Fliers' goals were wild affairs that were made through the aid of Paddy Byrne's awkward handling of his pads.

Goalie Knocked Out.

The first Shamrock goal was made while Herb Rheaume, the Flier goalie, was lying unconscious on the ice, with Curley Headley bent over him, valiantly seeking to resuscitate him. There was a ten minute gap in the second period, which was spent in permitting Rheaume to chase the twittering birdies from his confused brain.

While Rheaume was getting his head cleared it was discovered that the heads of some of the timing officials were far from clear. Some stop watches were running and some weren't. Pandemonium was everywhere.

Although there was little hockey played, it was in all a great show and will go in the records as the ninth victory hung up by the Fliers in their last eleven games, a victory stretch that has lifted the visitors in a month from last place to a second place tie with the fading Shamrocks. Incidentally, it was the sixth licking the Shamrocks have taken in their last seven starts.

The score which enabled the visitors to emerge from the first period with a 1 to 0 lead not only was a precipitate affair but was attended by more than a reasonable amount of good fortune, in so far as the St. Louisians were concerned. A shot which would have missed the cage eve.. had it been unguarded was kicked in by Goalie Byrne.

Puck Caroms In.

The game scarcely had got under way when Williams took the puck in mid-ice and passed to McPherson as he and Shrimp glided over the blue line. McPherson took to the left boards and let one loose from a flat angle. Apparently, reacting from instinct alone, Byrne stuck out his right leg for a cursory wave at the puck as it flew by. But he kicked too high. The puck hit the under side of his shin pad and caromed into the cage. The time was 1:33.

It was in the second period that all the aforementioned excitement transpired. Things were going along with calm normalcy when MacKenzie and Loucks were tossed into the penalty box. A few seconds later Creasy was bounced, making it five Shamrocks against four Fliers. Then, before a minute had elapsed, Williams, star defense man of the visitors, also was waved to the penalty bench.

Under the best known rules in hockey the playing strength cannot be reduced under four. The player penalized while two of his mates are in the box must join them, but a substitute takes his place until he starts actually serving his deferred penalty after one of his mates is released from the lockup.

Carroll Punches Dye.

Well, Manager Carroll, who used to be a prize fighter, apparently hadn't heard of the rule and when Manager Dye sought to explain it to him, Carroll busted Dye in the mouth and spirited fisticuffs ensued until such time as the players could pull their bosses apart.

Calm and dignity scarcely had been restored when the entire Shamrock cast moved in on the Fliers, who still were two men short. During a melée which ensued, Goalie Rheaume was knocked cold, and while he was flat on his back, with Headley trying to resuscitate him, the Shamrocks took three shots at the open cage, Capt. Brydson finally getting one in on a pass from Buswell.

THESE FISH WANT TO MEET LONDOS AND SCHMELING

Muskies Wrestle, Fight Every Day in Aquarium.

BY BOB BECKER.

If any fisherman thinks that there has been overemphasis of the statement that the muskellunge has a nasty disposition and is a "natural" as a fighter he has only to take a trip to the Shedd aquarium in Grant park and inspect the two good sized specimens on exhibition. They have staged so many scraps that they are all chewed up and therefore present anything but a pleasing exhibition appearance.

Recently we spent nearly a day getting acquainted with many of the fish that are swimming around behind glass in the Shedd aquarium. Director W. H. Chute took us behind the scenes to show us how his staff handled both salt and fresh water specimens. When we came to the muskies, the most obvious feature of these fish was their battle-scarred condition.

One of the muskies, in fact, looked as if some one had thrown him on the concrete and stepped on him with hobnailed boots. This particular specimen had an ugly scar on his side. Mr. Chute explained that this wound was due to a combination biting and wrestling match which the muskies had put on some time ago. He added that at times they have found this pair of fish engaged in such a scrap that one of the curators actually had to pry loose the jaws of the attacker with a stout club, so firmly did the aggressive specimen have its teeth imbedded in the side of the other.

According to the staff of the aquarium the muskies are not chewing each other because of hunger. On the contrary, the fish are given all the food they should have. The number of food fish provided seems to have little to do with their pugnacious dispositions. When these two scrappers decide to fight they go to it and then the scales fly.

SOMEBODY WILL BE KNOCKED OUT, SAYS MR. MALLOY

Can't Decide if It'll Be Calmes or Pantaleo.

Mique Malloy believes the Baxter Calmes-Paul Pantaleo ten round bout, which headlines his boxing show at White City Monday night, will end in a knockout. However, he is not predicting who will be the victim.

Pantaleo's followers think the former Tilden High school athlete will be too strong and too tough for Calmes. He will weigh 200 pounds, approximately 15 pounds more than Calmes. That poundage is more than Pantaleo carried against Tuffy Griffith at the same arena several months ago. He defeated Bob McCormick at St. Paul since the Griffith bout.

Calmes' supporters say Baxter will be better and punch harder as a heavyweight than as a light heavyweight in the 175 pound championship tournament. He contends that weight making has weakened him and that he is a better fighter at around 180 pounds. Calmes has won his three bouts in the series but as a heavyweight he has defeated Con O'Kelly, Big Chief Vegas and Pete Wistort.

Malloy has completed his supporting card of five bouts, one six round match and four at four rounds. These contests bring together the following: Costas Vassis vs. Bobby Vernon, Biff Bennett vs. Tex Moore, Les Finucane vs. Jud Judkins, Johnny Panek vs. Eddie Litz and Rudy Vallee vs. Kid Ketchell.

Jackie Davis, 142 pounds, Springfield, Ill., and Harry Dublinsky, Chicago, will fight in the eight round windup of Pep Kerwin's boxing show tonight at the Rainbo Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue. Davis, a Golden Gloves star three years ago, has scored 27 professional victories. Dublinsky has fought Kid Kaplan, Tommy Grogan, Roger Bernard, and Bruce Flowers, among others.

The semi-final bout will bring together Babe Colima of Mexico and Jackie Stewart, Louisville, Ky., featherweights at eight rounds. Colima claims a decision over Babe Arizmendi, the featherweight who recently defeated Fidel LaBarba. Sammy Levine, Chicago 124 pound boxer, faces Georgie Nate of South Bend, Ind., in a six round event. Two other six round contests are on the card.

Nate Lewis, Chicago Stadium matchmaker, last night wired an offer to Jimmy McLarnin to meet the winner of the welterweight title battle between Lou Brouillard, the champion, and Jackie Fields at the Stadium next Thursday night. If McLarnin accepts the offer the match will be made for late in February.

Anthony Marcy, Catholic Youth organization featherweight champion, fights Ted Hafey in the feature bout of the amateur card tonight at Merry Garden arena, Sheffield and Belmont avenues. Andy McCann, south side suburban heavyweight, meets Nelson Berard in the semi-windup. Six other contests round out the card.

Frantz Nekolny, European welterweight champion, will be a guest at the amateur show this evening at the Northwest Lions Athletic club, 4300 West North avenue. Jabber Young, who will direct the program, will ask Nekolny to referee the main event, between George Haberski, Catholic Youth organization bantamweight titleholder, and Bud Ginter, Central A. A. U. champion.

Joey Kleko and Paul Steger will head an amateur show at the Medinah Country club Saturday night. In a rematch Steger battles Richard Marguia and Kleko will meet Art Calvano. Six other bouts are on the card.

Lewis, Purple Grid Assistant, Gets Coast Job

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Lawrence [Spud] Lewis, assistant back field coach at Northwestern university, was selected tonight at an executive committee meeting of the University of San Francisco student body to be football coach to succeed Jimmy Needles, who resigned several weeks ago. Lewis reached San Francisco this morning with his wife, had several private conferences with the board and was signed tonight.

Ernie Nevers and Fred Swan, the latter assistant coach at Wisconsin, were the last of the applicants to be eliminated. Lewis will remain on the coast, spending several weeks with relatives in San Luis Obispo.

As matters stood up to the time of the meeting this afternoon, Lewis was one of four Stanford graduates arrayed against a like number of former Notre Dame stars in line for the job.

Lined up with Lewis were Fred Swan, Ted Shipkey, and Ernie Nevers. Notre Dame's quartet included Jack Chevigny, Marty Brill, Johnny O'Brien, and Tim Moynahan. The latter's application was received yesterday along with that of Stewart Ferguson, who is coach at North Dakota Wesleyan.

U. S. F.'s final selection was limited to one of these Notre Dame and Stanford men, with Brick Mitchell, former California assistant coach, and Hack Applequist of Sacramento Junior college, coming in for consideration.

NORWEGIAN SKI STARS PRACTICE FOR DUNES MEET

Norway's Olympic ski jumping team worked out yesterday at Cary, and after the performances Olaf Helseth, captain of the squad, pronounced them in excellent condition for the Ogden Dunes Ski club's fifth annual meet Sunday on the steel slide near Gary, Ind.

It was the first time this season the team has practiced as a unit and there was plenty of rivalry among them because only four of the seven riders will be picked to compete in the Olympic games Feb. 4 and 13 at Lake Placid.

The Ruud brothers, Sigmund and Birger, and Kaare Walberg turned in long distances. Their jumping last Sunday in the Norge meet acquainted them with the slide and gave them an advantage over their teammates yesterday.

An idea of what competition the American stars must meet may be gained from the fact that the Norwegian team was chosen from more than 40,000 jumpers. Three meets at Oslo, Norway; Oberhoff, Germany, and St. Moritz, Switzerland, were used to determine the team.

Eight carloads of snow are on the way from Grivitz, Wis., and the meet will be held whether or not snow falls in Chicago.

RYERSON TAKES MEDAL IN MIAMI AMATEUR GOLF

Miami, Fla., Jan. 21.—J. B. Ryerson of Cooperstown, N. Y., hurrying through his qualifying round as darkness settled over the course, yesterday carded 39—34—73 to win medalist honors in the Glenn Curtiss trophy invitation amateur golf tournament here.

His 34 on the last nine was two under par and snatched medalist honors from H. F. Bowbeer of Chicago, who led early qualifiers with a 75.

Winfield Day, Chicago school boy, stood third with 76.

the 29th inning when he scored five. But he was helpless before the attack of Kenney from then until the finish.

In the early night game Reiselt whipped Bud Westhus of St. Louis, 50 to 25, in 40 innings. It was a one sided game. But in the afternoon there came the most thrilling battle of the tournament when Frank Scoville, the calm old sprinkler salesman from Buffalo, finally met his master. He was beaten, 50 to 45, in 54 innings, by the youthful Jay Bozeman of Vallejo, Cal. A cluster of eight which he clicked off in the 53d inning, at the beginning of which he was trailing, 45 to 41, made possible Bozeman's victory.

Then Bozeman missed by the narrowest margin on the shot that would have brought him triumph. Scoville, plainly upset by the unexpected turn, missed in his half of the inning.

Bozeman now was full of confidence. Still, Scoville had left him in a difficult position. There was only one possible way to make the billiard. He had to shoot left handed and make a four cushion shot.

It Is Tough, But He Makes It.

Bozeman poised rather clumsily for his unnatural left handed stroke. He had lost all signs of the nervousness he had shown earlier in the game. He started his cue ball rolling. It followed the beaten trail like an extra fare passenger train wending its way between Chicago and New York. It went from one cushion to another according to schedule. It finally bounced off the fourth cushion, smashed head on into the red ball, and Bozeman had handed Scoville his first beating of the tournament.

When Scoville slipped out of the tie for the tournament lead Augie Kieckhefer of Chicago moved into the seat he left vacant. To do it Kieckhefer gave Tiff Denton, from down in the Ozarks in Missouri, a 50 to 35 trouncing in 43 innings.

labor it was announced the goal had been allowed. The time was given as 9:30, some one's stop watch having been found working.

Things went along then with a semblance of sanity for six or seven minutes, then the Fliers tore loose, their first move being to shear Goalie Byrne of his stick. Sans his implement, Paddy skated hither and thither seeking to capture the puck in his mittens. But it was no use. Jackson passed to Kendall, who scored the Fliers' second goal. Then Byrne recovered his stick. The time of the goal was 17:01 and of the stick recovery 17:02.

The second Shamrock counter and the fourth score of the game, was the first normal hockey goal of the evening. Brydson skated through the Flier defense and slammed one off Rheaume's shins. Buswell then picked up the rebound and tied the score. The time was 4:41.

Stage Another Spat.

The Hill-O'Neill fist fight took place half way through the third period. It might have been a nice go, in the lightweight class, but for the fact that the lieutenant and his detachment of four patrolmen intervened.

The third St. Louis goal reflected no credit on Goalie Byrne. It was a long, straight shot from McPherson, which hit Byrne's padding squarely then wiggled into the cage while Paddy was trying to locate the thing.

Just before the end of the game, Shrimp McPherson made his third, and the Fliers' fourth score of the game.

I'll Hold Out, Too, If Offered $7,500 Says Pep Martin

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Pepper Martin would become a holdout if he were offered a contract like that which the St. Louis Cardinals recently sent to Hack Wilson, calling for $7,500, he said today. Martin is here visiting friends and to confer with Gabby Street.

Martin, who received $4,500 last year, declared:

"I have a wife and daughter to consider and I want to lay away some money for the future. While I appreciate all the Cardinals have done for me, I've got to think of the days when my baseball career is over. But I don't believe it will be necessary to be a holdout. The Cardinals will be fair to me."

WOMEN SKATERS RACE TOMORROW IN OLYMPIC TEST

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—American and European speed skating conditions will prevail Saturday and Sunday during the national championships here, when the six girls for the United States Olympic team will be selected from competition over the foreign and the Yankee type of tracks.

The two tracks will be arranged on Lake Fowler with the regulation American six laps to the mile course placed within the 400 meter circuit, which is the standard Olympic course.

The girls' championship races will be contested over the meter track. The outcome of these events will be the means of selecting the girls' Olympic team. The winner of the championship will be named captain of the team and the next five in point standing will make up the American squad at Lake Placid next month.

Women in 3 Races.

Only three events, 500 meters, 1,000 meters, 1,500 meters, will be contested among the girls. It will mark the first time American women have competed on a track of this kind and although they may not break the time record established by Frau Zofja Nehringowa of Poland, they will establish national standards in the three distances.

However, with stars like Miss Loretta Neitzel of Detroit, the defending woman champion and holder of many records, competing, it is possible that Frau Nehringowa's marks will be lowered.

DE PAUL QUINTET ADDS TWO GAMES FOR TRIP EAST

Before starting eastward last night with the De Paul university basketball team, Coach Jim Kelly announced the addition of two more games to the Blue Demon itinerary. Five contests are now scheduled for the trip.

The two battles added to the program yesterday are Niagara for Jan. 31, and Detroit, Feb. 2. De Paul will make its eastern debut tomorrow night, meeting Catholic university at Washington, D. C.

Considered Year Ago by Local Bankers.

BY AL CHASE.

New York's new plan of handling its real estate mortgage bond situation through one metropolitan independent committee, details of which reached Chicago yesterday and were much discussed in mortgage banking circles, is a year old so far as this city is concerned, according to Louis K. Boysen, president of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, and head of the mortgage bond department of the First-Union Trust Savings bank. He stated that more than twelve months ago a similar plan was taken under advisement by that body and after some consideration it was not deemed necessary or advisable for the handling of the Chicago situation.

Mr Boysen pointed out that New York is just getting started on a long and probably chilly mortgage bond toboggan ride and has so far only passed the $100,000,000 mark in $800,000,000 of bonds outstanding. Chicago has whizzed past the $800,000,000 mark some time ago and hasn't upset at the bottom of the slide, in fact has a firm grip on things and is riding along smoothly and confidently.

Wasn't Needed.

"When Chicago was just about at the stage New York is now, this matter of a central bureau, or general committee, to handle the bond situation was discussed by the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association," said Mr. Boysen, "and we decided it wasn't needed.

"Chicago is meeting the present unpleasant mortgage bond situation in several different ways and most of them are proving successful in solving a difficult problem. There still may be some unscrupulous committees in the field but we don't hear much about them and I don't believe there are many left."

Explains Purpose of Body.

"The committee will represent those holders of bonds who desire its advice and service and will act solely in the interests of such bondholders," said Mr. Roosevelt in a statement made in New York. "The committee will cooperate with all such existing agencies as formulate just and sound plans of reorganization, having full regard to bondholders' interests.

"If needful, the committee will take independent action for the protection of holders of such bonds or of certificates of deposit therefor. It will, so far as in its judgment practicable, cooperate in efforts to prevent future defaults."

REPORT SHOWS CONTRACTION IN CREDIT, MONEY

U.S. Inflation So Far Untried.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Whatever may be the decision of the banking authorities of the United States toward a future mild inflation, thus far no inflation has been tried. So it would appear that all the reported fears of European financiers have been baseless.

Instead of inflation, the weekly statement issued by the federal reserve board last night shows contraction both in credit and money compared with last week. Moreover, the New York Federal Reserve bank again made no change in its 3½ per cent rediscount rate, although it has been predicted that a reduction in its rate, with other reserve banks following, would be the first move toward a governmental policy of easy money and mild inflation.

Decline in Circulation.

The reserve board's report showed a decline of $6,000,000 in all money in circulation, which now totals $5,612,000,000. However, federal reserve notes in circulation expanded $6,374,000 and now total $2,642,140,000. Thus, it would appear that other forms of money to the extent of $12,374,000 were withdrawn. If the government continued to displace currency fully covered by gold with federal reserve currency, which requires only 40 per cent gold coverage, this might be a form of inflation. But the shift thus far is too small to be so interpreted.

Contraction in credit resulted largely from the fact that the reserve banks in the last week reduced their holdings of bankers' acceptances by $25,760,000, while making little change in holdings of government securities and adding only $7,114,000 to their other securities. Moreover, borrowings of the member banks from the reserve banks remained practically stationary, with the total at $818,986,000.

Gold Stock Loss Slight.

The country's stock of monetary gold declined only $7,000,000 in spite of large foreign withdrawals. But most of the exported gold was under "earmark" and was not counted as a part of our gold stock, which now totals $4,450,000,000. On the other hand, gold reserves of the federal reserve banks increased $4,078,000 to a total of $3,005,914,000. Deposits receded $24,185,000. Total reserves expanded $7,750,000 and the ratio of reserves to liabilities strengthened to 67.3 per cent, compared with 66.9 per cent last week.

One particularly interesting item in the reserve system's report, in view of Europe's withdrawal of earmarked gold, is the showing that foreign banks have $31,830,000 on deposit with the reserve banks. It is also indicated that they hold $285,299,000 of bankers' acceptances. What deposits they may have in individual American banks is not known, but they are not estimated to be very large. It is estimated by bankers that our gold stock would not fall below $4,000,000,000 if Europe should withdraw its remaining credits.

Brokers' Loans Decline.

Lack of public interest in the stock market, which has been indicated in dull trading recently, also was reflected in the reserve board's weekly summary on loans to brokers by the New York reserve member banks. Such loans made a further decline of $32,000,000 in the last week and reached a new low level at $531,000,000. Compared with a year ago, such loans have dropped $1,226,000,000.

The statement shows that the New York banks reduced their own loans by $35,000,000, but interior banks sent an additional $4,000,000 into the call money market. Nonbanking lenders withdrew $1,000,000.

GOLD STOCK RISES

New York, Jan. 21. — (AP) — Today's transactions in gold resulted in an increase of $1,169,000 in the country's monetary stock, according to the New York Federal Reserve bank statement. This resulted from imports of $766,600 from India, $103,000 from the Straits Settlements, and a decrease of $300,000 in gold under earmark for foreign account. There were no exports.

Foreign exchanges were firm to strong, but the market was relatively quiet. Sterling cables closed nearly a cent higher at $3.46⅛ and the French franc was up ¼ of a point. German marks firmed moderately, coincident with reports that terms had been reached for a new standstill agreement.

Hear of Repayment.

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—It was reported in banking circles today that the Bank of England had repaid around $60,000,000 of the $75,000,000 credit granted by the federal reserve about five months ago. Officials of the New York Federal Reserve bank would not comment on the report, nor would they affirm or deny a report that the dollar balances of the Bank of England were increasing at a rate that promise the complete retirement of the credit upon maturity at the end of this month.

California Again Fails to Sell Veterans' Bonds

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 21.—The state of California today received no bids on its offering of $3,250,000 veterans' welfare bonds which were withdrawn from sale on Monday owing to lack of suitable tenders. A price of par is required for the sale of the bonds, which have a coupon of 4½ per cent.

Today's offering represents the unsold portion of an issue of $6,000,000 of which 2,750,000 was awarded on Dec. 17 to a California banking group at a price of par for the bonds at 4½s. Previous unsuccessful attempts to market the $6,000,000 issue had been made on Oct. 1, 1931, and on Oct. 16.

French Gold Fever Rises; Cite Hoarding

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Europe's gold fever is steadily rising, the weekly statement of the Bank of France shows.

Already the fabulous hoard of yellow metal in the solid rock vaults of the French official bank has increased by some $23,000,000 in the last six days. It is now just a shade under 70,000,000,000 gold francs [about $2,800,000,000] and $125,000,000 of earmarked gold on the way from New York should bring the total almost to $3,000,000,000.

An important light on the French bank's action in withdrawing its gold from America is shed by the report. Instead of appearing as an isolated act of hostility or distrust toward American currency, the bank's decision is revealed as being part of a sweeping program of consolidation and liquidation.

Continue Policy.

It is a continuation of the policy of drastic deflation commenced last summer but interrupted first by the collapse of the pound and later by the weakness of the dollar.

Directors of the bank have now come to the conclusion that these two currencies are strong enough to stand a financial buffeting. It is evidently their intention to unload the famous "mattress" of foreign currencies which was accumulated as supplementary reserves at the time of the stabilization of the franc.

More than $25,000,000 worth of foreign currencies was sold last week, according to the report. Most of this was in pounds, but if the bank has not started to sell dollar reserves yet, it is a pretty sure bet that it will start soon, although efforts will be to unload gradually in order to prevent further weakening of gold exchange.

The probability that the Bank of France will withdraw in entirety its $450,000,000 of holdings remaining in America is generally conceded.

Note Circulation Drops.

From a psychological standpoint one of the most interesting features of the bank's report is a drop of nearly a billion francs [about $40,000,000] in note circulation. This is taken to indicate that somewhere near $40,000,000 worth of paper was turned in for gold which is to be hoarded.

The Bank of France sells only bar gold in amounts over $1,000, hence there is a lively demand for American $20 and other gold pieces which is responsible for a continuance of the gold drain from America even when the exchange rate is relatively high.

The hoarding phobia is now so widespread that it is an established fact that many small capitalists are converting all their paper into gold at the Bank of France and storing the bars in safe deposit boxes.

SILENT BUILDING OF SKYSCRAPERS IS PREDICTED

Skyscrapers of the future will rear their steel skeletons in the soothing silence of electric welding instead of in the present shrill nerve-wrecking staccatto of the riveting hammer. This prediction was made by J. G. Ritter, welding and foundry engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, in a discussion on "The Use of Steel Castings in Welded Steel Structures" at the annual meeting of the Steel Founders' Society of America at the Stevens hotel yesterday.

Spectacular in the construction of buildings, electric welding is of much greater importance in the manufacture of machinery, said Ritter. Massive, heavy frames and bases, formerly cast and transported in one piece, can now be welded easily, quickly and economically, in the shop or on the job.

In conclusion, Ritter pointed out that the trend to electric welding is evidenced quite clearly in the shops of the Westinghouse company, where, in spite of the fact that the company has five iron foundries and one steel foundry, it has been found economical to fabricate more than 1,000 tons of welded steel a month.

Brazilian Creditors to Be Paid in 5 Per Cent Bonds

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The problem of the Brazilian foreign debt, services on which have been suspended since September, last year, was settled today with the decision to give North American, British, and French creditors 5 per cent bonds covering the amount guaranteed by the government. French creditors will be paid in gold, according to a verdict of the Hague tribunal

GOODYEAR TIRE CO. OFFICIAL TELLS OF NEW DEVELOPMENTS

The automobile industry, through the remarkable improvements on its products and the low prices for which it is selling them, is likely to lead the nation out of the depression, Robert S. Wilson, vice president and general sales manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, stated yesterday in connection with a talk he made before members of his sales staff holding a convention at the Congress hotel. Mr. Wilson also sees the Reconstruction corporation as likely of help.

R. S. WILSON. [Bachrach Photo.]

Mr. Wilson told of two new tire developments produced by his company. One is a nonskid tire that is noiseless and the other is a tire for small cars comparable to the doughnut tires used on landing gears of airplanes.

"Automobile manufacturers have produced cars that are practically noiseless," Mr. Wilson said. "They demanded that the tire engineers produce a product that also was noiseless and our engineers have solved the problem.

"Our business in November and December, 1931, in unit sales was ahead of that in 1930 due to the increase in renewal sales. At the present time inventories of manufacturers, dealers, and consumers are low and we look to the latter situation to increase business substantially this year."

Treasury Offering Four Times Oversubscribed

Secretary Mellon announced last night that the last offering of treasury bills was oversubscribed nearly four times. The offering was for $50,000,000 ninety-three day bills, dated Jan. 25, and maturing April 27. Total subscriptions were $191,581,000 and allotments were $50,937,000. The average price was 99.353, which is equivalent to an interest rate of 2.48 per cent on a bank discount basis.

Authorize N. Y. Central to Borrow $75,000,000

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission today authorized the New York Central railroad to borrow not to exceed $75,000,000 on short term promissory notes. The collateral for the loans would be all or part of a $100,000,000 refunding and improvement mortgage bond issue approved by the commission several weeks ago.

BRITISH BANKER CITES PERIL OF GOLD HOARDING

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(AP)—F. C. Goodenough, chairman of Barclay's bank, one of the "big five," warned the United States and France in an address at the bank's annual meeting today against the dangers of hoarding gold.

Many debtor nations are in actual default, Mr. Goodenough said, and others are meeting their engagements with great difficulty. These developments, he added, are due in a considerable degree to the unwillingness of certain principal creditor countries of the world to accept payment in goods, the only form in which the debts could now be paid.

The alternative method of making payment in gold, he said, has become virtually impossible because a very large part of the available stocks of monetary gold now are concentrated in the United States and France.

"In these two countries heavy surplus stocks of gold are deprived largely of their earning capacity and the budgets, in both cases, will close the year with substantial deficits. Unless some means can be found for the gold to be circulated more freely it would seem that gold will no longer be capable of being put to its normal use as a basis of currency and credit and as a measurement of world prices."

UNITED STATES PIPE & FOUNDRY SHOWS INCOME

The preliminary report of the United States Pipe and Foundry company for the year ended Dec. 31 showed a net income of $1,012,215 after depreciation, interest, federal taxes and other charges, or equal after preferred dividend requirements to 49c a share on 600,000 shares of common stock.

This compares with a net income in 1930 of $2,881,046, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $4.42 a share on the common stock.

Directors of the company declared four regular quarterly dividends of 50c a share each on the common stock for the current year, the first payment of which will be made April 20.

Subscribe $12,000,000 for Montreal Bond Issue

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 21.—Total subscriptions received up to noon today for city of Montreal's $15,226,000 bond issue yielding 6 per cent aggregated $12,000,000. The campaign was formally launched on Tuesday morning and 80 per cent of the objective has been raised within a space of two days and a half, with approximately $3,000,000 yet to be raised. The syndicate managers expressed their confident belief that the full requirements would be forthcoming within the next day or so and the books formally closed at the end of the week. The response of Canadian investors has come from all parts of the dominion, from points as far removed as Halifax and Vancouver, mainly represented by subscriptions from small investors.

Cotton Spinning Industry Runs at 79.3 Pct. Basis

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The cotton spinning industry was reported by the census bureau to have been operated during December at 79.3 per cent of capacity, on a single shift basis, compared with 85.8 per cent in November and 76.1 per cent in December, 1930.

Glass Bill to Revise Bank Laws Makes Bow in Senate

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The long awaited bill by Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] to revise the federal reserve and national banking laws was reported late this afternoon by the Glass subcommittee of the senate banking and currency committee and was introduced in the senate in advance of its inspection by the full committee tomorrow morning.

Outstanding in the bill is a proposal to create a liquidation corporation within the federal reserve system to care permanently for depositors in member banks which have failed, and temporarily for non-member banks in the same position.

For the first named purpose the reserve banks would subscribe one-fourth of their surplus and member banks would subscribe one-half of 1 per cent of their total net outstanding time and demand deposits. Experts familiar with the bill estimated that this would raise about $65,000,000 and 150 million dollars respectively. For the second purpose, the sum of 200 million dollars is proposed to be appropriated from the treasury.

Would Remove Mellon.

This plan is in contrast to the recently introduced administration bill which sets up a "depositors relief corporation," 100 million dollars of whose capital comes from the treasury, $50,000,000 from federal reserve bank surplus, and which can expand its assets by issuing securities to the amount of four times its capital.

The Glass bill would remove Secretary Mellon as a member of the federal reserve board.

Following the bill's introduction Senator Glass explained its more important provisions. He described the liquidating corporation to assist closed banks then went on:

"There would be a constant accretion to the revolving fund to be paid out of the earnings of the reserve banks in excess of the six per cent cumulative interest to which member banks are entitled. The earnings of the liquidation corporation are to be returned to the revolving corporation in the sum of 70 per cent of the earnings. The balance of 30 per cent will be paid as an additional discount to member banks.

Restricts Speculation.

"The subcommittee also proposed to eliminate the secretary of the treasury as an ex officio member of the reserve board and authorize the President to appoint six members, leaving the controller of the currency as ex officio member."

The bill severely restricts national or member banks in the use of federal reserve facilities for stock speculation purposes. It restrains member banks in making loans for a period of 15 days, on their direct promissory notes with United States bonds as security and from borrowing more than a certain percentage from the federal reserve banks when they are making loans to brokers for speculative purposes.

The bill makes practically the same prohibition against member banks making loans for others which want to loan money on call for stock speculative purposes.

The bill would authorize statewide branch banking by national banks with a capital of $1,000,000 or more in states where state branch banking are allowed.

Restriction on Loans.

"Instead of prohibiting member banks from having affiliates, we provided searching examination, some degree of supervision, and complete publicity of reports made through the examinations, and we prohibit the identity of stock certificates," Senator Glass explained. "We restrict loans by member banks to affiliates, to 10 per cent of the capital stock of the lending bank.

"Also we undertook some measure of control over chain or group banks and do not let the parent bank vote for directors of the federal reserve bank. Group banks are required to get rid of all stocks and bonds of affiliates."

The bill establishes a committee of 12, one from each reserve bank, who will meet and conduct open market operations.

Foreign Transactions.

And it requires federal reserve banks to get the approval of the federal reserve board in transactions with foreign banks and report them to the board in advance. This relates to renewals of loans as well as to new transactions.

The bill authorizes national banks to charge a rate of discount allowed by the law of the state in which they are located, or at the rate of 2 per cent above the federal reserve bank discount rate in the district where located. If no rate is fixed by law they may charge a rate not more than 7 per cent or 2 per cent above the reserve rate, whichever is most agreeable.

"The reason for this," said Senator Glass, "is that in periods of actual distress when credits and currency are in demand rediscounting is sometimes actually precluded except at a loss. In 35 states there is a legal limit of 6 per cent and when reserve banks in those states find it necessary to raise rates to 5 or 6 per cent it is impossible for them to get any accommodation from the reserve banks except at a loss.

"We provide that there may be formed groups of member banks in any federal reserve district in time of emergency. Such groups may agree to endorse severally and unitedly its notes secured by collateral not now eligible for rediscount at reserve banks. They may have access to rediscount facilities of reserve banks at a progressive rate of interest above the ordinary rate required."

WEBB CHAIRMAN OF TERMINAL NATIONAL BANK

Frank L. Webb was promoted from president to chairman of the Terminal National bank at the annual meeting yesterday. He succeeds William N. Jarnigan. Gaylord S. Morse was elected president and a director. The position of vice chairman, held by Stuart H. Otis, was eliminated but he remains a director. Sidney Gorham was elected a director and George B. Vilas retired as director.

Mr. Webb reported that 1,414 new commercial accounts with initial deposits of $1,783,834 were opened last year. The number of customers showed an increase of 13 per cent. Also 3,265 new savings accounts with initial deposits of $240,040 were opened, which reduced the shrinkage in total savings deposits as the result of unemployment. Net earnings after all charges were $4,973.

Garret Yonkers succeeded Hiram Vanderbilt as a director of the Wiersema State bank and Charles M. Redman was elected assistant cashier of the Boulevard Bridge bank.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 21.—The floating supply of common stock of the United States Steel corporation increased 11,482 shares in the last quarter of 1931, according to quarterly statistics on distribution announced today.

The increase interrupted a decline in the floating supply the last two years, which indicated absorption of the stock by long term holders out of margin accounts of speculative holders.

The rise in floating supply contrasts with the recent difficulty in borrowing the stock for delivery against short commitments. The borrowing premium on U. S. Steel common rose as high as one-half point a share this week, believed to have been a record. A considerable part of the short position in the stock is believed to represent "selling against the box" as a hedge to protect long term holdings.

U. S. Steel common held in brokers' names on Dec. 31, totaled 1,156,845 shares, or 13.29 per cent of the 8,703,250 shares outstanding. This compares with a floating supply of 1,145,363 shares at the end of September and with 1,407,177 at the end of 1930, when 16.31 per cent of the outstanding common was in brokers' names.

Investors at the end of the year held 7,546,457 shares, or 86.71 per cent of the total, against 7,557,716 on Sept. 30, and 7,230,253, or 83.69 per cent at the end of 1930.

Of the floating supply at the year end, 1,067,265 shares or 12.26 per cent were held in names of brokers in New York state, reflecting in part the position of Wall street in the stock.

INT'L HARVESTER MAKES CHANGES IN PERSONNEL

Several changes in the executive personnel of the International Harvester company were announced yesterday by President Alexander Legge following a meeting of the board of directors. A. E. McKinstry was made first vice president of the corporation, a position which has been vacant for two years. Seven were named to the newly created finance committee, which replaces the old executive committee.

George A. Ranney, formerly vice president and treasurer, succeeds Mr. McKinstry as vice president in charge of sales. Sydney G. McAllister was named vice president in charge of manufacturing to succeed Cyrus McCormick Jr., who continues a director. Mr. McAllister has been identified with the manufacturing activities of the company for several years.

C. F. Biggert, manager of the Wisconsin Steel company, a subsidiary, was elected vice president in charge of raw materials operations, including steel mills. Arnold B. Keller was named treasurer to succeed Mr. Ranney. He was formerly assistant treasurer.

Members of the new finance committee are Harold F. McCormick, chairman; Mr. Legge, Cyrus H. McCormick, Mr. Ranney, Mr. McKinstry, John P. Wilson, and Judson F. Smith.

Italy Will Maintain Lira Value, Says Rome Report

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Jan. 21.—With the banks today paying 20 lire for the dollar, a denial was issued today of any possibility of a change in the monetary policy or the stabilization "established four years ago at 19 lire to the dollar." The value of the lira was pegged at 19 for good, and there is nothing in the economic, financial, or monetary situation of Italy which would justify a change in this rate, it was said here in response to rumors from abroad that the stabilization of the lira might be lowered.

The treasury report for December, issued today, shows an increase of $2,050,000 in the paper circulation, which is now $714,750,000. Treasury receipts for December show a shrinkage, leaving a deficit of $14,350,000 expenses over receipts, and raising the total budget deficit for the fiscal year to date to $88,450,000.

Standard of Kansas Head Asserts Company Prospers

Neodesha, Kas., Jan. 21.—(AP)—A letter sent to stockholders of the Standard Oil Company of Kansas today by A. S. Hopkins, president, answering charges of inefficiency on the part of the management, said the company on Dec. 31 last, had $8,000,000 in outstanding stock and net assets of $8,415,851.

Hopkins' letter, accompanied by proxies, asserted the company had prospered, was in answer to an effort by C. B. Wrightsman of Tulsa, Okla., a director, and others to enlist shareholders in an attempt to oust the present officers at the annual meeting March 9.

Bradstreet's Food Index in First Rise Since Nov. 18

Bradstreet's weekly food index, which has been declining steadily for some weeks, showed its first gain since Nov. 18 in this week's figure. The index now stands at $1.84, an increase of 1.1 per cent over the previous week's figure of $1.82. Normally the seasonal variation for this week is an increase of only 0.1 per cent. Although it must be remembered that prices are now unprecedentedly low, this more than seasonal rise in the index, after its long decline, is regarded as encouraging. The index represents the total of the prices per pound of 31 foods in common demand.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 21.—Europe being a long way from Wall street, the news of the postponement of the Lausanne conference scheduled to open next Monday failed to create a ripple on the stock market's course today. Nobody seemed to think it made very much difference one way or the other.

Here is a sharply delineated suspicion among the ranks of the trader folk here that the current bickering over reparations and other international debts is about nine-tenths "stage play" any way, designed to soften the heart of your Uncle Samuel and that it is immaterial whether the old goat is trotted out now or later. It is to be feared that the street is becoming a bit hard boiled on the subject.

Has Problems at Home.

Any way, it has problems nearer home to wrestle with at the moment. The railroad wage conference, for instance, looming tax burdens on this and that market commodity, dividend meetings in high places, the stolid indifference of a public that refused to be drawn in until the market has asserted itself beyond the peradventure of a doubt.

Just now the wage conference seems to be the chief question before the house. For a couple of hours today the rail group clicked along in quite lively fashion, the leaders running up gains of 1 to 3 points when it looked like the latest kinks in the negotiations were about to be ironed out. After the turn of the day, however, word came that the conference had been adjourned for another day without a decision and the rails promptly fell back around their starting points, dragging numerous camp followers after them.

U. S. Steel Up and Down.

United States Steel essayed a hand at the task for a while on talk that the big corporation may not omit its dividend after all when the board meets for action next Tuesday. The price was raised more than a point to a new high for the movement of 46⅝, largely at the expense of the shorts, but the show of strength could not be sustained and the close found the issue back about where it was at the finish of last night's trading.

It is common knowledge that the corporation could pay its dividend as usual out of its large cash surplus, but the talk here of late has been that the directors had about decided to give the rate the go-by for a spell and leave the shareholders to toast their heels against more prosperous times. Of course, the preferred dividend will be paid, but here again nobody will be fooled, it being generally known that the corporation has been able to show anything earned on its preferred stock only by the sale of certain utility properties.

Evidence of Buying.

Evidence of some good buying appeared in American Tobacco and the street heard that there are excellent prospects that the corporation will order the usual extra dividend on both the common and B stock at the impending meeting of the directors. The common shares gained nearly 3 points on the day's turnover.

Possibly the recent action of the Liggett & Myers board in ordering the usual extra on its shares had something to do with the improved sentiment toward the American Tobacco issues, but evidently the rumor of the prospective dividend obtained wide credence.

New York traction stocks were given a whirl on the market's assumption that plans for a large city note issue to meet pressing financial obligations should mean higher fares.

The receivers earned through interest, salvage on attorneys' fees and other items $1,340,118, leaving a net cost of $139,095. The net cost is one-half of one per cent of the money collected.

Six of the 12 banks on which reports were released yesterday show an operating profit during receivership of $213,932. Twenty-four of the 59 banks on which reports have been made public show an operating profit during receivership of $297,262.

Despite the continued lifeless market for fresh pork which is feeling the full affects of the unseasonable weather, hogs turned active when a buying wave swept through the yards yesterday and prices recovered the additional slight losses recorded during the extremely dull opening rounds.

Selling toward the finish uncovered sales that were 5@10c above the previous session when a comparatively light supply was posted for today. The possibility of smaller receipts the remainder of the week was responsible for the turnabout and late shipping orders encouraged some to hold hogs off the market for today.

The extreme top and the general average for the whole day remained unchanged at $4.10 and $3.85. It is hinted that narrow outlet may force a good many loins into the freezer within the next few days, which automatically cuts 2c from their value. Only as a last resort will packers put pork through that process, and buyers admit that they would welcome lighter receipts of hogs, which might permit at least a mild recovery in the wholesale trade. Loins here yesterday sold at 6½@8c and some eastern points have drifted down to 7@9c.

March Offers $5.00.

March medium weight hogs were offered at $5.00 on the futures trade and attracted a few bids of $4.50 from some seemingly disinterested buyers before the close of trading. May mediums were bid $4.75 and some light weights for that month carried $5.00 bids.

Buyers ceased their price slashing tactics in the cattle market, but weakness at the recent sharp declines was exhibited in sales all the way up and down the line. Buying is converging in plainer grades, causing an undependable market for better grades which received the least support yesterday. Some of the long fed cattle going at $7.00@8.00 were comparable to kinds at $9.00@10.00 two weeks ago.

On late sessions no outstanding lots of cattle have been on the market, which makes it speculative as to what a load of top grades would bring. A load of choice 940 lb. yearling steers went to Armour at $9.75, the highest price paid yesterday, yet 1,200@1,400 lb cattle selling at $8.00 showed evidence of having been in the feed lots on feed for a long time and were strictly fat.

Differ on Values.

Buyers and sellers were far apart in their ideas as to the value of steers selling above the $7.00 line because of the uneveness and wide spread in prices. The short end of yesterday's arrivals were of the quality and finish to go above $7.00, while fully 75 per cent of the crop of steers went over the scales within a range of $5.00@6.50. The bulk for the day changed hands at $4.50@7.00, with an increasing volume of business at $4.00@4.25. Small lots of low priced stock helped to hold down initial costs of droves at $3.50@3.75.

The lamb market yesterday was unable to stand the pressure of larger receipts and dipped sharply. Most sales showed losses of 25@50c, with only a scattering of closely sorted natives and fed westerns eligible to the $6.00 line, which equals the lowest top since Dec. 22. Last Friday top lambs soared to $6.85 on a lively trade.

Board of Trade President Sees Business Improving

Peter B. Carey, the newly elected president of the Chicago Board of Trade, in a general talk to the Chicago cash grain handlers at the annual meeting of their association at the Standard club last night, said business conditions were improving and he looks for a continuation. The movement to get the government out of private business is making rapid developments and favorable results are expected. M. H. Vehon, president of the association, telling of the general cash grain situation, said that indications were for better conditions.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Local wheat traders are mostly bearish, but are not making any particular headway. A few of the big commission houses and local operators are bullish and buy on every weak spot, especially when the stock market shows strength, and sell on every bulge. An impression was that the farm board was selling, although it was understood in other quarters that a leading western operator who has been in Europe was the heaviest seller, using the farm board's commission house. There is nothing in the news situation to induce large speculative commitments on either side. The main factor for the time being is the reconstruction act, which is expected to be used by exporters in moving commodities out of the country.

A heavy trade was on in wheat privileges good for today, one house selling a line of 1,000,000 bu each way, there being several large blocks taken by pit traders.

An effort was made to strengthen corn prices on reports that drought was affecting the Argentine crop. Its influence, however, was only temporary and the market weakened after the shorts were in. Wet weather over the corn belt has created talk of lowering condition of corn in the cribs, and is said to be restricting offerings by country shippers.

Canadian wheat stocks on Jan. 15 were 194,460,370 bu, compared with 210,494,826 bu last year, as given by Sanford Evans. Deliveries of wheat to country elevators from Aug. 1 to Jan. 15 were 198,047,000 bu, against 251,259,000 bu a year ago.

Cuba, for years an importer of corn, is now an exporter. It has increased its production the last few years. The first shipment for a number of years was effected on Dec. 4, last, and consisted of 8,000 bu of shelled corn to go to Porto Rico.

Lose Fight on Lake Cargo Coal Rates

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Another decision in the lake cargo coal cases which have been before the interstate commerce commission off and on for twenty years today rejected the plea of western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio coal operators and gave a victory to those in the south.

The commission refused to widen the difference between freight rates from the Ohio-Pennsylvania territory to Lake Erie ports and those charged on coal from southern fields for transshipment across the lakes.

With Commissioners Eastman and McManamy dissenting, the commission held in a 9 to 2 decision that whatever advantage southern mines had in favorable railroad operating conditions was overcome by better balanced traffic in the northern fields.

The right of railroad managements to some latitude in fixing rates and the interest of the consumer in rate making was upheld as the commission dismissed the complaint.

At present there is an arbitrary charge of 35 cents per ton above the Pennsylvania and Ohio rates on lake cargo coal from West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, and eastern Kentucky and Tennessee to Lake Erie ports. The northern operators contend this spread is not enough and asked the commission for a differential of at least 45 cents a ton.

Estimate Canadian Field Crops at $425,065,100

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Canadian field crops in 1931 had an estimated value of $425,065,100 as compared with $662,040,900 in 1930, the dominion bureau of statistics reported today. The report is the final estimate of the area, yield and value of all crops, in the dominion for the last crop season. The wheat crop of Canada in 1931 was estimated at 304,144,000 bushels compared with a revised figure of 420,673,000 bushels for the crop of the previous year.

Chicago Wheat Traders Hear About Argentina

The United States has had business relations with Argentina for the last 130 years, said Eduardo Gruning Rosas, consul of the Argentine at the Grain Market Analysts club dinner at the Hamilton club last night.

The outlook for the Argentine crop is better than the year 1931 and with commodity prices on a higher basis, the balance of the trade should be more favorable than for 1931, he asserted.

WOOL.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The attendance was good at the wool auction today. There was an active demand at current rates by the trade at the continent. Greasy merinos were frequently bought in due to the sellers' high limits. Of the 9,056 bales offered 7,996 were sold.

WHEAT MARKET ERRATIC; CLOSE SHOWS DECLINES

Hear Foreign Demand May Turn Upward.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat traders were somewhat bewildered yesterday by the erratic action of the market. May wheat sold between 59¾c and 60⅞c and practically touched the extreme twice during the course of the day and finally finished only a fraction above the inside figure with net losses of ⅛@¼c.

The wheat market displayed a strong undertone early and advanced ⅞c over the finish on Wednesday, due to buying by houses with stock market connections, only to drop 1⅛c from the high when a local professional took the selling side, the trade believing this represented the liquidation of a long line. However, under 60c for May, commission houses absorbed the offerings and a rally to around the high point of the day followed. This in turn was followed by another recession and an easy close. March was 57¾c; May, 59⅞c, and July 59¼ to 59⅝c at the last.

Liverpool Wheat Weakens.

Expectations that the Reconstruction Finance corporation bill will become a law before the end of the week and would have considerable influence in strengthening commodity prices was responsible for some buying early. Trade, however, is not broad enough at the present time to absorb aggressive selling, and the reaction from the high point was easily attained. Firmness in the stock market also attracted some attention.

Liverpool continues to practically ignore upturns in Chicago and closed ⅛c per bu lower on futures, with May closing at 55¾c, or 4⅝c under the same future in the local market. The difference is regarded as abnormal, as the United States, it is figured, has well over 300,000,000 bu available for export between now and July 1.

There was talk during the day of a better foreign demand for North American wheat, but the day's business in all positions was finally estimated at only 300,000 to 400,000 bu. Winnipeg reported seaboard and continental buying of futures early, but the market weakened later and closed ⅞@1⅛c lower, with May at 63⅛c despite an easing in the exchange rate. The latter was quoted at 14¼ per cent discount. Buenos Aires finished ¼c lower.

Argentine Corn Damaged.

Drought and hot weather are reported in cables as damaging the new corn crop in western and central Buenos Aires, one of the largest producing areas in Argentina, and the Buenos Aires market closed ⅝@¾c higher yesterday as the result of the deterioration. The outlook for a smaller yield in that country, the largest of any of the leading exporters, had but little effect on the local market.

Trade in corn futures was mainly of a local character, with a small advance early in sympathy with wheat and a decline later, the close being ⅛@⅜c lower. March finished at 39⅛c; May, 41⅜c, and July 43c. The country sold 26,000 bu cash corn to arrive.

Oats developed independent strength due to scattered buying, final trades being ⅛@¼c higher, with May at 26¼c and July 25⅝c. Rye was ⅛@¼c lower, May being 47⅜c and July 47¾c. Trade was largely of a local character.

BUTTER AT RECORD LOW

Lowest price at which storage butter ever has sold on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange was recorded yesterday, the January delivery selling at 22¾c. Closing prices showed net losses of ⅛@¾c for the day. Egg futures were unchanged to ⅛c higher. Butter started downward early, production news bringing in liquidation and new selling, the centralizers' report showing an increase in the make of 16 per cent compared with last year. February butter fell to the previous record low which that delivery made a year ago at 22½c. Storage news continued to contribute weakness. While egg storage news was bearish again, the fact that fresh receipts have been falling off encouraged support, although January lost an early advance at the close. Sales: butter, 114 cars, eggs, 25 cars. Deliveries: butter, 1 car; eggs, 14 cars; potatoes, 1 car round whites. Prices follow:

Un. Founders Shows Loss of $41,435,620

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—United Founders corporation, large investment holding company, today reported consolidated net earnings of $1,172,277 for the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 1931. This contrasts with net income of $7,047,132 for the previous fiscal year.

The company had net losses of $41,435,620 in the period which were charged to reserves. This total included loss of $14,384,761 sustained through its acquisition last July of Investment Trust Associates, Inc., and the liquidation of that trust.

Asset Value $2.24 a Share.

The asset value of United Founders stock on Nov. 30 was $2.24 a share, compared with $5.80 on May 31 and $8.96 on Nov. 30, 1930. By including holdings in subsidiary and affiliated companies not consolidated in the report, with the exception of U. S. Electric Power corporation, the asset value would be increased by 86 cents a share. The company's interest in the undistributed earnings of U. S. Electric Power and Public Utility Holding corporation, which it controls, amounted to about 12 cents a share additional on the United Founders stock.

Total resources, as shown in the balance sheet, were $285,919,319, compared with assets of $332,635,723 on Nov. 30, 1930. Bank loans on the date of the report were $3,000,000, but these have since been reduced to $2,500,000.

American Founders Report.

American Founders corporation, a subsidiary, had net earnings of $1,136,189 during the period against $8,154,511 in the preceding year. It charged to reserves net losses of $17,162,145, which were included in the consolidated losses of United Founders.

Asset value of American Founders common stock on Nov. 30 was $1.04 a share, compared with $3.59 on May 31 last, and $5.55 on Nov. 30, 1930.

Changes in the portfolios of the trusts showed that foreign holdings had been reduced by $15,000,000, and domestic investments increased. The largest cut was in Germany holdings, but the trusts have withdrawn from several other countries in which they formerly had investments. Neither has written down capital in order to charge depreciation against surplus.

Cuba Demands Promise of Java Sugar Curtailment

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Jan. 21.—Cuba tonight cabled Java demanding a definite promise to curtail the 1932 production of sugar stating that Cuba must have the exact figures not later than Jan. 31. Cuba is also sending memorandums to all the signatories of the Brussels pact.

The National Sgcar Exporting corporation, the Institute of Planters, and the Mill Owners' associations have flatly rejected Thomas L. Chadbourne's demand that Cuba curtail her 1932 sugar crop to 2,180,000 tons whether or not Java and the other nations curtail their production of sugar.

Viriato Gutierrez, co-author of the Brussels pact said: "Should Java refuse to adhere to the figure specified by the Brussels pact Cuba could no longer consider itself affected by the treaty."

Why pay more than Household's low rate?
The nationally known Household Loan Plan offers cash loans of $50 to $300 to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.
Household's rate on all loans above $100 is almost one-third lower than the maximum permitted by the small loan law. We voluntarily established this low rate in 1928 and our customers have benefited ever since. This rate remains the same until the loan is paid off. It does not increase as the unpaid balance decreases.
FOR EXAMPLE:
The average monthly cost of a $200 loan repaid in 20 equal monthly payments is $2.53. This is the lowest cost in Chicago.
Get the Cost in DOLLARS Before You Borrow.
